"What Visit of the U-53 Portends to America"

—As Analyzed by Rear Admiral Fiske—

Famous American Naval Authority Says It at Once Emphasizes Our Present Lack of Preparedness and Warns Us to Hasten to Put Ourself in Such Readiness That No Nation, Save England, Can Regard Our Equipment for National Defense as Inferior and Will Dare Attack Us Because of Our Unpreparedness.

If One U-Boat Can Come, a Whole Fleet of Them Could Also Make the Voyage and Strike Before We Would Be Aware of Their Proximity—Battleships Also Could Approach Us Without Our Knowing It.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 14.

Rear-Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, U. S. N., has given to the Post-Dispatch the following authorized interview, analyzing the significance to the United States of the raids on allied commerce by the German submarine U-53 off the American Atlantic Coast:

"The recent dramatic exploits of the U-53, which have created so much disturbance in our commerce that one might almost imagine that an actual blockade threatened the American ports, is one of the most fortunate things that could have happened to this country, because it shows to the people more clearly than mere argument, history or statistical statements could possibly do, the possibilities that follow unpreparedness.

"Presumably the national characteristic instinct for action instead of words, which has created the most perfect fighting machine that the world has ever seen, inspired the U-53 to enter Newport harbor without any preliminary announcement, to leave it with similar taciturnity—and immediately sink six ships in 24 hours.

"How many submarines of the same remarkable type as the U-53 Germany has, we do not know, but we have every reason to believe that she has a great many, efficiently built, and efficiently handled. Therefore, this recent demonstration of abilities of the new German submersible cruisers is exceedingly important. How important it is, we do not know yet.

"It depends entirely upon how widely it wakes the American people up to a comprehension of demonstrable facts.

Significant Drop in Stocks.

"THAT this country of 100,000,000 people should find themselves in such a condition of unpreparedness is unfortunate; that it may be disastrous in the end is a possibility foreshadowed by many facts in history, since similar conditions have been disastrous to many nations in the past. In fact, all the nations in the past that have been great and then fallen from greatness have fallen because they have permitted themselves to lapse into a condition of unpreparedness, of which some warlike nation has taken advantage.

"The U-53 does not of herself constitute a great danger to the United States; but the condition of national defenselessness which her startling appearance off Newport illuminated, and which the instantaneous drop in stocks confessed, constitutes a national danger of the most formidable kind.

"If one submarine could come across, a fleet could do the same; that is, a war fleet of battleships, cruisers, and the rest, which we should be compelled with our present active fleet to meet. The chief lesson which the U-53 has so clearly demonstrated, is the fact that we should receive no warning of our danger; for if we ever get into war with a real military European country we shall find that it will be almost as difficult to get warning of the coming of their fleet as it would have been to discover the approach of the U-53. The chief reason for this is that we have no scout ships or battle cruisers with which to find an enemy fleet.

"In case of war it is more than probable that we should hear merely that a large fleet had sailed from Europe, destination unknown. We might hear no more of it until one night it appears in the vicinity of New York, the Chesapeake, the Carribean sea or the Panama Canal.

"The U-53 has shown us how accessible our shores are to Europe; the pacificists to the contrary notwithstanding.

"Long ago the probability of some such demonstration as the U-53 has given us was clear. In fact, it became my duty at one time to point out the dangers into which the present war would plunge the United States, and I did so in my official letter to the Secretary of the Navy, dated Nov. 9, 1914, which reported also that the navy was unprepared for war.

"The clearest consequence of our national policy of unpreparedness is to submit us to the menace of blockade. Blockade can be established without an actual state of war, without even a declaration of war. It has often been used by nations to bring other nations to terms; it is an act just short of war.

Blockade as Weapon Against Us.

"MANY people think a foreign nation cannot harm us unless it actually invades our soil. They do not realize that every great nation of today is like a great business firm, that blockade of its coast would stop a very large proportion of its business transactions, and that it would harm its commercial prosperity to a degree that would depend on how greatly the nation was a manufacturing and exporting nation. Any blow to any of these great national business organizations would produce an effect wherever the mail and telegraph go.

"The organizations dealing with foreign commerce in every great nation are so excellent and so precise that the business system by which any nation holds its international trade is like a machine. In fact, it is a machine, with all the faults of a machine. One of the chief faults of a machine is the serious disturbance that may be produced by a cause seemingly trivial. Such is the case with the machine which the commerce of every great nation comprises. Every-day experience confirms this. Order reigns so long as the steamers come and go with regularity, so long as the money comes in at the proper intervals, and is distributed where it ought to go, and so long as the people continue to live their habitual lives.

"Consider, however, what would happen if the coming and going of all the steamers were suddenly stopped by a blockade. It may or it may not be true that in a great country like the United States no foreign trade is really necessary. It may be true that the people of the United States would be just as happy if they had no foreign trade, even if they were not so rich. But the United States has a foreign trade; and in case of blockade this would be stopped with a jerk, and there would follow a chaotic condition which cannot be described, because chaos cannot be described. Hundreds of thousands of people would be thrown out of employment, and the whole rapidly moving and enormous mass of American daily life would receive a knockout blow.

"It is true that wars have happened in the past in which there has been a blockade of our coast more or less complete, and no extraordinary suffering has been occasioned; but in all cases peace was declared before the suffering produced had become very acute. Furthermore, the complicated conditions of trade which now exist never existed before. We were not so dependent then as now on the artificial accessories of living.

Our Commerce Our Life Blood.

"A BLOCKADE of any of our great Eastern ports would entail many indirect disasters. The sudden stoppage of our sea trade, which, of course, includes our coast trade, by even a partial blockade of our ports, would practically change all the conditions under which we now live. Hardly a single organization in the country would fail to be affected by it. This condition would last as long as the blockade lasted, and would create a disorder that could only be corrected by the raising of the blockade.

"It is easy to see, therefore, that the blockading of our principal ports would be a disaster inferior to the disaster of actual invasion only.

"Even the disaster of the total destruction of our fleet by an enemy fleet would only have the direct result that the people of the country would have fewer ships to support and fewer men to pay. The loss of the fleet and the men would not be per se any immediate loss whatever to the country, but rather a gain. The loss of the fleet, however, would make it possible for the enemy fleet to blockade our ports later and thus bring about the horrors of which we have spoken.

"The lesson of the U-53, while not establishing the possibility of what may be called an "air-tight blockade" of our long coast at the moment, indicates the possibility of a partial blockade in the future, a blockade that would make it exceedingly risky for vessels to break it; such a blockade as was maintained during the greater part of the Civil War by the Northern States against the Southern States.

"The blockade would be more distressing to us, however, than it was to the Southern States, or to any agricultural country 50 years ago, for two very important reasons:

"1. The progress of modern engineering has made navies much more powerful.

"2: The great countries now are much more vulnerable to blockade, because they hold so many millions of people dependent upon manufacturing industries, who are forced to live an artificial life in cities.

"The United States may not depend for its daily bread upon the regular coming of wheat from over the seas; but millions of its people do depend, directly and indirectly, upon the money earned from the export of manufactured things. A country becomes dependent upon outside commerce through habits and modes of life, just as a man does upon outside air. Therefore, a people suddenly deprived of a vigorous outside commerce would be commercially smothered.

Our Long Coast an Added Peril.

"TO give a rough idea of the possible effects of a blockade on our coasts, consider the fact that our exports last year were valued at more than $2,000,000,000, which means that goods to this amount were sold and paid for either in money or its equivalent, most of it ultimately as wages for labor.

"No blockade, of course, could stop all this, but it seems probable that it could stop half of it, after our fleet was destroyed by the enemy. It would seem, therefore, that the primary use for our navy will probably be to prevent blockade. It must be understood that a blockade does not require a declaration of war, or entail the costly operations of invasion. A blockade, though slower in its effects than actual invasion, is practically as efficacious in the end, and it is much less expensive. It is cheaper and easier.

"The fact that the coast of the United States is so large is an argument often used that it would be impossible to blockade it. It is not at all necessary, however, to blockade the entire coast of the United States to create a condition of distress such as has just been pointed out. It would suffice to blockade, Boston, New York, the Delaware, the Chesapeake and the Gulf, say, with 40 ships. The difficulties and risks of running such a blockade, in defiance of the present increased power and accuracy of modern gunnery, the searchlights, the wireless telegraph and the aeroplane, would be numerous and great, and cause high insurance rates.

"It may be objected that this blockading of even a defenseless coast would cost the blockading country a great deal of money, because of the loss of trade with that country. Of course; but the war expenses are to be expected, and the blockade would be far more expensive to the blockaded country, which would be compelled to yield in the end, not only because of the blockade itself, but because of the pressure of neutral countries. Of course, the longer we held out, the greater the indemnity we should have to pay. The expense of blockading, therefore, would be merely a profitable investment for the blockader.

"It is true, of course, that actual invasion of a country from the sea would be a greater disaster than blockade, and danger from invasion has been the reason given by Great Britain for the building of her own great navy; and it is also true that in the minds of many people the primary reason for a navy has been for defense against invasion.

Navy Need to Protect Trade Routes.

"BUT why should an enemy take the trouble to invade the United States when it would be so much easier and cheaper to establish a blockade of our coast? A blockade would in the end accomplish everything that an enemy could desire, especially if it were enlivened by the occasional dropping of 1000-pound shells into Wall street and the Brooklyn navy yard.

"One of the suggestions which the incident of the U-53 has presented to us, is the many uses to which a navy can be put. It can be put, like any other weapon, to any use which circumstances indicate. For instance, the Northerners in the Civil War used the navy not to prevent blockade, but to make blockade; the Japanese used the navy to

NOTES ON GERMANY AS IT IS TODAY,

Things Seen and Heard During a Two Months' Sojourn in Berlin—The Truth About the Food Situation—One Rarely Hears a Laugh Among This Terribly Serious People—Hatred of Americans Depressing to Visitors From United States—All the Men Gone but the Rejected Ones, and Women Are "Manning" Nearly Every Occupation—Everybody Longs for Peace, but They Do Not Falter in Determination to Fight Until It Comes With Honor.

HERBERT BAYARD SWOPE, a staff correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and the New York World, has been in Germany two months. He returned to this country Oct. 10 on the Frederick VIII in company with Ambassador Gerard. In a notable wireless dispatch from the Frederick VIII, Mr. Swope said:

"For two months I have been in close touch with the situation in Germany and was fortunate enough to have opened to me, in many cases, the same sources of information on which Mr. Gerard is depending for the reports he is making, and to my use of which he does not object."

Mr. Swope, preliminary to a series of articles on Germany, has made a collection of notes which tell just what every one in this country wants to know regarding conditions in Germany today.

APART from the mental reaction one undergoes in Germany, the most striking impression is made by the nearly total absence of young men from its streets and fields. The youth of the country are all at war; only the "Zurueckgestellt" remain (those who have been rejected), and they for the most part are those physically incapacitated for military service.

Everywhere one turns one sees women doing the work of men. "Women to the front" is the industrial cry in Germany today and the women are responding with the same great alacrity that the men are showing in their military duties. I saw women conductors, women "cabbies," women teamsters, women chauffeurs, women ditch diggers, women mail carriers, women messengers, women bakers, women plumbers, women butchers, women telegraph linemen, women "motormen," women plowers, women munition workers, women gardeners, women electricians—women everything. In fact, it is the boast of Germany today that there is not one field of effort, formerly consecrated to man that has not been entered by women. How this scheme of labor will be readjusted when the soldiers are released again to their commercial labors, is a serious problem.

The cab and delivery horses form one of the pathetic sights to be seen in the cities of Germany today. They are the off-scouring and refuse of all horsedom—poor, thin, dispirited, emaciated, hobby-horses that can scarcely lift the weight of their own heads, which usually droop in proximity to the streets as if looking for the grain they never get. Fodder is a scarce commodity in Germany today because much of it that formerly went to horse and cattle feeding is now being employed for human consumption.

One striking thing is that almost all the horses you see are white or flea-bitten gray. All the other colors are used for army work. The whites are not—their color is too conspicuous. But the demand for horses has been so great that even the whites are used when they are young, being stained dark. The horses left for civilian purposes are the old ones. Most of those you find attached to the ancient droschkes on Unter den Linden in Berlin look as if they were cousins to the eohippus that Noah took with him in the ark.

The ages of the drivers correspond to the antiquity of their steeds. Most of them are old gray beards, but by way of paradox, their girths are as great as those of their horses are small.

Taxicabs All Ramshackle Vehicles.

IN the picture with the horses belong the taxicabs that Berlin and every German city are using. They are old ramshackle affairs that wheeze and groan and threaten to burst apart at the first unkind word. All the good cabs, in common with all the good private automobiles, have been commandeered for military purposes It is plain to see the reasons for not commandeering those which are running on the streets.

Four-fifths of the taxis are electrified, which enable them to proceed at a slow, dignified pace for short stretches. The few internal combustion motors left use benzol in place of gasoline, which is sharply restricted to official need—military, industrial and those of high personages. Benzol is a coal-tar product first developed in Germany, and which Edison was the first to make in this country.

Almost all the machines left in Germany use solid tires of composite rubber, but these are now rapidly disappearing and in their place are the old-fashioned steel tires and the new patent spring wheels, which consist of one wheel within another, the rims separated by springs, but the passengers using them call them by another name, especially when they strike a "thank-you-ma'am" or a car track.

All cab or taxi rates have been increased 50 per cent, with 30 pfennigs (nominally 7 cents) added as an extra fare.

The chauffeurs and cabbies are the most independent lot in all Germany. You have to literally beg them to accept you as a fare and the begging is all in vain if you have to travel any considerable distance. They prefer the short hauls, which gives them the greatest number of extra fees.

One Rarely Hears a Laugh in Germany.

THE great mental change in Germany in the last two years from a certainty of victory to a fear of defeat has had its reflex on the spirit of the population. It is a rare thing to hear a laugh in Germany, and I visited many theaters without hearing any applause. Night life has disappeared. The supper restaurants are morgue-like in their lack of cheer. and none serves more than two or three parties at a time.

The beer restaurants do better. It is an insult to Gambrinus to call the liquor that they serve in Germany "beer." It is really a pale, weak, emaciated, watery substance that has much the same resemblance to actual beer that water has when drunk from a recently emptied beer glass.

This is due to the heavy reduction in grain allowances made to the breweries, but with the chemical readiness the Germans are showing, they have invented some form of "ersatz," which translated means a substitute. In Germany today they view all "erstaz" for almost everything except men.

They have substitutes for coffee, sugar, beer, milk, butter, eggs used for cooking and condiments, and they believe they are well on their way to have a perfect substitute for rubber.

The night life of Berlin, that once burned so fiercely bright as to make it the talk of the world—not for its gayety, but for its lavishness; not for its spontaneity, but for its forcedness—has been entirely wiped out. The street women are still there, but in heavily reduced quantities. They have all been put to work.

Such life as is still to be found is grim and lacking in merriment. It is a rare thing for music to be found in restaurants.

Theaters are open, but the Germans take their pleasures seriously. They go to a comedy as they would to an execution. It is their duty, they feel, to obtain recreation.

Evening Clothes Direct Suspicion at Wearer

A MAN or woman wearing evening clothes in any of the German cities is a rare object and one of suspicion. It is considered an evidence of gayety, and gayety is taboo. The women all wear dark clothes and their evening frocks are rarely more than slightly decolette.

Dancing is an unheard-of pastime in Germany. It is actually forbidden, both in public and in private, and the Germans, who are always good citizens, never break the rule, even in the privacy of their homes.

But while all the lighter things of life have been eschewed, the more serious labors have been taken up with splendid spirit. Revisiting Germany after two years, I was again impressed by the depth and devotion of the patriotism in every man, woman and child, who, win or lose survive or perish, were consecrating their every thought and effort to the fatherland.

Coinciding with the depth of their patriotism is the resentment almost all the Germans feel toward America and things American. It is a real, living, all-pervading hate—something tangible and sensate—you can feel it weigh you down. Hatred knows no law of reason, and so the Germans cannot and do not attempt to justify their attitude toward America. All their own shortcomings are attributed to this country; all their misfortunes are laid at our door, for they say that America prevented Germany from ending the war—with magnificent disregard of the battle of the Marne.

America's responsibility, they say, is due to the munitions and to our attitude on the submarine question, and that is why the greater part of Germany today is clamoring for a return to the "ruecksichtslose" (ruthless) U-boat warfare.

A distinguished traveler once wrote that politeness is a recently acquired art in Germany. That this is true, according to our canons, is shown by the fact that the men lift their hats and bow low to each other, but rarely uncover to the women.

Few Soldiers Seen on Streets.

THERE are fewer soldiers to be seen on the streets than one would expect. This is due to the fact that most of the military are in the field. Those you do see in the city are for the most part convalescents, and seven out of every 10 show wounds.

The uniforms of the German soldiers, once a subject of boast for their neatness and standardization, are now a pretty sorry exhibition. Wool is scarce, so all sorts of cotton combinations are used. Corduroys and jeans in varied colors are being made up for army use.

To save cloth the coats of both officers and men are cut almost waist high, and as all the coats are made with little tails behind, the effect is rather striking.

But in spite of the leather shortage the German soldier still clings to his boots. The bulk of German soldiery is recruited from the agricultural class, which has been accustomed to boots, and does not willingly use other footwear

It is an uncommon thing to see a soldier who has not one or more service decorations. There are probably 400,000 iron crosses, second class worn in Germany today—in fact, the enormou demand has caused the silver with which th crosses are rimmed to go sky high in price.

In spite of the heavy losses, there is but little mourning to be seen on the streets. In my visit to France and Belgium I saw more mourning being worn by the women in a week than I saw in Germany in two months. The absence of the death symbols is due to the wish of the Kaiser, expressed at the beginning of the war.

"Speak Easies" Sell Meats Surreptitiously.

ONE of the curious things to be met with in Berlin and some of the other large cities are "speak easies," where you get meat on meatless days. It is almost as hard getting into them as trying to get into a "blind tiger" to get a drink in some American communities.

Meat is permitted only on five days in Germany, and only for one meal on each of these days. The "speak-easies" will sell you meat with your meals at any time. It is given some fancy name to mislead the police in case of a raid. The names mislead the diners, too, though perhaps that is just as well, because it is feared that if the diners knew what they were really eating, they would not eat.

There is a suspicious absence of little dogs in Germany these days.

Fish is the great staple of the German diet today, and of the fish, the king is the tuna. I had tuna fish disguised as roast beef, hamburger steak, veal chops, filets and all sorts of other meats, and it was prepared with such skill and concealed with such ingenuous sauces that I had difficulty in recognizing it as "horse mackerel." It took the Germans to discover the real value of the tuna, and that is one article that will remain upon their menus in the days to come.

The most delicate gifts one can make to one's friends in Germany today consist of meat, butter, eggs and soap. To give up any of these things is like submitting to blood transfusion. On Oct. 1 the empire went on an egg-a-week-per-person basis. This is to allow for the feminine vagaries of the hens and is figured out as the irreducible minimum of the egg production per week. The actual supply is really eight or 10 times as large as the allowance, but with true German precaution the food dictatorship is safeguarding the supply in the event that the hens go on an egg strike.

Hard to Enter Germany, Harder to Depart

THERE is only one thing in Germany that is as hard as getting into that country—and that is getting out. Sixty-five per cent of would-be travelers to Germany were refused ad-

Germans Surprised British by Using Fog Bombs in Battle of Skaggerak

ONE of the surprises to which the German navy treated the English fleet at the battle of Skaggerak was the use of smoke or fog bombs. These were shells that the Germans threw overboard which exploded upon striking the water and created a dense, opaque white cloud of enormous aid to the smoke screen made by the torpedo boats that hid the operations of the main fleet. Commander Walter Gherardi, the eminent American naval attache in Berlin, to whom I talked about this after I had been told of the invention in Hamburg, said that its use was something new in naval warfare, and had proved highly effective. — HERBERT BAYARD SWOPE.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Labor as a "Commodity."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Now comes the Chicago Herald to tell us that "economically, labor is a commodity." Will you please permit this economic contrast:

A barrel of flour stands ready at all times to be used in any manner, shape or form by the owner, subject entirely to the owner's freedom of choice; the good wife can transform it at will into wholesome food for the household; it will bring the husband to a pleasant mood; a barrel of flour is a commodity.

Now, picture the pleasant husband as he sallies forth to peddle his erstwhile commodity; his purpose is to replenish the flour barrel; he seeks out another man, principal or agent, who will place a price on his services, or labor, or accept his services at any price. This principal or agent is the object of his quest. It depends on the final decision of this principal or agent as to whether his services shall add to the sum total of human happiness. He now stands in exactly the same relation to the principal or agent as does the barrel of flour to the good wife. He has no freedom of choice.

If you regard labor as something separate and distinct from the laborer, belonging wholly to another, for a price, to be used as he, the other, wills, then labor is indeed a commodity for the other fellow; but if you regard labor as inherent in the laborer, you cannot call labor a commodity until you prove conclusively that the laborer can exercise full freedom of choice in tendering his services. The owner of a commodity can by right use that commodity as he wills.

I never heard of a laborer writing law. There seems to be a determination on the part of our illustrious President and his able aids to give him something approximating a "square deal."

A Prohibition Argument.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In answer to "Fair Play," in Saturday's edition he certainly has permission to ask why the people of St. Louis are not making a stronger fight against prohibition. It is because the opponents of resubmission know they are wrong and cannot enter into the contest with any energy.

If, in order to secure prosperity, we must encourage vice, depravity, poverty and degradation, let us by all means try some other brand of so-called prosperity. Money spent for liquor is irretrievably lost, no possible good accomplished and in the majority of cases an actual detriment. We flatly contradict the statement that prohibition would mean ruination for this or any other city. The fact is that eventually it would bring the very highest form of prosperity.

The subject really will not admit of argument. Everyone knows that the liquor traffic is bad all the way through and its results appallingly destructive. Kansas is a fair illustration of the beneficial results of sobriety. It is one of only two states in the Union that is entirely free from any State debt. The per capita amount of money ranks third of all the states, and it is well known that Kansas has more automobiles in proportion to its inhabitants than any other state in the Union. I am giving you facts, and "Fair Play" can be assured that the liquor interests will get fair play all right.

Socialist View of Food Exports.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In the Democratic campaign book the boast is made that the food exports last year $600,000,000 more than they were under the last year of Mr. Taft's administration. That, I think, is speaking far better in Mr. Taft's favor than in Mr. Wilson's, although I have no patience with either, as everyone who studies all sides of the political question knows that the European war and a few Wall street robbers are responsible for the present conditions of things in this country and would be the same if Mr. Taft was President instead of Wilson. But our prosperity? President and his party should be ashamed to boast of permitting millions and millions of pounds of foodstuffs to leave our shores for the benefit of a few legalized millionaire robbers, while food prices are still soaring skyward and forcing millions of men, women and children to the brink of starvation whose meager wages do not permit them to buy even the barest necessities to life or mid. And yet they have the gall to shout "America first."

Ninety millions of us poor devils are being systematically skinned by a small gang of buccaneers who want the earth and care nothing for what may happen to anyone but themselves, and both the Democratic and Republican parties help them to continue their game.

Under Socialism it would be "America first" in fact as well as in name, and not a dollar's worth of food or necessities to life would be permitted to leave our shores so long as there was in this whole land a hungry man, woman or child.

J. F. ARLITZ.

A MISSOURI MARK HANNA.

The Republican campaign text book saves us the trouble of characterizing Walter S. Dickey, the Republican candidate for Senator Reed's seat in the United States Senate. It classifies him with the late Mark Hanna of slush fund fame in the following apt and pithy paragraph:

> Those who knew Senator Mark Hanna in the days of his dominance believe that Mr. Dickey has many of that great political chieftain's masterful characteristics as a political organizer, and will likewise demonstrate, in the Senate, his splendid capacity for legislative leadership.

The country suffered so much from Senator Hanna's "masterful characteristics as a political organizer," which resulted in the degradation of national politics to a game of frying the fat and dividing the spoils, that we hardly think the people of Missouri want to commission another of his like—a Missouri Mark Hanna. The system by which the masters of finance and industry corrupted the electorate and bought elections to be richly repaid afterwards by the loot of special privilege was largely a creation of Senator Hanna. The country has just rid itself of the system and its lobby, its loot and its campaign slush funds. We don't want it revived.

The dollar mark was on everything political that Senator Hanna did. Like the Senator, Mr. Dickey has the dollars and is willing to spend them in politics. In the sketch of him printed in today's Sunday Post-Dispatch we find that he is not averse to making money by forming combinations to obtain monopolitic and oppressive franchises in his home city. He has profited by the sale of franchise values which belonged to his city.

Mr. Dickey has been continuously identified with two organizations, one local and the other national, which are bitterly antagonistic to organized labor. He was a member of the Manufacturers Association which maintained a rotten lobby at Washington.

Nothing in his record suggests the advisability of substituting him for Senator Reed who has a fine clean record of usefulness in the Senate. Senator Reed has proved in the Senate his capacity, industry and devotion to public service. Much of the criticism he received in his early labors his complete record shows to have been undeserved and most of it was earned by his independence—a most desirable quality in public men, particularly in members of Congress. His contributions to the Wilson administration's record of achievements have been notable and valuable.

Senator Reed is just entering upon his period of greatest usefulness. He has the experience of one term. It is a mistake to reject a faithful and capable Senator. It would be a monstrous blunder to exchange him for a successor who would attempt to undo the best things that have been done for the people and who in the event of Mr. Wilson's election would try to block his progressive program.

FACTS AND OPINIONS.

"An opinion," says Mr. Wilson, "ought always to have a profound respect for a fact." But he need not expect that Mr. Hughes' opinion is going to show any servile deference for a fact. It may not have a contempt for a fact, but it coldly refuses to recognize one.

Is it possible that a Hughes' opinion does not know a fact when it sees it?

SWAPPING HORSES IN MIDSTREAM.

The persistency of the U-53 in attempting to sink the Stephano by shell fire alone was significant. The submersible's limited supply of torpedoes will be renewed with great difficulty. No plan for replenishing them, however elaborate, is dependable 3000 miles from German home waters. We may, accordingly, expect that the new phase of fighting which sees the vicinity of peaceful Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket transformed into a war zone during the pendency of a national election will be of short duration.

However, should it prove of long duration and vastly increase our cause for anxiety it may also be expected to increase the strength of a conviction that will guide Americans in incomputable numbers at the polls. That is a sound conviction, based on the teachings of American experience, that it is unsafe to swap horses while crossing the stream.

A CRITICAL LAPSE.

"Life" is minus book reviews this week. Those tabloid critiques of the superexquisite Mr. Kerfoot that were a sort of peppermint wafers to delight literary palates as well as aid digestion—what a relief they were for that stuffy feeling which affects gorged readers. The postprandial discomforts of too much publication, too much to read, ennui, lassitude, they dispelled; and what appetizers they were! Not since the demise of St. Beuve has anything so tragic happened as the lapse of the sophisticated Mr. Kerfoot from "Life," through whom we browsed vicariously and so discriminatingly.

The trouble? The same old frailty, not purely literary, that Lord Byron and Shelley and Bobby Burns and all that roving ilk gave way to. At any rate, Mr. Kerfoot is busy defending a suit for the alleged alienation of a lady's affections. By next week we hope the plaintiff will have discovered and acknowledged he was mistaken either in the identity of the defendant or in the facts as charged. We avow this discreet hope in the interests not alone of literature, but of universal morality, decorum, taste, and the circulation of our clever contemporary. The critic, we opine, cannot arrogate to himself the privilege and license of creative genius, but must be held to the strictest accountability precisely as he exacts it unsparingly in the sphere beneath his scepter. Meanwhile 10,000 vengeful authors whom he has pilloried or slain with a phrase, but who despaired that their enemy would ever write a book, delight at what seems to be a romance he has bungled in the making.

WORDS, WORDS, WORDS.

Now we know what Mr. Hughes would have done if he had been President when the Germans were threatening to blow up the Lusitania. He would have written a note. He said so in his Louisville speech. In that note he would have notified Germany that if it went ahead and sank the Lusitania he would hold Germany to strict accountability. He would have told the Kaiser that if the deed was done America and Germany could not be friendly any more.

Having put all of this in his note he thinks that the Germans, terror stricken by "them fierce words," would not have sunk the Lusitania.

But what would he have done if he had been President when the thing was done? That was the question which was asked by a mild-mannered and soft-spoken citizen at the Louisville meeting, and which threw Mr. Hughes into a rage. "Permit me to answer it, permit me to answer it," he shouted, and then he used up 176 words in telling that he would have written a note before the ship was sunk and did not say a word about what he would have done after it was sunk.

He could have saved 170 of those words by telling the timid heckler: "I would have severed diplomatic relations." That seems to be the idea lurking in the maze of the 176 words. But why did not Mr. Hughes say it in six words. The reason seems to be that he is the soul of circumlocution and it is not in him to say in six words what he can contrive to leave unsaid in 176 words.

KICKLESS O'LEARY COW.

A modest pageant on the burning of Chicago, given in that city on Fire Prevention day, proved deficient in action at its most important point.

The member of the cast assigned the part of Mrs. O'Leary's cow refused to kick out at the psyhcological moment and upset the lamp. The straw, accordingly, had to be ignited through means entirely lacking authority in tradition. A kickless O'Leary cow is, of course, a paradox, a contradiction in terms.

Probably she had stage fright. For inexperience to be entrusted with the role of the most famous cow in all history, the tragic cow Hamlet of the bovine world, so to speak, was naturally overpowering and disconcerting.

Cows there are, however, which would never be found wanting on so interesting an occasion. With or without proper rehearsal, they have never been known to withhold any kicks under any circumstances. Properly approached, which means approached as Mrs. O'Leary approached her cow, with milk stool and pail, these cows of temperament may be depended on to kick in accordance with the most exacting requirements—to kick over not merely a fragile lamp, but a large, earnest-faced hired man or even the whole north end of the cowshed.

Doubtless it is a mistake to make a role so vitally necessary to a production dependent on the eccentricities of a single impersonator, unless competent understudies are available. It always took two to play the next most famous role of the bovine world, the classic heifer in "Evangeline." There were never any complaints about the heifer for lack of action. Kicks were always forthcoming in their proper place, albeit much cavorting around was also essential.

Some of the most brilliant and successful actors of the American stage during a third of a century made their debuts as the hindquarters of the heifer, adequacy to its requirements giving them a long start toward a "career." In fact, many think that the matter with the stage now can be traced to the fact that "Evangeline" was long ago retired and the exacting training school of the hindquarters is no longer available. Cannot the O'Leary cow, split into a dual role, as she ought to be, supply the deficiency?

THE WORLD'S CHAMPION EQUIVOCATOR.

It takes Mr. Hughes about eight hours and eight columns to tell why he favors and opposes the eight-hour day for railroads at the same time. To be on both sides of every issue at once is the largest order ever undertaken by a candidate. In volume of output of equivocation Mr. Hughes holds the record. For every assertion he makes there is a lengthy and elaborate qualification. For every position he takes there is an apology. It is difficult for the confused voter to determine which of the two sides of his proposition Mr. Hughes believes in—if either. It might clear matters up if he would make his arguments for and his arguments against in separate speeches.

It used to be said that nobody could tell what the famous orator Erskine really believed about a question until he had made a speech on either side of it. To judge from Mr. Hughes' utterances thus far he believes nothing about anything.

"S' DEATH!"

JUST A MINUTE

Written for the POST-DISPATCH
by Clark McAdams

HUGHES RAVIN'.

It was in a campaign dreary, Hughes sat thinking weak and weary,
Over many a quaint and curious issue of rejected lore;
And he wished to fill that chasm in his dome with protoplasm,
Or some substance that would yield him good ideas, one or more—
Good enough to catch the voters who would open up the door
Of the White House, nothing more.

He has cause to well remember lack of issues that September
When each stand-pat party member pushed his way up to the fore.
Eagerly he sought to borrow one live issue for the morrow
From the Stand-pats, but his sorrow keener grew as more and more
He beheld the barren larder, where was kept the Stand-pat store,
Barren now forevermore.

And the voters all were waiting, wond'ring when the hesitating
Candid candidate would tell them something never heard before.
But the only words there spoken that would give a single token
Of his thoughts, was daily croakin' of the words said o'er and o'er,
(Those few words as if his soul in those few words he did outpour)
"Nix on Wilson," nothing more.

And this erudite, unshaven man was like the poet's raven,
For his speeches, little meaning, little relevancy bore.
And except when he was napping, he was always tapping, tapping,
Was industriously rapping Woodrow Wilson o'er and o'er,
Just like Taft and trusty Teddy, who are something of a bore,
Merely knocking, nothing more.

And he thus went on beguiling all the voters who were smiling
At the wisdom of this Justice who o'er Blackstone used to pore.
And they said he spoke most sweetly, side-stepped issues, too, most neatly,
And kept silent most discreetly—and he silenced Theodore
On the issue of the Hyphens, those T. R. was wont to score—
And they wonder evermore.

WHEN THE IRISH LOVE.

Irish hearts love deeply,
Irish hearts are mad;
When a small and wee girl
Makes them very glad.

Irish eyes are blue eyes,
Irish blood is red blood;
Irish sighs are heart sighs
And always understood;
True love is good love,
When the Irish love.

Irish dreams are true dreams
Where fairy sweethearts be;
Irish hopes are fair gleams;
Irish love is happy;
Light hearts with rhythm move.
When the Irish love.

Irish Gods are good Gods
When gallant Irish love;
Irish prayers all reach God,
For they breathe the green love;
Irish days are dream days,
Though they never seem days.

Irish is the God Love—
Sure, his eyes are light Blue;
Once he whipped the God Jove,
Ere his dreaming came true.
Now he owns the earth, too,
And he's God in birth, too.

Irish hearts love deeply,
Irish hearts are mad;
When a small and wee girl
Makes them very glad!

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

HAISTEN.—Half dollar of 1853, if it has no arrows at date, is quoted here at $15.

TORSO.—Christopher North (John Wilson), Scottish author, was principal writer on Blackwood's Magazine in 1817. In 1816 he published a second volume of poems, "The City of the Plague." In a sketch of Charles Merivale (1808-1893) we do not find "Crown of Thorns" poem mentioned.

EAST ST. LOUISAN.—It is an unwritten rule among railroad companies generally that their cashiers cannot conduct a money-lending business on the side. They are also supposed to devote their entire time to the railroad's affairs and are not permitted to engage in outside business.

SANDER.—Birthday Sept. 23 to Oct. 22, sign of Libra. Libra person is energetic, ambitious, generous, inspired; woman, careless in money matters; not intentionally dishonest, but borrows; intuitive and mediumistic, may be poet, writer or musician; liable to stomach troubles and nervous prostration.

LUCYLE.—Artists say that the short woman should measure as follows: Height, 5 feet 4 inches; neck, 12½ inches; bust, 36 inches; waist, 21 inches; hips, 37 inches; round the largest part of the forearm, below the elbow, 11 inches, which should gradually taper to 6 inches around the wrist. Here are the proportions of the correct tall woman: Height, 5 feet 8½ inches; bust, 36 inches; waist, 25 inches; hips, 42 inches; top of arm, 14 inches; wrist, 6 inches; thigh, 21 inches; calf, 14 inches; ankle, 9 inches.

QUESTIONER.—A railroad president's duties are largely what he makes them. The real, successful railroad president of today has a thousand and one duties to perform, and is the hardest worked man in the company's service. He also has innumerable worries at all times, the cares of all departments having their final center on him. Of course, there are some few railroad presidents who take their work easier, but they are not the men who are "doing things" in the business.

J. C. P.—By Illinois law (1905), marriage is not permitted until one year after date of divorce decree. Violation of the law is punishable by one to three years' imprisonment and the marriage is declared void. The party at fault in a divorce case must wait two years to marry. The following statement has been made, but we have seen no Illinois court decision in the matter: Illinois divorced person may marry in Missouri within a year. At the end of a year, wishing to return to Illinois, it is only necessary to have a second ceremony at the end of the year.

LOIS.—Rose potpourri: Collect as many rose petals as possible—those of old-fashioned roses for preference—and be sure they are free from blight or disease. With a little energy one can collect a lot of rose leaves—especially by getting all one's friends to assist in the task. Dry petals in sun and weigh them. Say there is a quarter of a pound of rose leaves. Then mix with them these spices: Two ounces each of common salt and bay salt, one ounce powdered orris root, quarter ounce each of cloves, powdered cinnamon, powdered mace and allspice. Mix together in a jar and keep closely covered, stirring every day for month. The following potpourri—one of the most delightful possible—is easier still to make, since all kinds of scented flowers can be used in it—violets, roses, thyme, lemon, verbena, cowslips, lilacs, lilies, lavender, etc. Pull the petals from large flowers and break the heads off the tiny ones, and put the flowers into a jar as they are obtained. Between each layer of flowers sprinkle a little common salt, powdered mace and powdered cinnamon—a fairly thick sprinkling, varied according to the quantity of flowers. Keep the jar covered, and when it is full and the flowers all brown and dry, stir all together.

U-Boat Raid Causes Excitement

WAR AT OUR GATES.

Philadelphia Ledger: Ammunitions trade valued at $75,000,000 a month and forming one-seventh of all American exports is at a stroke threatened with paralysis by the exploit of the U-53. Allied military efficiency and American industrial and commercial stability wait upon the showdown of the full strength of the Kaiser's new submarine campaign to learn their future. Our national interests are gravely imperiled.

The war zone has suddenly been stretched clear across the Atlantic to our gates, without an hour's warning to give our Government opportunity to study the import of the new situation or devise a policy to meet it. A determined party in the Reichstag has been demanding of the Imperial Chancellor a reversal of the humane policy which America enforced upon his unwilling Emperor. The dispatch of the U-53 to cut off at its source a great body of English food and munitions supply is evidently Von Bethmann-Hollweg's response to those who urged him to ruthless submarine activity in a wider zone.

A USELESS OUTRAGE.

Boston Post: In any event, and however excused by Germany and her partisans, the sinking of the passenger steamer Stephano, bound in to New York from Newfoundland, was a gratuitous and useless outrage. There was not even the poor defense of contraband-carrying to palliate such an assault. And the whole day's work, performed at our very doors, will strike most Americans as an impudent procedure and an attempt to bring the war almost into American waters for the purpose of embarrassing this nation fully as much as for striking terror to Great Britain and her allies. Certainly there was no justification at all for the sinking of a couple of neutral steamers.

The steps to be taken by the United States Government will, of course, be carefully considered in the full light of all the facts. But it is imperative and inevitable that if the doings of yesterday contravene in the slightest degree our final demand upon Germany and Germany's promise to us, the threatened action by the United States must be taken.

HELPING THE SUBMARINES.

Washington Times: Now that the fast destroyers of our navy have found a field of usefulness as tenders to the submarine murderers, picking up their victims and taking them into port so that Germany may be saved from the embarrassment of causing actual loss of life, it would seem only proper that a naval order be issued requiring our naval commanders, when they find a new ship's company afloat in lifeboats, to fire a salute to the German flag before starting the work of rescue. It would not take much time, and would be a fitting recognition of the new function that our sea dogs have had imposed on them by the divinely directed policy of German Schrecklichkeit.

IS GERMANY CAMPAIGNING?

Boston Traveler: Has Germany decided to participate in the presidential election of 1916 at close range?

And, if that is Germany's decision, what does she hope to achieve and whose cause is she aiming to advance?

Those questions naturally suggest themselves in view of the war movement begun yesterday off the Massachusetts coast. This country had accustomed itself to a British blockade of the United States by the time that the administration made up its mind to protest. It is almost accustomed to the manner in which the British continue to ignore and defy American rights on the sea.

But the country will not accustom itself and cannot submit to U-boat warfare of the extreme type conducted where the crews of neutral ships have to be rescued by American war vessels and where there is hourly danger that American lives will be destroyed within sight of the American shore.

Let the administration speak promptly in behalf of the American people. And, after speaking, if that does not avail, let it act promptly and in the most practical manner possible.

A MAD ACT.

New York Evening Telegram: It is a mad act, an act of desperation. In dire straits on land, it looks like a despairing attempt on the part of Germany to do something, goodness knows what. It may be a deliberate attempt to embroil us in war.

This will fail, though the German Ambassador may be handed his papers.

We are at peace with the world at present and can say to the warring nations, "A plague on all your houses; do your fighting in your own backyards and don't disturb peaceful folk with your brawls."

There are to be conferences, and presumably notes. The sea lawyers will be heard. Meanwhile the U-53 and her hidden aids will keep on raiding and sinking.

Action is needed. Not words.

THE QUESTION OF BLOCKADE.

London Daily News: "Germany is now, for some obscure reason, proving to America that recognition of a submarine commerce destroyer involves recognition of its right to blockade a neutral port. If such right is to be recognized, any Power which has a submarine at all can proceed to paralyze neutral trade with a country with which it happens to be at war. We might conceivably see a Mexican submarine barring entry to a British port of American liners.

"The whole idea is impossible and opposed to the spirit of all careful international regulations with regard to effective blockades.

THE STEPHANO.

New York Herald: We are all Americans on this side of the Atlantic. The Stephano was engaged in peaceful commerce between two American ports. Her international status was just as clearly that of an American vessel engaged in American coastwise trade as if she were of American registry and flew the flag of the United States. She bore no more relation to the conflict in Europe than does any one of the steamships plying between New York and Norfolk or New York and New Orleans.

The Stephano had among her passengers American men, women and children. She was pursuing her peaceful way in American waters. The lives of the Americans were placed in jeopardy by the crime of this agent of Prussian "frightfulness."

This is American territory—this North American continent—and, thank God! the spirit of the Monroe Doctrine lives in American hearts. Can anybody doubt that the United States would rise in its might to repel a Prussian invasion of Canada?

The warfare instituted by Prussian submarines in American waters is just as much an attack upon the Monroe Doctrine as would be a Prussian attempt to invade Canada.

Eight-Hour Law Commission Appointed

A CAPABLE BODY.

Wheeling Register: The commission chosen by President Wilson to observe the operation of the new eight-hour law on interstate railroads will command the confidence of all the interests involved, including those of the public, which are paramount. It consists of Col. Goethals, builder of the Panama Canal; Edward E. Clark, one of the arbitrators appointed by President Roosevelt in the anthracite coal strike, and George Rublee, who has been a member of the Federal Trade Commission.

The integrity and capacity of this body will not be questioned. Its members are familiar with industrial, transportation and trade problems. They are judicially minded, and they have had experience in dealing with disputes between capital and labor. If the facts show that the railroads have been injured by the Adamson act, on the basis of present freight rates, there is no doubt that justice will be done. The most extreme railroad president—even Candidate Hughes himself—can offer no objection to the personnel of the commission.

GOOD MEN FOR THE WORK

Des Moines Capital: The three men appointed by President Wilson to investigate the workings of the Adamson railway wage law are qualified so far as knowledge of labor conditions are concerned. Undoubtedly they will enter upon their work with a friendly attitude toward President Wilson and his administration.

Col. Goethals has had an intimate relationship with the workingman's problems as Governor of the Panama Canal zone. Out of respect for the administration under which he is serving, and perhaps also through personal inclination, he enforced a strict eight-hour day for employes of the Panama railroad immediately after Congress passed the Adamson act. Col. Goethals significantly remarked when notified of his appointment that he is an officer of the United States army and subject to the orders of his Commander in Chief.

Edgar E. Clark is a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission. He formerly was an officer of the Order of Railway Conductors. Naturally he is heart and soul in sympathy with the brotherhoods who are benefited by the Adamson law. Shippers are questioning the propriety of placing a man from the Interstate Commerce Commission on the committee, inasmuch as he later will have to pass upon the railroads' plea for a raise in freight rates should the eight-hour day be continued.

George Rublee, a member of the trade commission, has been a student of labor and social questions for years. He is a lawyer. His appointment by President Wilson was turned down by the Senate and he is serving as a recess appointee.

Comment Interesting to Women

A WOMAN'S FIRST VOTE.

The New Republic: A Woman voter who will cast her first ballot in November sums up the situation in the New Republic as follows: "On the subject of Mexico Mr. Hughes is vague, so vague that I canont be sure he does not favor intervention; therefore I prefer Mr. Wilson. On the subject of the European war he is as indefinite, but he conveys an intimation of greater aggressiveness, which makes me wary. On other issues he seems to me sometimes wrong, as on the issue of protection, sometimes right but probably powerless, as on economy of administration, appointment of experts to office, the Federal amendment for woman suffrage. On the other hand, although I cannot follow Mr. Wilson in all things, I feel profoundly grateful to him for his wise conduct of the affairs of the nation through several difficult and serious crises, and I believe that on most questions of foreign and domestic policy he is right. For all these reasons I decide to cast my first presidential vote for Woodrow Wilson."

DO THEY REALIZE?

Chicago Journal: Do the women of America ralize:

That President Wilson is the first President who ever voted for woman suffrage?

That he is the first President who ever spoke for woman suffrage during his term of office?

That more progress toward giving women the ballot has been made during his administration than in the previous 25 years?

That Candidate Hughes, for all his lip service to the suffrage cause, never has voted for it, and is so little interested in it that when he addressed a vast audience in Denver, Colo., a suffrage State, he forgot to mention the subject.

WOULD ASTONISH MARK HANNA.

Louisville Courier Journal: And that trainload of highfalootin', highsailin' fashionables from Newport, Bar Harbor and Wall street—was there ever such an affront to the popular intelligence, and can it mean anything but hopeless despair on the part of the Hughes managers?

But, whatever else it may imply, it indicates money galore; money to burn; money to throw to the birds. There is not a jewel that decorates these ladies—not a thread of costly lace—not a gown of satin, or silk—but has been paid for by money filched through class legislation by the Interests from the pockets of the people. Every dishonest corporation, every corrupt partnership, every greedy combine is pouring its contributions into the Republican coffers to buy the election. Mark Hanna must turn over in his grave and exclaim, "Why didn't I live to see this day?"

WOMAN AND WAR.

New York Evening Sun: By far the most terrifying result of the war thus far predicted is that woman will be wholly transformed by the dread ordeal through which the world is passing. In mind and soul, not only in fair outward form, is this great mutation to manifest itself, if we are to hearken to those who pretend to interpret her incomprehensibly variable character. For we read that after the war women "will never again be ruled by foolish styles."

What a disaster is here threatened to mankind can scarce be grasped until it is actually visited upon us. Are we, then, to lose life's one priceless possession upon which we may depend always with certainty for the most delightful uncertainty? There is no other creature, object or condition the future of which cannot be predicted with some degree of accuracy by the mind of man. She is the antidote to deadly mundane sameness. Man is to man a scientific phenomenon; but woman—she even balks herself.

Yet, stay! We may repress awhile our grief at a prospective paradise lost. Elsewhere we read that "sash ribbons for the season are the most magnificent and gorgeous ever seen;" that "only strong adjectives will express them;" that "there seems to be an eruption of color in the ribbons of the solid silk, every color and shade imaginable being combined in one piece and the brilliancy of the effect heightened with gold and silver threads."

Man's fainting spirit revives. So woman is, after all, still her old, sweet, incorrigible self, bless her! And, as we had suspected, always growing more so. This interpreter foresees her as no incarnate spirit of sadness or common sense—which would be just as bad—but as the living, breathing surcease to sorrow without which this world would be indeed a bitter place to live in. If the ballot spoils her then we will abolish the ballot. Since we may choose between our prophets we will take the one who pleases us most, particularly since they disclose a passion for disagreement among themselves, which betrays them as being prophetesses.

THE COST OF FOOD.

Chicago Herald: The housekeeper's dreadful ogre, the high cost of living, seems to be a very mild-tempered beast in this country when compared with his brutish brothers across the seas.

While the new prices on vegetables, meats, bread, shoes and coal bring dismay to the American family, the total rise is slight if European contrasts are kept in mind. The average increase in the cost of living in this country during the two years of war is estimated to be 12.6 per cent by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Serious as this is for the wage-earners and the salaried classes whose incomes have not likewise advanced, the burden is relatively light.

According to one authority, the increased cost in London is 65 per cent, more than five times the American advance, while Berlin's figures of 117 per cent rise is nearly twice as serious as the Englishman's burden. Vienna is still worse, with an increase of 140 per cent since the war.

These figures are corroborated by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, which estimated a war increase of 65 per cent in English retail prices, an increase of from 100 to 200 on German meat and provisions, and a rise running as high as 500 per cent in Austria.

This shows graphically the tremendous advantage England has enjoyed by keeping the oceans open for travel. Indeed, the London war increase is hardly greater than that Norway has experienced. The figures and averages are unemotional and bare, but the facts they denote to millions of families come desperately close home.

Twelve per cent in the United States and 140 per cent in Vienna, the difference in health, life itself, not only for the present, but unto the third and fourth generation of them who have suffered and gone hungry.

Indications Are That Early Winter Affairs Will Be at Clubs and Cafes, and in Nature of Cabaret Entertainments—Modistes Say Fashionables Are Buying Only Away-From-Home Apparel—This Time Last Year the Calendar Was Filled With Teas, Luncheons and Dinner Dances and Hostesses Had Been Numerously Announced.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

THE kind of clothes the fashionable young matrons and maids and debutantes are buying for their winter's social campaign show what kind of season it is going to be. According to prognostication, it will be a season of club, cafe and cabaret entertainments, as the modistes who supply the apparel say that so far everything they have sold has been to wear outside the home.

Now, this time last year the calendar already was filled with teas, luncheons and dinner dances far into the winter.

It was quite in the day's work to have some prospective hostess call up and ask to have the date of her affair announced so that no one else would give something on the same day or evening, as the case might have been. Sometimes they would ask what dates on the calendar were open and so forth, but here it is almost November and with hardly a debutante tea announced!

There are promises of a number, but nothing final. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Parker's dinner dance for their daughter, Miss Katherine, will be on Thanksgiving eve, at the St. Louis Club, and several other parties are rumored. But little is definite about the kind of season it will be, excepting that the cafes and clubs are preparing the most elaborate programs in the way of dinner dances, concerts and after-theater suppers and dances.

Counting the two grand opera companies, one at the Coliseum with Farrar in Carmen, and the annual visit of the San Carlo Opera Company at the Odeon, recitals, Symphony "pops," matinee and evening concerts, recitals—among which will be the Kreissler concert, and the Friday morning recitals at the Woman's Club, there will be no less than 21 musical affairs worth hearing in November alone.

There are fewer debutantes this season than for a number of years, about [illegible] at most. Two years ago there were about 75, and last year about half that number.

So! The weekly dinner dances at the various clubs and affairs of that kind were merely incidents in the winter's festivities, so much entertaining was there in the homes.

It is a little early to make a forecast, but these serve to show which way the social whirl will have its trend.

JUST why one wedding should be prettier than another when all the details are so alike is hard to say, but—"they say" Miss Henrietta Erwin's wedding to Archibald Bruce Tinning of Martinez, Cal., which took place Wednesday evening at Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Walsh's home at 4349 Westminster place, was one of the loveliest seen in St. Louis for a long time.

Perhaps it was because the bride walked with her father, Col. James B. Erwin, who wore cavalry full dress uniform—all yellow and gold and blue—or maybe it was because the Walshes and Muffitts, to whose clan the bride's sister, Mrs. Walsh, belongs, are noted for the lavish use of flowers. Anyway, it is said to have been a most beautiful affair.

There was an improvised altar in a bower of ferns and yellow and pink shaded dahlias. Cathedral candelabra flanked it on either side.

The bride's gown was of cloth of silver, covered with chiffon embroidered with silver and it had a long train of the silver cloth. Her veil was of tulle, worn with a bandeau of silver ribbon, and she carried lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Walsh, who was Miss Winifred Erwin, was matron of honor and wore turquoise blue velvet with blue tulle trimmings. She carried Ophelia roses. Miss Virginia Flad, who was bridemaid, wore a gown of the same shade of tulle, with touches of silver.

Mr. Tinning brought his best man, Herman Phleger of San Francisco, with him. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Francis O'Connor of Our Lady of Lourdes Chapel. A large reception followed.

Mr. and Mrs. Tinning will reside in Martinez, where the bridegroom's parents have given them a home for a wedding present.

Col. Erwin, whose name at West Point was "Beauty Erwin," came all the way from Mexico, where his regiment, the Seventh Cavalry, has been since the Columbus raid. He will return at once.

Mrs. Erwin was a former St. Louis beauty, Miss Isabelle Doan, a member of an old family. The bride, as were her sisters, was educated at the Sacred Heart Convent. Whenever Col. Erwin has been "in the field," which has been in every campaign, his family has returned here.

Mr. Tinning is a graduate of the University of California and of the Harvard Law School.

My new location after Oct. 15 will be 4129 McPherson avenue. Schumitzky, Ladies' Tailor. Phone Lindell 3729.

THE table in the dining room at the wedding of Miss Mildred Sharp to Ernest Jackson Cole, Wednesday evening, has been much talked about by those who were at the reception at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. M. E. Sharp.

In the center, surrounded by flowers and ferns, was a miniature fountain. Tiny jets played all around the edge of it toward the center. It is the latest thing in table decoration.

The bride had Mrs. Robert Hussey for her matron of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Fannie Ehrhardt of Peoria, Ill., and Miss Elvira McDermid, the bride's schoolgirl cousin from Chicago.

They wore frocks of pink and silver and carried colonial boquets of pink roses. The groomsmen were Arnold Stifel, Jack Stiles and Robert Hussey. Theodore Meyer Jr. was best man. Mr. Cole is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Amandee B. Cole.

During the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Dr. Z. D. T. Phillips of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, the bridal party stood under a canopy of white roses that extended across the end of the room and was flanked by tall vases of roses.

INSTEAD of having rice or confetti to throw when the bride and bridegroom were departing, the guests at Miss Louise Pitzman's wedding to Oliver G. Lucas, Tuesday evening, were given quantities of rose leaves to shower them with.

One of the bride's gifts was a necklace of graduated pearls from her father. He had given her a string of pearls when she made her debut three years ago, but for her wedding he had them added to, and the pearls are graduated from those to a larger size.

The marriage took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Pitzman, at 6 Kingsbury place.

The Rev. Dr. Z. B. T. Phillips officiated. Miss Anna Turner of Pittsburg was maid of honor and Miss Catherine Case bridemaid. Frederick Pitzman, the bride's brother, was best man, and P. Taylor Bryan Jr. was groomsman.

Mr. and Mrs. Lucas will be at home after Nov. 1 at 5418 Waterman avenue.

Miss Sally Meagher has returned from New York with the newest and latest in hats, waists and novelties. 801 Century building.

SEVERAL pretty affairs were given within the past week in honor of Miss Elsie Denny, whose engagement to Robert June of Detroit, Mich., was one of the interesting announcements of the week. Miss Denny is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Nelson Denny of 1236 Goodfellow avenue and belongs to the Pittsburg family of that name.

The marriage will take place in November, after the wedding of Miss Ethel Denny, another daughter, to William Wilson Verdin, when Miss Elsie Denny will serve as maid of honor.

Miss Elizabeth Henderson gave a party Saturday in honor of the bride-elect and Miss Ethel Mills entertained for them Monday.

Mr. June is a Cornell man and was one of the civil engineers on the Panama Canal for five years. The romance began several years ago when Miss Denny was visiting a Washington University classmate and was entertained on board the "Fortuna," the flagship of the Toledo Yacht Club.

Mrs. Lacey M. Love, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William C. McBride of 29 Washington terrace, departed last night with her small son, William McBride Love, for her home in Pasadena, Cal.

Many of the girls who took part in the fashion show which was given by the same women about a year ago will be there for the dance.

It is said the prizes will be exceptionally handsome because merchants and milliners have given generously.

"Here the Best Dressed Women Wear Gossard Corsets"—

OUR trained corsetieres travel all over the world, demonstrating and selling Gossards. In practically every town and city they hear women make the above statement. Designers in the United States, Canada, Australia, South America, London and Paris prefer a Gossard over which to design the frocks, dresses and suits of their clients.

Being well dressed means being, first, correctly corseted. The growth of the Gossard idea—front lacing, and style plus comfort and wearing service—is the result of millions of satisfied wearers. It is quite the thing to say, "I wear a Gossard."

Gossard Corsets continue to win scores of friends, because the best dressed women prefer them and will wear no other corsets.

Ideal Curved Back and Short Waisted Figures

ENID MARKEY, Triangle Star, is an ideal short waisted figure, yet she more nearly represents the ideal figure because a special Gossard lengthens her waist line. She prefers Gossards to any other corsets.

Should you, through incorrect corseting, have a poor back line, we suggest a special Gossard which will reduce your lower back or support your abdomen. In a few weeks you will find your figure an ideal average.

Thousands of women have made this experiment successfully. Both of these ideal type special Gossards are designed at $2, $3.50, $5 up to $25. Be fitted today.

FIELDS INVITES YOU TO "STEP THIS WAY"

New Musical Show at Shubert-Garrick—Eltinge Back in "Cousin Lucy."

Lew Fields' production of "Step This Way," a revised version of "The Girl Behind the Counter," which was a Fields show of a few seasons ago, will be the principal new feature of this week's theater bills. With Fields, in his performance which opens at the Shubert-Garrick tonight, will be Alice Fischer, Marguerite Farrell, Elizabeth Wood, Louise Clark, Sam Dody, Edward Bassi, Vaughn Trevor and the vaudeville team of Clark and Bergman. The "Eight High Steppers" are among the damsels of the chorus. A soda fountain scene is one of the features of the play.

Julian Eltinge will come to the Jefferson tonight in "Cousin Lucy," the play with which he closed the Olympic's season last spring, and with the same cast. Eltinge's drawing power in St. Louis is an established fact and he made the Olympic's last week one of its best ones, from the box office standpoint. Montgomery and Stone in "Chin-Chin," a show for which St. Louis has long waited, will be at the Jefferson next Sunday night.

At the Players Theater today, the play, "On Trial," which was seen at the Olympic last winter, will have its first stock company presentation. This is the play in which effects approximating those of the movies are obtained, without sacrificing the element of human speech and bodily action. This is done by revolving scenery, which makes it possible, in a few seconds, to change the scene from the courtroom to the place which the witness is describing, after the manner of film "cut-backs." Beside the novelty of this mechanical equipment, the play has a strong dramatic interest. All the judges in active service in the circuit, appellate and Federal courts here have been invited to attend tomorrow night's performance.

Stella Mayhew, musical comedienne, is to head the Columbia's vaudeville bill tomorrow, in "songs and chatter," wherein she is abetted by her husband, Lillee Taylor. Harold Woolf and Helen Stewart, in a novelty playlet called "In Two Flats," have second place on the bill.

The American Theater will vary from its offerings of melodrama and problem plays, today, with a musical show entitled "My Aunt From Utah." Kate Elinore and a cast of 15 performers present this farce with songs.

"Miss Nobody From Starland," the Park Theater's musical bill, beginning tomorrow night, will have an elaborate scenic setting.

FARMERS SWINDLED BY FAKE FARM LOAN BANK PROMOTERS

Federal Board Renews Warning After Receiving Reports of Payments Made to "Organizers."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—The Federal Farm Loan Board's warning to farmers against swindlers seeking to profit by the organization of land banks has begun to bring in many reports of victims. The board recently announced that it would refuse charters to any banks in whose organization money had gone for promotion purposes.

Jacob J. Blumer of Benchland, Mont., wrote to the board that an agent of a promotion concern pretended to have been employed by the Government and got from him a $250 check for 10 shares of stock and that he later received notice to pay $750 more. S. A. Altman of Lincoln, Kan., wrote he had paid $300 on a similar proposition.

The board issued this supplemental warning:

"Farmers who borrow through the National Farm Loan Association are not required to pay any advance commissions. So all of these enterprises requiring payments from farmers are declared by the board to be fraudulent and the attention of the Department of Justice has been called to the matter and an attempt will be made to bring the offenders to justice."

It is to be supposed that a man who has been in the candy business 38 years knows about all that can be known about the making and merchandising of candy. N. Nusholtz, president of the LaSalle Candy Co., has a 38-year record. The results of his 38 years' experience are concentrated in the LaSalle Candy Shop at Broadway and Olive street, in the quality of the candies distributed from there and in the attractiveness of the store. The LaSalle shop has been on that corner six years and the business, it is said, has had a remarkable growth.

DR. ELIOT MENTIONED AS A NOMINEE FOR U. S. SENATE

John F. Fitzgerald, Democratic Candidate in Massachusetts, Is Ready to Quit Race.

BOSTON, Oct. 14.—John F. Fitzgerald, Democratic candidate for the United States Senate, today announced he was ready to withdraw "if it is to the advantage of President Wilson and the Democratic ticket."

In a statement the former Mayor said he had "agreed to take the nomination as trustee for the party when former Gov. David I. Walsh and Sherman L. Whipple refused to run, rather than have Senator Henry Cabot Lodge opposed."

The Democratic party has until next Thursday to provide a candidate in Fitzgerald's place. Richard Olney, who was Secretary of State under President Cleveland; Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard University, and Matthew Hale are mentioned as possibilities.

KING'S HIGHWAY BOULEVARD PLAN MAY BE ABANDONED

Only 17 Cents of $500,000 Bond Issue Remains for Improving Unpaved Sections.

SUITS DELAYED WORK

Property Owners North of Easton Avenue Now Opposed to Widening of Street.

There is a likelihood that the development of King's highway as a boulevard 150 feet wide, for which $500,000 was voted at a bond issue election more than 10 years ago, will be abandoned. Of the $500,000 voted, only 17 cents remains unexpended.

An abandonment of the boulevard idea, however, would not be likely to interfere with the city's plans to pave, and perhaps beautify, the unpaved portions of King's highway betttween the river at 5700 South and Broadway and Riverview drive on the North Side.

Director of Streets and Sewers Talbert today told a Post-Dispatch reporter that he had heard that property owners along King's highway, north of Easton avenue, are preparing a petition requesting the Board of Public Service to withdraw its plans for the widening of the street.

Director Talbert said that in a recent conversation George E. Kessler, an engineer and former adviser to the city, expressed doubt as to the utility of establishing King's highway as a boulevard north of Easton avenue. Kessler gave as his reason, Director Talbert said, that the delay has been so great that the residential districts which, it was hoped, would be benefited by the improvement have deteriorated, and new subdivisions have been created farther west. Director Talbert said he agreed with Kessler and thought the Board of Public Service also might coincide with the view that a boulevard north of Easton avenue is no longer advisable.

Director Talbert said the abandonment of the scheme for increasing the width of King's highway north of Easton will not mean the street will not be paved and perhaps beautified with park strips. These improvements, however, will be charged to property in the assessment district, and not against abutting property, as was originally contemplated.

Work Tied Up by Suits.

Litigation which has been pending since May, 1909, has prevented the condemnation of property required for the widening of King's highway from 100 to 150 feet between Easton avenue and Penrose street. These suits have been taken to the Supreme Court and, after having been remanded are expected to be appealed for the second time. The objectors are the Christian Brothers, William B. Thompson, R. H. Ellers, Christian Winkelmeyer and the Hydraulic Pressed Brick Co. They contend that the ordinance, under which the improvement is sought to be made, is invalid.

Director Talbert pointed out that regardless of litigation, great progress has been made in converting King's highway into a fine crosstown boulevard. The city has acquired several stretches of right-of-way and two small parks in connection with the extension and widening of King's highway. The land for the boulevard east of Broadway to the river, including Dover Park, cost $110,422.50; that for King's highway Southeast, $35,245; from Kansas street to King's highway, $98,504.13; from Broadway to Compton avenue, $26,776.73; from McRee avenue to Swan avenue, $25,005; from Euclid avenue to Florissant avenue, $40,919.47, and along Bircher road, and for the purchase of Penrose Park, $163,127.

The width of King's highway is 100 feet except between Compton avenue and King's highway proper, where it is 170 feet wide, and from Penrose to Florissant avenue, where the ground acquired by the city varies from 125 to 375 feet in width.

Much of Boulevard Paved.

All of these additions to the length and width of King's highway have been made with appropriatinos from the original allowance of half a million dollars voted in 1906. A long stretch of the boulevard is paved, but this has been charged against the property in the assessment districts established from time to time. Improvements in the future, including paving and "parking," will be paid for in the same way, or from municipal revenue, unless another bond issue is voted.

King's highway now stretches from the river front at Dover street, 5700 south, and from Carondelet Park to Florissant avenue at the southwest corner of O'Fallon Park, with a direct connection from that point to Broadway and Riverview Drive, which leads to the Chain of Rocks. The roadway from Penrose street to Florissant avenue has not been laid out. In other places only macadam or telford pavement exists and at some points there is only a dirt road.

Director Talbert said that he could not estimate the amount that will be required to pave and "park" the boulevard where that is necessary.

HE SAW NAPOLEON IN 1812

Russian Villager, 113 Years Old, Recalls Campaign at Moscow.

VIENNA, Oct. 14.—The war correspondent of the Zeit, in one of his recent dispatches, records that while passing through Volhynia he met a villager of Karpilovka who saw Napoleon on his way to Moscow in 1812. The man had recently celebrated his 113th birthday and himself related that as a boy of 9 he had seen the great French Emperor.

The man is still in good health, and what makes his longevity so remarkable is that he has lived all his life in a marshy district, commonly regarded as unhealthy.

STEEL AND IRON MEN WILL HOLD INSTITUTE HERE

Elbert H. Gary and Charles M. Schwab to Attend Meeting on Oct. 27-28.

500 VISITORS EXPECTED

Trade Problems Will Be Discussed—$5-a-Plate Banquet on Program.

The heads of virtually all the great steel and iron manufacturing concerns of America, which just now probably are the most prosperous industries in the world, will be here Oct. 27 and 28 to attend the semi-annual meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute. Foremost among them will be Elbert H. Gary, president of the United States Steel Corporation, who also is president of the institute, and Charles M. Schwab of the Bethlehem Steel Co. Altogether some 500 or 600 visitors are expected.

Arrangements for the entertainment of the visitors are being completed by a local committee under the chairmanship of Clarence H. Howard, president of the Commonwealth Steel Co. This meeting, the first of the institute to be held west of the Mississippi River, was brought to St. Louis through the efforts of Howard, who appeared before the last meeting in New York as president of the Business Men's League and urged the claims of St. Louis as the greatest open-hearth furnace steel manufacturing center in America.

Technical Problems to Be Discussed.

Unusual interest will attach to the meeting because of the growing prosperity of the industry, due, in part, to the vast amount of war munitions orders being filled in this country. In addition, firms, such as the Commonwealth Steel Co., which do not handle war orders, are running at full capacity. The technical problems of the trade, in view of the new conditions, will be discussed by men of high standing in the business.

The speakers on the set program are George B. Waterhouse, metallurgist of the Lackawanna Steel Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; James W. Fuller, president Fuller Engineering Co., Allentown, Pa.; Frank S. Witherbee, president Witherbee, Sherman & Co., New York, and Arthur J. Boynton, superintendent blast furnaces of the National Tube Co., Lorain, O.

A banquet, at $5 a plate, will be held at the Missouri Athletic Association Friday night, Oct. 27. At this banquet Howard will make an address on St. Louis and its industries. Other speakers will be President Kearney of the Wabash Railroad, and George W. Simmons, vice president of the Simmons Hardware Co.

To Tour Industrial Plants.

The visitors will be taken Saturday morning in a special train for a tour of St. Louis industrials plants. They will visit the large mills at Granite City and at noon will be entertained at luncheon in the lunchroom of the Commonwealth Steel Co. An automobile tour of interesting places in St. Louis will be made in the afternoon. Plans for the evening entertainment to follow have not been decided.

The members of the local Arrangements Committee, in addition to Howard, are: George W. Niedringhaus, National Enameling and Stamping Co.; Thomas R. Akin, Laclede Steel Co.; George C. Holmes, Lackawanna Steel Co.; August A. Busch, Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association; George W. Simmons, Simmons Hardware Co.; B. F. Bush, receiver Missouri Pacific Railway, and A. L. Shapleigh, Shapleigh Hardware Co.

FOUR ST. LOUIS SOLOISTS TO SING IN WAGNER PROGRAM

Opening Concert of Season for Pageant Choral Society to Be on Nov. 21.

Four of the five artists engaged as soloists for the opening concert of the St. Louis Pageant Choral Society this season will be St. Louisans. The fifth is Eleanor Cochran, dramatic soprano, who has been selected especially because of her success as an interpreter of Wagnerian music, and will have as her principal part in the program "Senta's Ballad" from the Flying Dutchman. The St. Louis soloists are Mrs. Arthur Schutz, contralto; J. Glenn Lee, tenor; John W. Bohn, baritone, and Oliver H. Clark, basso.

The first concert will be Nov. 21, and will be a Wagner program. It is the first occasion in St. Louis when Wagnerian music has been performed by a full mixed chorus and orchestra without the operatic settings and principals. The entire Symphony Orchestra has been engaged to accompany the chorus, which this season has been enlarged to 200 voices, and Frederick Fischer, conductor of the Pageant Choral Society, will direct the performance.

WINTER CALENDAR AT M. A. A.

An artistic calendar of the winter's social, athletic and musical events has been issued by the Entertainment Committee of the Missouri Athletic Association.

The calendar, which lists 60 entertainments, is a handy bulletin for club members and their families. The feature performance will be a concert by Frances Alda, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who will be assisted by Frank La Forge at the piano, on Oct. 31.

Organ Recital at Graham Chapel.

The first of the public Sunday afternoon organ recitals given by Charles Galloway each month from October to May, in connection with the extension work at Washington University, will take place this afternoon at Graham Memorial Chapel. The program will consist of works by Niels W. Gade, Theodore Salome, Charles Marie Widor, Guiseppe Ferrata and Oscar Schminke.

GLASS OF WATER BEFORE YOU EAT YOUR BREAKFAST

Wash poison form system each morning, and feel fresh as a daisy.

Every day you clean the house you live in to get rid of the dust and dirt which collected through the previous day. Your body the house your soul lives in, also becomes filled up each twenty-four hours with all manner of filth and poison. If only every man and woman could realize the wonders of drinking phosphated hot water, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

Everyone, whether sick or well, should drink, each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.—ADV.

Train Your Hair as an Actress Does

No class of people devotes as much time to beauty as do actresses, and naturally no class must be more careful to retain and develop their charms. Inquiry among them develops the information that in hair care they find it dangerous to shampoo with any makeshift hair cleanser. Instead they have studied to find the finest preparation made for shampooing and bringing out the beauty of the hair. The majority of them say that to enjoy the best hair wash and scalp stimulator that is known, get a package of canthrox from your druggist; dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and your shampoo is ready. It costs less than three cents for this amount. After its use the hair dries rapidly, with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.—ADV.

Complexion Fresh as a Daisy—Not a Wrinkle

in sight—Remarkable discovery of skin osmosis quickly enables women with sunken cheeks, wrinkles and marks of age again to become most beautiful, youthful and charming.

By Mlle. Mariex, France's Great Prize Beauty

It's wonderful to look beautiful and youthful. The Countess de Chevanne, who at seventy years of age possesses a marvelously soft, smooth, velvet-like skin and an almost girl-like complexion, without a wrinkle in sight, told the writer personally in Paris that she owed it all to the discovery of skin osmosis. With this marvelous discovery every complexion blemish can be banished in three nights, in many instances, and you can awaken in the morning with a beautiful natural rose-colored complexion as fresh as a daisy.

I have known dozens of hollow-cheeked, wrinkled, aged-looking women, who had given up all hope of ever looking beautiful and youthful again, to "come back" and again become most beautiful, youthful and fascinating in from two to three weeks' time by this wonderful simple method.

No matter what your age or what you have tried unsuccessfully, skin osmosis will positively bring you new beauty and youth. Merely wash your face in warm water at night and rub in a teaspoonful or two of any good, pure, roseated cream, which you can obtain from your druggist. In the morning wash the face with cold water and rub in more cream.

In three weeks or less watch the magic transformation. See how the old, hardened, coarse, rough skin turns into new, fresh, soft, youthful-looking skin almost before your very eyes, all due to simple skin osmosis produced solely by warm water and roseated cream. But be sure to use only pure roseated cream, as it is an entirely different thing from ordinary face creams and must not be confounded with them. I personally prefer Creme Tokalon (Roseated), but any good brand will do. If you have wrinkles get a box of Japanese Ice Pencils and use them in connection with the cream and you get quick action on the deepest wrinkles, no matter of how long standing, in one night's time and awaken on the morrow to witness most astonishing results.

I personally guarantee success in every case, in any of my newspaper articles which I write on subjects relating to beauty, or I will refund the amount paid for any products which I recommend, provided you take your dealer's receipt at the time you make your purchase. My American address is Simone Mariex, 20 West 22d street, New York.

NOTE—The manufacturers of Creme Tokalon Roseated have such unbounded confidence in their particular brand that they offer to forfeit $200.00 to any charitable institution, if it can be shown that it will not banish every complexion blemish and give most astonishing new beauty to wrinkled, care-worn, aged women in three days' time in many instances. It can be obtained absolutely fresh and guaranteed pure from Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney, Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Co., B. Nugent & Bro., or most any good druggist in this city.—ADV.

GERMANY AS IT IS TODAY AS OBSERVED BY POST-DISPATCH MAN

mission during August, and while foreigners are more or less grudgingly iven permission to leave the empire, natives can do so only after going through a thirty-third degree of cross-examination and about 15 separate processes before they gain permission.

The purpose of this is to restrict native travel, thereby saving the population money, and preventing miscalculations in the food supplies of the various districts into which the country is divided. Also, it is provision against spying.

Most of the dogs that one sees in Germany today are being put to work. The army uses a large quantity of them for Red Cross purposes and the others to be found in the cities and towns are used in place of horses to help the men and women pull carts.

The German newspapers in the last two years have changed their methods in some respects, basing the changes on what they have learned from the correspondents who have visited Germany. Feature interviews with important persons, which at first was a monopoly of the Americans, are now being used regularly by the bigger German papers, especially in Berlin.

The extremely rigid political and military censorship still holds the German newspapers down so far as the pubication of new news is concerned, and as regards too free a discussion of political matters. The Berliner Tageblatt was suppressed an entire week in August, and no one knows yet the cause.

You never see powder or lump sugar in Berlin today. When your coffee is brought you make a careful search of the salver, and you are finally rewarded by the discovery of two tiny particles that look like bits of white chalk. This is saccharine and is a powerful sweetener.

The food conservation is not predicated upon the danger of immediate starvation; it is intended to guard against that possibility, and has as another purpose the supplying to the soldiers of all the foodstuffs they wish. As a result the soldiers fare better than the civilian population.

In Belgium and the occupied portions of France the natives live better than does the native population of Germany. There are more meats and other staples to be had.

There is no starvation in Germany, there is no great variety of food but plenty of what there is, and the prices are not high. It is to be doubted if, with a few exceptions, the prices are much higher than for the same commodities in England or America.

It is true that one must have cards for bread, meat, butter, eggs, milk, potatoes and other things, but this provision is for conservation, not for prohibition.

There is much more work than there are workers in Germany, and as a result labor is well paid. Therefore the working class is able to supply itself properly.

• • •

The very poor classes are taken care of by a mass feeding plan at central kitchens, but from personal observation I came to the conclusion that the establishment of these central kitchens had not been an actual necessity, and they are being used very largely by people who could afford to live better but who want to save their money.

That saving is still a popular pastime in Germany is shown by the fact that in spite of the enormous demands made upon them by the war loans the savings banks show enormously increased holdings today over the sums they had at the beginning of the war.

The card system applies to common articles of life, as well as to food. Luxuries one can buy freely; for necessities one has to have a "bezugschein" before they can be bought. For example, you can buy silk socks in any shop, but if you want to buy woolen ones you have to go to your precinct police station and there obtain an official permit. This is to prevent the necessaries of life from being cornered, and as an additional precaution, the prices at which necessaries are sold are fixed by the military commanders of various districts. For violating the rule the biggest retail silk house in Germany, doing a business of millions of marks a year, was closed for an entire week in Berlin recently, and the proprietor was compelled to pay all his employes during that time.

Paternalism in government has been worked out to such a degree in Germany that even the housewives are instructed at what time they can put up their preserves and in what quantities and at what price they may buy their fruits.

In Berlin and the other cities the newly recruited troops are usually sent to the front at night. There is an absence of that "pomp and circumstance" of war that marked the departure of the soldiers at the beginning. Now the easiest way is considered the best, and so they are taken out quickly after nightfall.

• • •

The spirit of the soldiers is a fine thing to meet. They are fighting with the same bravery and ability today as characterized them at the outset. They all want peace, it is true, but they are fighting in a way that leaves the opponents no doubt as to their mettle.

American "Peace-Makers."

It is a standing joke in diplomatic circles in Berlin that almost every American who visits that city these days comes as an amateur peacemaker. Some of their plans are even bigger jokes than they are themselves.

Still other Americans who visit Germany outdo their German hosts in their vituperation of America. This has been true to such an extent that the average German now sizes up an American visitor as either pro-German or pro-ally, never considering that he might be merely pro-American.

Ambassador Gerard has felt this. The long opportunity I had for observation two years ago and the second opportunity I have just had convice me that a majority of the Germans have deliberately declined to take him or his work at their true worth. Because he has not been violently pro-German he has been attacked at every possible opportunity, although his neutrality has been sincere and unquestionable and his work remarkably effective.

Wherever I went in Germany, in the big or little cities, I found every available corner of ground utilized to grow something. Usually it was potatoes, which is the greatest staple of Germany, and which enters very largely into the composition of their "kriegsbrod" (war bread).

Crossing the North Sea from Kirkwall to the Norwegian coast gives one a rather crawly feeling. It is in the very midst of the danger zone. The lifeboats are all stripped and swung outward, life preservers distributed, searchlights turned on the flags flying at stern and mainmast and high-powered incandescents switched on the ship's side, where, in big letters, the name and nationality of the vessel are displayed.

Scandinavian Shipmen Prosper.

All the Scandinavian steamship lines are earning huge profits these days. The Holland-America line is also doing well, but because its ships have to go all the way around England and Scotland now, because they are not permitted to pass the English Channel between England and France, the journey usually takes longer for the ships leaving from Chris-

The ingenuity of the German industrialist is not confined exclusively to benefiting the populace. Sometimes he seeks to benefit himself. For example: The wholesale bakers must turn in a certain quantity of tickets for a given quantity of flour. The tickets are made out in small units, so a big number of the pasteboard pieces are required for flour requisition. To save time the German officials originated a system of weighing the tickets. Some clever fellow discovered that by dampening the tickets he increased their weight as much as 30 per cent. Thereafter ticket dampening was the favorite indoor sport of the bakers, until an acute inspector discovered the stratagem, and at once an order was issued invalidating tickets that were too moist.

The Germans are still firm in their belief that any neutral that is not pro-German is bought by "British gold." And as for the neutral press that dares print an anti-German story—why, it is plain that it is subsidized. This is a reflex of Bismarck's "reptile press" fund.

• • •

Most of the Germans seem quite sure that Italy and Rumania were bought by the allies, and they talk of Sonnino of Italy and Bratiano of Rumania as they do of Venizelos of Greece, as having been bought and paid for by England.

"Wilson Paid by British."

It is no uncommon thing in Germany to hear it said that the President of the United States has been subsidized by England, and this sort of talk is by no means confined to the lower classes. They even go so far as to say a million dollars was the price he was paid.

Of course, in German eyes the subsidization of the American press is quite complete. The New York Times has long been bandied about in Germany as being owned by English capital, and to this also they now add the statement that the New York Tribune is also owned by English interests. Nor has the World escaped this obloquy. Every time this paper prints what Germans regard as an unfriendly story there is an immediate resumption of gossip that the editors have had their pockets filled with coin of the allies. Reversely, these nations and those papers which have supported Germany's cause are actuated only—in German eyes—by highest ethical motives.

English and American papers in Germany cost, on an average, 25 cents apiece. Ten-cent American magazines cost 50 and 60 cents apiece, and the most expensive periodicals $1 to $1.50.

Prices in Copenhagen are staggering. This is because the Danish supplies have been sharply delimited to actual needs.

Copenhagen, once among the most brilliantly lighted cities of Europe, is now almost as dark as London, due to the heavy reduction in coal shipments forced by England.

The old "polizelliche reinigung" (police clean-up) of English and French words in the German language—that ridiculous effort made by Traugott von Jagow, police president of Berlin (not to be confused with Gottlieb von Jagow, Secretary for Foreign Affairs)—has ended. The English names have all been restored to shops, hotels and streets. In fact, one of the most conspicuous signs to be seen on the Linden, with rather an ironical touch to it, reads, "Shortest and cheapest route to London is via Vlissingen and Dover." Von Jagow has been transferred from Berlin to Breslau.

All bicycle tires have been commandeered in the empire, except where it can be proved that bicycles are necessities. Boys who live more than three kilometers from school are permitted to keep their wheels and those used by delivery purposes are left with their tires. The stripped wheels are to be refitted later with a rattan tire that is now being developed and which is said to have a great resiliency and to be "just as good" as rubber.

Fear of Spies Still Prevalent.

The fear of spies is still prevalent in Germany, but it is equalled by the prevalence of the German spies working in their own country. No American visits there without having every article he has with him subjected to minute but secret inspection. Recently some members of American diplomatic corps visiting in Berlin experienced this when all the papers they had with them were ransacked.

I was told in Germany, and received plausible confirmation of the statement in Denmark and here in America, that Russia was compelling many of her subjects now in this country to return for service in the Czar's army by fining and imprisoning relatives of those who failed to obey the mandate. Information of the danger in which they place their relatives by their refusal to return is conveyed to the Russians in America through the Russian Consulates, and it is usually effective in forcing them to go back. Russian steerage travel between American ports and Scandinavia because of this pressure has been unusually heavy in the last year.

An item of interest to Americans is that the beautiful Marie Barnes is now a resident of Berlin, where she occupies one of the most sumptuously furnished apartments on the Tiergartenstrasse, one of Berlin's most fashionable thoroughfares. It will be recalled that, after an interesting career in New York, she married a wealthy Chilean named Creel, and more than two years ago, after divorcing him, became involved in an affair in Paris with Walter de Mumm, a member of the wealthy champagne family. She shot De Mumm, but influence brought to bear in her behalf prevented any legal aftermath. Then she disappeared from sight, and now reappears in the German capital, where among her suitors is to be found a young member of one of the wealthiest families of the world, who, in spite of parental objections, is persistent in his attentions. Her dinners, which are always quiet affairs, are attended by the members of what was formerly called the gay set, and her guests frequently include distinguished visitors from Germany's allies.

War Breaks Rothschild Ties.

By way of showing the manner in which the war has broken family ties, the Rothschild family has representatives in the armies of five of the belligerents—Germany, Austria, France, England and Belgium. All are first cousins.

Almost all the big cities of Germany support racing meetings twice a week. Betting machines are used, and the total of the wagers reaches astounding figures. Sixteen per cent is taken from the amount bet, 10 per cent of which goes to the State for charitable work and 6 per cent remains for the racing association. American jockeys and trainers are still working in Germany, although their former popularity has waned. Archibald is the leading jockey of the empire, and McCreary, Taral and Campbell are the leading trainers.

Good candy in Berlin costs $3 a pound. This is because chocolate and sugar are so hard to get.

The censorship on mail between Austria and Germany is just as strict as between Germany and America, in spite of the alliance, and travelers to and from Austria and Germany are subjected to as rigid an inspection as if they came from a neutral country.

The search a traveler undergoes in entering or leaving Germany is one that he or she is not likely to forget easily. They are stripped and their mouths, ears, noses and other parts of the body are examined. Their fountain pens are emptied, every scrap of paper taken away, and even matches are confiscated. If they wear bandages, these must be stripped off, too. No distinction is drawn between men and women—except, of course, that the women are examined by female inspectors.

By way of showing favor to the Swiss Republic, Germany does not censor Swiss mail passing through the empire, although France does. All other mail is censored in Germany, although they did not begin the practice until long after the English had taken it up.

Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg's only son was killed in the war, and in the last month Premier Asquith lost his son, too. The Chancellor was deeply affected by his son's death. He is a broken man and only the pressure of his duties keeps him going.

During my stay in Berlin I visited three Germans who are well known in America—Dr. Dernburg, Capt. von Papen and Capt. Boy-Ed. All three were recalled from their official duties in this country at the request of Washington Dernburg is philosophical as regards his work in America. He expressed himself as being without rancor over the treatment he had received. He was living in his beautiful home in Grunewald-Berlin and is working on housing plans for the poor. Boy-Ed, who was formerly the German naval attache in this country, still holds the position of intelligence officer, on the Admiralty staff which he assumed upon his return from this country. He is very bitter over his recall and insists that American officials and newspapers did not give him a square deal. Capt. von Papen I found the cheeriest of all. The former military attache, after six weeks of bitter fighting in the front line trenches on the Somme, is now chief of the staff of Major-General Count von Schweinitz, commanding the first division of the guards, which is standing near Thiepval, in the very midst of the fiercest English offensive. He is extremely popular with his associates and has proved himself an officer of a high degree of efficiency. He spoke of America and Americans in a friendly manner, and asked me to express his regards to the friends he left behind him in America and the hope that he would see them soon in a happier time. He even included the New York World in his list of friends, which was an evidence of good sportsmanship, since it was largely the revelations of that paper which caused his recall.

Boelke a National Hero.

Capt. Boelcke, the great fighting aviator of the German army, who recently brought down his thirtieth enemy machine, is one of the national heroes of Germany, and his popularity is almost as great in England. He is a young man of engaging personality, and a thorough-going sportsman, which has greatly endeared him to his English opponents.

The women conductors of the street care in Berlin are perhaps frail in physique, but what they lack in strength to subdue unruly passengers, they make up in the length of the hatpins they wear through their caps. These pins have proved great persuaders—even the most boisterous passenger succumbs to their thrusts.

With all the pressure being exerted against Germany from a military standpoint, she is far from being beaten. On the contrary, her people believe, and justifiably so, that, viewed from the ground, she may rightly claim success. What chiefly concerns the German populace is Germany's internal politics.

Criminals as War Heroes.

cover the transportation of their armies to Manchuria and Korea; and Great Britain has always used her navy to protect her trade routes. A favorite statement for the uses of a navy has been generally expressed in the phrase, "Command of the seas. But clearly this phrase does not cover the whole case, for the reason that the U-53 was doing something useful for her Government, and yet she did not have 'command of the sea.'

"There are some who believe that the probability of our becoming involved in a war with a great naval nation is so slight that blockade is not worth thinking about. Perhaps the time has come when it will be well to consider what factors determine the degree of probability.

"It is clear that as between two countries of equal wealth, the probability of war varies with the disparity between their navies, and unless other nations are involved, is practically zero if their navies are equal in power. Therefore, the greatest probability of war is between two countries of which one is more rich and the other the more powerful.

"In other words, the most pregnant cause of war is the combination of conflicting interests with disparity in power. We must realize that it is not enough to consider the situation as it is now, between us and any given foreign Power; but that it is necessary to look at least as many years ahead as it will take to get ready to meet that foreign Power.

"Let us take any foreign power and call that power X. How long would it take us to get ready to meet X? Let us say 10 years. Question: Are we sure that we shall remain at peace with X for 10 years?

"This can only be answered by the man so wise that he knows what the international situation and the commercial situation will be 10 years hence.

"Let him speak.

"Following the procedure that many great nations have followed in the past, it would not be an unexpectable thing for even Great Britain, our nearest international relative, if she saw us gradually surpassing her in commercial strength, to challenge us while our navy was weak, relatively to hers, and crush us. It has often been said that Great Britain could not afford to go to war with us, because so many of her commercial interests would suffer. Of course they would suffer for awhile. But commercial interests suffer in commercial wars, and yet commercial wars are carried on frequently and relentlessly until one party or the other has to yield.

"Just now Great Britain does not wish to crush us—it is certain, however, that she can. It is certain that the richest country in the world lies defenseless against the powerful, and that we could not alter this condition in 10 years, even if we started now to build and develop a navy that would be adequate in time.

"In case the degree of probability of war with Great Britain, now or at any future time, seems so small that we need not consider her, are there no other great Powers with whom the degree of probability of war is great enough to make it wise for us to consider them? After the treaty of peace shall have been signed, and all the nations now warring find themselves bound together by the tie of a common necessity (that of getting money) is it inconceivable that they should turn eager eyes toward the richest and weakest country in the world? And is it inconceivable that the eyes of the Orient should turn towards her at the same time?

"Such ideas seem to be forming in the public mind gradually and doubtfully. But the recent submarine attacks so near our Atlantic Coast tend to crystallize those ideas and awaken the people to the fact that an epochal thing has happened and that the living and growing danger of blockade has been pointed out."

NOBODY CAN TELL IF YOU DARKEN YOUR GRAY, FADED HAIR WITH SAGE TEA

Druggist Says that Sage Tea when Mixed with Sulphur Prevents Dandruff and Stops Falling Hair.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added then left to age and carefully filtered will turn gray streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss. Some druggists make their own, but it isn't nearly so nice as Wyeth's.

While wispy gray faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur no one can tell because it does it so naturally; so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Do this tonight and by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, after another application or two it will be restored to its natural color and be even more glossy, soft and luxuriant than ever.

Local druggists say they are selling lots of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur;" it surely helps folks appear years younger.—ADV.

SUBMARINE AGITATION IN GERMANY RAGES AROUND BETHMANN-TIRPITZ FEUD

American Observer, After Six Months Visit to Empire, Analyzes Present Campaign for Relentless Warfare and Tells Why He Believes Chancellor Will Be Overthrown and United States Drawn Into the War.

THE following survey of the agitation in Germany for a renewal of unrestricted submarine war was written by William C. Bullitt, a member of the editorial staff of the Philadelphia Public Ledger. Mr. Bullitt has just returned from a prolonged stay in Germany during which he came in contact with all classes of opinion in his effort to learn just what Germany may do in this crisis that so vitally concerns the United States.

By WILLIAM C. BULLITT,

A Staff Correspondent of the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

TO play Cassandra is a pleasant but dangerous sport; and to prophesy in regard to coming events of the present war is particularly perilous. For one can predict with certainty that the unexpected is sure to happen about twice a week. And the fate of soothsayers, like the once major-prophet, H. G. Wells, is a warning to the boldest minor-oracle.

Yet, in the present Anno Censore's 2, when the Berlin correspondent of an American newspaper has his 5000-word manuscript pared to 3000 words when it leaves Berlin, and when the 3000-word remnant in transit to America is reduced to 1000 words by a British knife it becomes the privilege of Americans to return from the other side of the censor's looking glass to shriek from the house-tops the prophecy which is in every mouth in Berlin. That prophecy is: "Germany probably will begin again to sink merchant ships without warning before the spring of 1917."

I have had conversation—some intimate, some interviewy; some publishable, some confidential—with several Germans, Austrians and Hungarians of all ranks, classes and parties, among whom were Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs von Jagow, his assistant, Excellenz Zimmerman; Secretary of State for the Interior Helffrich, Secretary of State for the Colonies Solf, President Havenstein of the Reichsbank, President von Gwinner of the Deutsche Bank, President Guttmann of the Dresdener Bank; half a dozen lesser bank presidents; Albert Ballin, director of the Hamburg-American line; Dr. Walther Rathenau, president of Germany's greates electrical company and organizer of Germany's war industries; Theodor Wolff, editor of the Berliner Tageblatt; Bernstein, Sudekum and David of the conflicting wings of the Socialist party; Gen. von Bissing, the Governor of Belgium; other Generals at the front, and scores of officers, half a dozen Princes, as many cabmen, Anna who brought breakfast in the morning, and Counts Tisza, Apponyi and Andrassy, the strong men of Austria-Hungary.

After a thousand such conversations, I conclude that to generalize about "the opinion of Germany" is to lie. There is no "opinion of Germany." There are 64,000,000 opinions in Germany.

German Opinion Varies.

It is the American habit to paint Germany in monochrome; and the color employed is bloody red. That is the appropriate hue for Von Tirpitz, Count Reventlow, Bassermann and their followers, who spring chiefly from the Conservative and National Liberal parties, the army and navy. But there are Germans who hold opinions of every shade from that of bloody red to the ultra-violet of the Bernstein, Haase, Ledebour Socialist minority. Those Germans are pacificists and idealists of a virginity as pure as that of Mr. Ford. The Chancellor and the officials of the Foreign Office stand on the Socialist side of the spectrum at about the post of green.

Indeed, the Chancellor, in his view of human relationships, resembles Lord Grey more than he resembles Von Tirpitz. And there is more likeness between Von Tirpitz and Sir Edward Carson than between Von Tirpitz and Von Jagow. It is almost safe to say that Von Tirpitz and the Chancellor hate one another more cordially and completely than either hates his counterpart across the Channel. They disagree on every question connected with the making of war and the making of peace. As a result, there is a rift between the navy and the Foreign Office which is deep and pitted with hatred.

Tirpitz and the officers of the navy, Falkenhayn and most of the officers of the army, nearly all the junkers (landed aristocracy) and the majority of captains of industry believe that "A German peace" can be obtained only by the immediate recommencement of the sink-without-warning submarine war. Bethmann-Hollweg, the Socialists, the radicals, who represent largely tradesmen and shopkeepers; the "centrum," the Roman Catholic party, whose strength comes from Bavaria, Baden and the Rhine provinces; the ship owners, the bankers and the Anglophiles who cluster about Dr. Hans Delbruck and hope still for a reapproachement with England, France and the United States, believe that Germany can obtain a desirable peace without beginning again to sink without warning, and fear that the embroilment of the United States would prolong the war indefinitely. The Chancellor's speech at the opening of the Reichstag, in its most vital passage, contained an expression of this idea:

What the Chancellor Meant.

"The German statesman who would hesitate to use against this enemy (England) every available instrument of battle that will really shorten the war, such a statesman should be hanged."

As I read it, that passage is a reaffirmation of the Chancellor's belief that the war would be lengthened and not shortened by the ruthless use of submarines and the consequent embroilment of the United States.

The Chancellor and his supporters are opposed to the submarine war simply because they believe it will not pay. They do not object to it as "inhuman." A very few tender-hearted Germans felt sad about the drowned women and children of the Lusitania. But Germany is swimming in such a sea of blood, sudden death is so commonplace, so much a part of daily life that to most Germans the drowning of 1200 noncombatants seemed but the natural way of all flesh. And I have yet to meet a German who does not consider President Wilson's favorite phrase, "The sacred principles of justice and humanity," a piece of very particular buncombe, constructed for the exclusive annoyance of the Fatherland. "Sacred principles!" scoffs Excellenz Zimmermann of the Foreign Office. "Would or would not England blow up every 'principle' between here and the throne of heaven rather than see a German column marching in a Kentish lane? How many principles of international law are broken by England's blockade?"

In the Reichstag the Chancellor's support is provided by the 110 Socialist members, the 44 representatives of the Fortschrittliche Volkspartei and the 88 members of the Roman Catholic "Centrum." Dr. David, intellectual leader of the Socialist majority, believes that these forces will remain united in opposition to the resumption of sinking without warning. "I do not believe that the submarine war will be started either this autumn or next spring," he said to me two weeks ago. "I believe that the same Socialist, Radical and Center forces, which were too strong for the relentless war party before, will be too strong again. There are two great weaknesses in the case of those who favor the relentless U-boat war: First, the fact that from 80 to 90 per cent of the workingmen of the country are opposed to adding to the list of

Nuxated Iron to Make New Age of Beautiful Women and Ambitious Iron Men

Say Well-Known Physicians---Quickly Puts Roses Into the Cheeks of Women and Most Astonishing Strength Into the Veins of Men---It Often Increases the Strength and Endurance of Delicate, Nervous, "Run-Down" Folks 200 Per Cent in Two Weeks' Time.

A Wonderful Discovery Which Promises to Mark a New Era in Medical Science.

NEW Rx
Nuxated Iron (5gr)
Sig- Two after meals
3 times a day
King M.D.

Since the remarkable discovery of organic iron, Nuxated Iron or "Fer Nuxate," as the French call it, has taken the country by storm, it is conservatively estimated that over five million persons daily are taking it in this country alone. Most astonishing results are reported from its use by both physicians and laymen. So much so that well-known doctors predict that we shall soon have a new age of far more beautiful, rosy-cheeked women and ambitious iron men.

Dr. King, a well-known New York physician and author, when interviewed on the subject, said: "There can be no ambitious iron men without iron. Pallor means anemia. Anemia means iron deficiency. The skin of anemic men and women is pale; the flesh flabby; the muscles lack tone; the brain fags and the memory fails and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks.

"In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated cornmeal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked are responsible for another grave iron loss.

"Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful strength and ambition to a ripe old age you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt."

Dr. Sauer, one of the most widely known physicians in this country, who has studied abroad in great European medical institutions, said: "As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength-builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take simple nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver, heart trouble, etc. The real and true cause which started their disease was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by a lack of iron in the blood.

"Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with a blood pressure of a boy of twenty and as full of health, strength and ambition as a young man; in fact, a young man he really was, notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking iron—Nuxated Iron had filled him with renewed life. At thirty he was in bad health; at forty-six he was care-worn and nearly all in. Now at fifty a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate, or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children is, alas! not that kind of iron. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete and prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray; while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, another New York physician, said: "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication, as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But in the case of Nuxated Iron I feel I would be remiss in my duty not to mention it. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, health and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians both in Europe and America. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Co. and all good druggists.—ADV.

our enemies; second, the fact that England cannot be starved out by U-boats, because by simply closing both ends of the channel it would be possible always for England to obtain wheat by way of France, and the submarines would have to blockade the whole coast of France as well."

Crisis in the Spring.

Theodor Wolff, editor of the Berliner Tageblatt, which represents the point of view of the Fortschrittlicht Volkspartie is not so certain.

"The Chancellor is absolutely confident that he will have a majority of the Reichstag this autumn. What will happen next spring if the winter is hard and food is short, and no end in sight—well, no one can tell," is the way he puts the matter. The Centrum is composed of ordinary people who will listen to reason and they may swing away from the Chancellor.

Ballin and the other great leaders of German shipping stand unitedly against war with America, which would mean the immediate confiscation of their ships now in American waters, and possibly those in South American waters as well.

The bankers oppose the resumption of the sink-without-warning warfare, because they hope after the war to find in America boundless sources of credit and raw products. Indeed, it was the banker, Helfferich, then Secretary of the Treasury, who finally swayed the council at the great headquarters in April to peace with America. At the last moment the Chancellor called him from Berlin and he announced that he could not be responsible for the effect on Germany's financial condition of a war with America. Helfferich, who is now Minister of the Interior, remains the Chancellor's strongest supporter in his fight with the followers of Tirpitz.

The Chancellor's forces are strong—they include all "better Germany"—that is to say, all the liberal-minded Teutons—and most of the "plain people." But as Ballin remarked to me: "The people and what they want have very little to do with the matter. So long as the Emperor retains confidence in Bethmann the submarine war will not be recommenced. And I have no doubt that Bethmann and Helfferich will remain in power till the end of the war and will negotiate the peace."

The Emperor retains confidence in Bethmann at the present moment. The dismissal of Falkenhayn was a definite victory for the Chancellor. Falkenhayn believed in "sink without warning" and in an advance on the west front. Moreover, it is commonly said that he desired the chancellorship for himself. Hindenburg, who is entirely devoid of political ambitions, is said to agree with the Chancellor on the submarine matter and also to plan an advance against Russia, which is in line with the Chancellor's peace hopes.

Numerous Anonymous Pamphlets

The anonymous pamphlets, when they rise above mere abuse of the Chancellor, present a persuasive argument, an argument which has made headway at considerable speed during the last few months with the professors, schoolmasters, lawyers, doctors, authors, scientists and other intellectuals to whom it is addressed. The Tirpitz argument runs thus:

"England is now and forever will be Germany's greatest enemy. Both nations live by their industries and their overseas trade. The smaller of these great industrial competitors lies directly across the trade routes of the larger. Whenever the industries of Germany begin to surpass the industries of England, England will organize a war against Germany, and with her fleet will cut off Germany' trade. The present war was organized by Edward VII and his successors for this very purpose."

(And here follows a quotation from the British economist who wrote, "If Germany should be destroyed every Englishman would be richer the next day.")

"What England desires in the present war is an absolute dismemberment of Germany, a destruction of Germany's industries, an indemnity which will leave Germany paralyzed for a century. England is our inevitable and implacable enemy."

(Here be it noted that every utterance like Mr. Lloyd-George's latest "till-Prussian - military - despotism - is - broken-beyond-repair" interview, increases the Tirpitz party by many thousands.)

"Against this enemy we have one weapon—a weapon which if used as it should be would put England at our feet, and would make us the industrial masters of Europe and rulers of the sea. With the hundreds of submarines we now have in commission we can starve England to death within three months. It is legal to sink merchantmen without warning, for we can establish an absolute blockade of England, like the investment of a city. We can now keep from 150 to 200 submarines constantly in the waters about England and no ship can pass them without being sunk.

"If the United States should make war on us over such a blockade, it would merely prove that the United States has a secret understanding with England and that in any event the United States will come to England's aid if England is in real danger of losing the war.

Blames United States.

"The United States' shipments of munitions alone prevented our defeating France and England in eight weeks. Without munitions from the United States it would be impossible for the allies to keep up their present offensives. Even if we cannot starve out England so quickly as we expect, we can at least stop all exports of munitions from the United States to England and France.

"Even if the United States should come into the war, she could do us no more harm than she is doing us today. The United States has an army which is not large enough to handle Mexico. Her navy contains no ships which would be valuable additions to the French and British fleets. Moreover, if the United States should go to war with us there would be immediate civil war, for the Germans in America would at once take arms for the Fatherland. How long will you go on without meat, butter and milk? How long will your sons be killed in thousands by American shells? Just so long as Bethmann-Hollweg remains Chancellor. Just so long as your leader refuses to use your deadliest weapon against your deadliest enemy."

That is the Tirpitz argument. To a German who has lost three sons and has not had enough to eat for six months it is very persuasive. It offers him an end of his sufferings and an outlet for the most burning passions in his body. Hatred of England and of the United States. These hatreds are the emotional motive power behind the movement for the resumption of sinking without warning.

The flame of Germany's hatred of England is fanned to vivid life three times a day, at least, in every German family—at the table where breakfast, dinner and supper ought to be. As the menu diminishes, as the weariness increases, the hatred grows. Certainly Germany hates England much more today than six months ago. But it is a quiet, deep hatred that has nothing to do with the flamboyant "Gott strafe England" craze of the war's early days.

In depth, intensity and general diffusion, the hatred of the United States almost equals the hatred of England. One meets it for the first time five minutes after setting foot on German soil at Warnemunde. The soldier to whom one's baggage and one's person are turned over for inspection leers, curls his lips and snarls: "This is a great pleasure. I don't often get my hands on an American nowadays." He is an educated man, possibly a schoolmaster in time of peane, and he proceeds with filthy refinement to insult one and one's wife until a single smash on the jaw seems worth a subsequent firing squad. When one appeals to the officer in charge of the frontier station one is met with a sneer. To fellow travelers from Sweden the officer behaves like a gentleman; he and his men reserve their insults for Americans.

Munitions Issue Everywhere.

On the train to Berlin one meets munitions for the first time. The fat gentleman oposite wants to know why the United States is so "furchtbar Englandfreundlich," and goes on to explain that the shipment of munitions is entirely illegal, that except for American munitions Germany would have won the war in eight weeks, that the war would be over in two months now if the United States would prohibit munition exports, and that his two brothers have both been killed by American shells.

One runs into this conversation at least a hundred times a month. Munitions are thrown at one by the members of the Foreign Office, by maidens at dinner, by police officials, by the most casual acquaintances. The laundress who has become quite friendly appears one day with tears and will not speak. Her husband has been wounded—by an American shell, his officer writes.

Maj. Griesel of the War Press Office decorates his desk with three shells made by the Bethlehem Steel Co., and his parting words are: "You tell people in America that the correspondents at the front cannot speak English because the soldiers who have been under American shell fire for two years would tear them to pieces if they knew them to be Americans."

This I believe to be quite untrue. But if it does not represent the point of view of the soldier, at least it illustrates the feelings of the Major. With most German officers American munitions are an obsession. No one is ever killed except by an American shell. At any rate, it never hurts to say that an American shell did the work, for the army officers are believers in Tirpitz, and every time a man can be convinced that his son has been blown to bits by a product of the United States there one more passionate advocate of sinking without warning.

One is dining with a most attractive member of the Foreign Office. As he stirs his coffee he muses, "Yes, I should say that the German people still hate England more than they hate the United States." That is about the truth. The United States is hated more in Germany than either France or Russia.

The Tirpitz party is sure that by working on this hatred of the United States, on the hatred of England, and on the general war weariness, it can create an overwhelming public sentiment in favor of sinking without warning before next spring. The opponents of sinking without warning believe there is an even chance that the Tirpitz party will be successful.

How We May Avoid War.

An even chance that the United States and Germany will be at war before May, 1917! That is my prediction. For I assume that there is no longer question in anyone's mind that if American citizens are sunk without warning there will be war between the United States and Germany. But I ignore, in making the above guess, two possibilities. I ignore them because they seem to me to be possibilities rather than probabilities. One is the possibility that Germany will suffer some great defeat during the next few months. That is highly improbable; but if it should take place, unquestionably the submarine war would be recommenced at once. It may be laid down as an axiom that if Germany is face to face with defeat the submarines will be turned loose. Germany will fight with every weapon between hell and heaven before she admits complete defeat. In that event no action by the Government of the United States could prevent our embroilment in the war.

If, on the other hand, as seems probable to me, the allies are able to advance only slowly during the coming year, the Government of the United States can do a great deal to prevent our embroilment in the conflict. The chance that our Government will take intelligent action to strengthen the hands of the anti-submarine party in Germany is the second possibility that I ignore in predicting that we are likely to be at war with Germany before next May.

The whole basis of the Tirpitz argument for the resumption of sinking without warning is the phrase, "The United States could do us no more harm as an open enemy than she is doing now as a neutral.'" Every step that the Government of the United States takes to create weapons which could be used with effect against Germany, in case we should go to war, puts another card into the hands of the German opponents of the submarine war, and into the hands of Ambassador Gerard. It is the opinion of those in closest touch with the matter that the immediate creation by the United States of a fleet of 1000 aeroplanes, which could be sent at a moment's notice to France and the creation of another fleet of 1000 submarine fighting motor boats of the type now made in the United States for England, would do a great deal to diminish the possibility of a resumption of sinking without warning. The Tirpitz party could no longer argue, as it can today, that we have no weapons which could harm Germany. Moreover, the creation of such fleets would prove to Germany that, if we are drawn into the war, we intend to go into it with every ounce of strength we possess.

We Should Warn Germany.

The illusion is almost universal in Germany that if we become embroiled we shall merely seize the German merchantmen now in our ports, and, for the rest, sit comfortably back playing Japan. Either officially or unofficially, we ought to assure the German Government and the leaders of German public opinion that if we go into the war we shall go in for blood.

Another illusion that is held by everyone in Germany, except the few men who know America well, is that in case of war the German-Americans would start a revolution, blow up factories and railroads, and inaugurate a reign of terror in the United States. How prevalent is this idea one true story will illustrate;

Under-Secretary of State Zimmermann is one of the sanest, most admirable and best-informed Germans. Yet at the time of the crisis last spring he said to Ambassador Gerard: "How can the United States go to war with Germany? We have in the United States 500,000 trained Germans, who would take up arms against you the moment war was declared!"

To which the American Ambassador replied with a remark for which every American should be grateful to him:

"You may have 500,000 trained German soldiers in the United States, but we have 500,001 lamp posts."

The German-Americans can serve to diminish the chance of war between Germany and the United States in no better way than by dispelling the illusion which still exists in the German mind that in case of war they would be traitors to their adopted country.

The Government of the United States can put another weapon into the hands of the German opponents of sinking without warning by getting into the German press the facts in regard to the supplies of munitions which we are now sending to the allies. The present belief of Germany is that every shell is an American shell.

Mail Relief Essential.

Nothing could do more to change the state of mind created by this belief than the publication of the actual proportion of the shells used by the allies which are produced in the United States. I am informed on good authority that the United States now supplies less than 10 per cent of the shells fired by the allies, and that the proportion of shells from the United States is constantly decreasing. If this be true, it is the duty of the United States Government to see that it is rubbed into the German mind. There are plenty of German newspapers of the type of the Frankfurter Zeitung and the Berliner Tageblatt which would be glad

TONE UP YOUR STOMACH

There is no tonic for the stomach that is not a tonic for every other part of the body. But the stomach depends, as does every other organ, on the blood for its energy.

There can be no perfect digestion without rich, red blood. This is scientifically true. The way then to tone up the stomach is to enrich the blood.

If your digestion is off and your blood is thin there can be no question about it. You need Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to restore the condition of your blood, use care in the selection of your diet and the stomach trouble will take care of itself.

Stomach trouble is debilitating. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a tonic and build up the weakened system generally.

Most stomach remedies try to digest your food for you. How much better it is to tone up the stomach so that it will do its own work as nature intended. There is no pleasure in eating pre-digested food. Tone up your stomach and your appetite and digestion will soon be normal.

A diet book will be sent free on request by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. Your own druggist sells Dr. Williams' Pink Pills or a box will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of fifty cents.—ADV to give the widest publicity to any authoritative figures on our production of munitions. Furthermore, we should make it clear that in case of war we could raise our munition production to 10 times its present figure.

Finally, the Government of the United States could do nothing which would add more strength to the supporters of Bethman in their fight with Tirpitz than to insist on the acceptance by England of the demands we have already made in regard to the passage of first-class mail to neutral countries. The failure to secure the passage of the mails has cut from under the feet of the opponents of Tirpitz the ground on which they stood last spring. At that time the German Liberals of the type of Dr. Paul Rohrbach and Dr. Hans Delbruck based their opposition to the submarine war on the note of the President of June, 1915, in which he said (I quote from memory), "I shall uphold the freedom of the seas from whatever quarter it is menaced." They argued: "Just as soon as the submarine controversy with Germany has been settled the President will insist that England's blockade be made to conform with international law."

Our failure to secure the free passage or even the first-class mail to Denmark has made it possible for the Tirpitz party to argue, with a show of reason. "The President is absolutely subservient to the English, and the United States is as much an ally of England in this war as any British colony."

Indeed, during the months I have been in Germany the feeling has grown in every one, from the heads of the Foregn Office to the smallest man in the street, that "the voice of America is the voice of England."

"It is perfectly right for the United States to take a stiff attitude with us and to demand that we come to terms," said one of the controllers of Germany's destiny to me two weeks ago, "but why do you let England walk all over you? You send us notes, each one of which is practically an ultimatum. You send a gentle note to England in the spring, get no answer by October, and do nothing about it. How can we help feeling that the voice of Wilson is the voice of England?"

(The allies' answer to the American note has since been received and promises of radical alterations in present methods is made.)

Americans know perfectly well that the voice of the United States is not the voice of England. But Germany never will be convinced of this until we insist that England back down to us on at least one of the illegalities of her blockade.

If we should force England to allow the passage of the first-class mail we would do much to improve the position of the opponents of sinking without warning. If England should continue to refuse our demands in this regard we should send an auxiliary cruiser every three weeks to bring the mail from Denmark. Such an action would raise a tide of sentiment against sinking without warning in Germany. In addition it would put an end to the present blockade of thought between Germany and the United States. This in itself is one of the greatest factors making for misunderstanding between the two countries. They are kept in thought-tight compartments; real interchange of opinion between them is impossible.

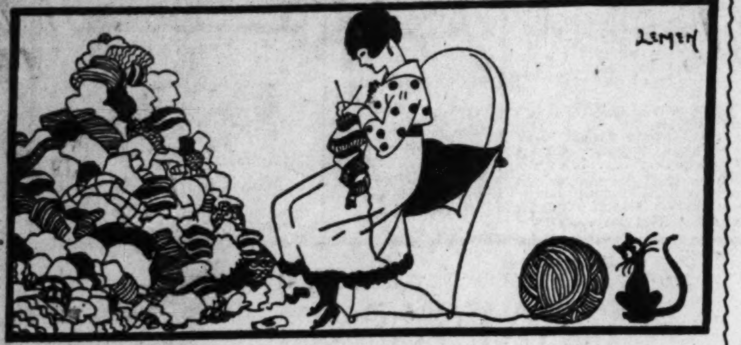
WHEN ARABELLA KNITS.



MISS ARABELLA SIMPKINS BROWN, while fall-time days are flitting,
Will most demurely sit her down and speed the hours with knitting.
She's knitting earmuffs for the Turks, suspenders for Armenians;
With flying fingers now she works on mackinaws for Fenians.
She's knitting socks for French poilus and caps for German Fritzes,
And even collars that they use for dachshunds and for spitzes.
She's knitting sweaters for the Poles and mufflers for Albanians,
And roomy moccasins with soles for rheumy old Rumanians.
She's knitting jerseys for the Kurd, and ulsters for the Hindoo,
Though, if we take the traveler's word, at home he makes his skin do.
For Belgian babes she's knitting boots, and bibs for Alsace kiddies,
And lovely striped bathing suits for England's valiant middies.
The colors all are deftly blent in yarns and gaudy flosses;
If Kaiser Wilhelm would consent she'd knit his iron crosses.
She's knitting crowns for needy Kings and fancy vests for peasants,
And lots of useful pretty things that Queens will get for presents.
Von Hindenburg and all his staff will be as pleased as kittens,
And sound a hearty Teuton laugh when they receive her mittens.
For all the world she sits and knits, in red and green and yellow,
A loving task that well befits our charming Arbella.

A LITTLE VAUDEVILLE.

"MORNING, Jinks."

"Hello, Binks, what's the matter with your voice?"

"Bad cold. I'm as dumb as an oyster."

"An oyster isn't dumb."

"Sure it is."

"Didn't you ever hear an Oyster Bay?"

"No, but I heard a lobster bark."

"What's that got to do with Oyster Bay?"

"O, it's not so very far from the subject."

"Cut out the politics."

"All right. What do you think of the German submarines?"

"They're the limit."

"No, they're beyond the limit."

"What made them shoot up the New England coast?"

"How could you expect anything else?"

"Why?"

"When they heard those Boston rooters singing Tessie."

"Is that a fierce song?"

"Sure, the Germans thought it was a declaration of war."

"Maybe they were trying to get in the world's series money."

"How?"

"By making hits off Shore."

"They ought to have been benched."

"For what?"

"For blocking the base."

"You know my brother that works in the city hall?"

"Yes."

"Well, he's bought one of them submarines."

"What for?"

"So he can submerge when the boss asks him for a campaign contribution."

"What's he going to do with the money he saves on it?"

"Put it in the sinking fund."

A LOOK AROUND

by

Clark McAdams

IT will surprise a great many of us to learn that the country is not doing well. Contrasting it with the other great nations, which are suffering a severe lapse, we cannot help feeling that it is doing very well, indeed. If Col. Roosevelt or someone of that sort said the country is not doing well, no importance whatever could be attached to it in a column like this. It would be attributed at once to political passion, which deceives fewer people all the time.

However, it happens to be Mr. B. F. Winchell, traffic director of the Union Pacific Railroad, who says this about us. He says we are neither giving ourselves nor our best thought to our country. She needs more of our time—thought—energy. She needs us now. Mr. Winchell knows what the trouble is. We follow too much the line of least resistance. We leave to the other fellow too frequently those things which we know very well ought to be done.

It is quite so. Probably Mr. Winchell does it. Probably Mr. Winchell is pulling pretty hard for Mr. Winchell and not very hard for the betterment of the republic. No more shocking revelation would be possible than to learn exactly what part of our thought we give to the betterment of the republic. It is exactly like any other organization to which we merely belong, but in which we have no official capacity. Every one of us knows that we take only a casual interest in those things of which we are no part of the management. It is just so with the republic. Mr. Wilson is President. It is for him to dwell upon such things while the rest of us pull as hard as we can for ourselves.

How much more seriously a man takes his country than he takes his club is uncertain. When thousands of our people blithely crossed the Canadian border and took up their residence beneath the British flag without a regret to which any voice was given, a lot of us wondered. Many of those people emigrated from places like Pike County, Mo., where the peculiar advantages of living under our own flag had been preached for a great many years with particular persuasiveness.

Mr. Winchell has us. We are a selfish, self-centered, unworthy lot—unworthy alike of Plymouth Rock, Woodrow Wilson and the Constitutional Convention.

No Fun to Revive National Thinking.

IT is no fun to revive national thinking. This country did a lot of it in the beginning. It was like everything else new. A republic had been fashioned out of great popular needs, and everybody was enthusiastic about it. If you ever built a house, marked your bubbling spirits at the time, and watched yourself grow colder from year to year, you know how it has been with the people of the United States. After the Civil War we were so sick of national thinking and the bloody consequence of having put down slavery that we left it alone. The result was the exploitation of the country. It went on steadily for almost 50 years. It was Col. Roosevelt who spilled the beans. He conceived the idea of making a greater use of the country than anyone had ever made. He was going to do more politically than Mr. Rockefeller had done commercially. We woke up, turned on the lights, and chased him down the fire escape. A little later Mr. Wilson came on the scene. We were ripe for the resumption of national thinking. Schoolmaster that he was, he had a complete set of studies of exactly this kind all mapped out for us. We could take our choice between the political and the progressive courses. We chose the progressive course.

That is what has happened. Mr. Winchell, of course, knows about it. The point he is making is that we ourselves initiate nothing for the good of the republic. It is our republic, and still not our republic. Too many people own it to create proprietary pride in an individual. Americans are accustomed to large possessions. They are not the people who would take any pride in a one-hundred-millionth part of a republic. If one cared to make a laughable demonstration of this, one would only have to approach the average man and ask him to choose between a new, 12-cylinder car and whatever ideals he has for the republic. He would ride away in the car. That would be something for him. The other would be too indefinite, too unselfish to make it worth sacrificing anything for. Possibly later, after we get ours, we will give the republic all the time and thought anyone could ask. It is not that we love the country less, but that we love ourselves more. If one has money, one can always find some place where the government is satisfactory. It is the kind of country that poor people want that has to be set up in the wilderness.

The War at Our Gates.

IT is truly terrible about Europe bringing her war to our very gates. Mr. Roosevelt has it that this is the result of Mr. Wilson's weakness. We suppose it was due to the weakness of France that our Civil War was taken to her gates, when the Kearsarge sank the Alabama. As we recall that celebrated encounter, the facts were something like this:

The Emperor, Napoleon III, reigned in France at that time. A weak and vacillating character; he wrote notes and hid under the bed through the terrific encounter in this country until the war finally decided to go over and get him. The Alabama was the most successful raider the Confederacy had. She put into Cherbourg for repairs to her wireless. While she was there the Federal man-of-war Kearsarge entered the same harbor. The harbor master called up the Emperor on the telephone and the following conversation ensued:

"Your Excellency, there are two American fighting ships in the harbor."

"Are they on opposite sides?"

"Yes. What shall I do about it?"

"Tell them to get out and settle their differences outside the three-mile limit."

"Do you mean they can fight at our very gates?"

"Of course they can. We will also sell both sides ammunition if they haven't enough to settle their differences."

"Very well, your Excellency."

Of course, that did for Napoleon III. Everybody in the republic who wore spectacles and had big teeth said that if he had maintained the rights of France and given both sides to understand that no monkey business would be tolerated, there would have been no naval battle outside of Cherbourg.

History always repeats itself. It is one of the few things on which you can safely place your money.

CHILD GETS SICK, CROSS, FEVERISH WHEN CONSTIPATED

Look at tongue! Then give fruit laxative for stomach, liver, bowels.

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm children and they love it.

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign the little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the waste bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs" then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." —ADV.

CHANGE IS MADE IN GRAND OPERA CAST

Mme. Marie Rappold Will Take the Place of Mme. Emmy Destinn.

Mme. Marie Rappold of the Metropolitan Opera Company will replace Mme. Emmy Destinn in the role of Leonora in "Il Trovatore" at the Ellis Opera Company's St. Louis engagement, it was announced yesterday. Mme. Destinn ventured into Austria to visit her fiance, Dinh Gilly, the Arabian tenor, who is interned there, and was herself interned by the authorities at Prague, Bohemia. Negotiations are on foot for the soprano's release, but she will be unable to return to this country in time to join the Ellis company's tour.

The troupe starts today on its tour in a special train, and will visit Toledo, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Omaha, Kansas City, Fort Worth, Tulsa, St. Louis and Cincinnati. Its repertory consists of only two operas, "Carmen" and "Il Trovatore," and these will be presented at the Coliseum on the nights, respectively, of Nov. 1 and 2.

Geraldine Farrar will take the part of Carmen, and will be assisted by Lucien Muratore, noted French tenor, as Don Jose; Helen Stanley as Micaela, Clarence Whitehall as Escamillo and Leon Rothier as Zuniga. Albertina Rasch of the Vienna Royal Opera will be first dancer of the ballet. Cleofonte Campanini, director of the Chicago Grand Opera Co., will conduct both performances.

It is said that at Tulsa the advance sale has already reached $18,000, but that, according to the local management, the St. Louis sale has not as yet attained this figure.

Travelogue on Colorado Tonight.

A travelogue on Colorado and the Rockies will be given before Missouri Lodge No. 22, I. O. B. B., at 7:30 tonight, at Harburger Hall, King's highway and Von Versen avenues. The work of the National Jewish Hospital for Consumptives at Denver will be explained. This meeting will also be known as Isaac Fuld night, in honor of Isaac Fuld, who joined the order Oct. 16, 1856. He is 83 years old and will be present.

WEAR A WATCH. Credit at Loftis Bros. & Co., 2d floor, 308 N. Sixth st.

The Elleardsville Civic League will hold a public meeting at Pendleton and St. Ferdinand avenues at 4 o'clock this afternoon to discuss the school bond issue. W. J. S. Bryan, assistant superintendent of instruction of the Board of Education, will speak.

Kansas City Unions Fighting Dickey for Senate as Foe of Organized Labor

Was Member of the Manufacturers' Association in 1913

Republican Nominee Is Making Campaign on Platform That He Is Big Business Man.

Dickey Interest Said to Have Got $139,000 in Gas Franchise Deal in Kansas City.

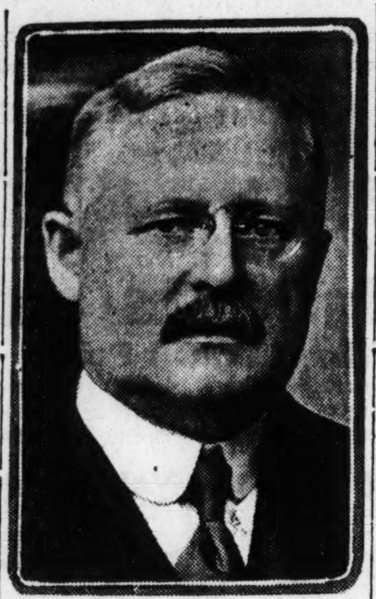
WALTER S. DICKEY, Republican nominee for United States Senator, is making an active campaign over Missouri on a platform that he is a business man, and that since he came to Missouri from Canada, 22 years ago, he has built up one of the largest and most successful business enterprises in the State, the Dickey Clay Manufacturing Co.

Dickey's opponent, Senator James A. Reed, and other Democratic speakers, are charging that his immense wealth, estimated to a Post-Dispatch reporter by one of his Kansas City business associates at from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000, was obtained by being an adept at the schemes of "big business" and by a long fight against organized labor. It is charged also that he has long been a member of employers' organizations which have had for their principal object opposition to union labor; that he was a member of the National Association of Manufacturers, whose costly and extensive lobby at Washington was exposed some time ago by the New York World and the Post-Dispatch; that he is a member of the Employers' Association of Kansas City, which wages a relentless warfare on union labor, and that he attempted to force through the Kansas City Council a 50-cent natural gas franchise ordinance, and that when competition from the powerful "Gas Trust" began forcing down the price to be charged for gas, he joined with the "Gas Trust" in a secret agreement which ultimately brought financial gain for himself.

Dickey's Firm in Association.

Within the past three weeks there has been circulated among employers of labor in Kansas City a letter signed by H. H. Anderson, secretary of the Employers' Association, urging employers to co-operate to oppose legislation advocated by labor unions.

The letterhead contains the name of F. L. Dickey, a brother of the candidate, as a member of the association's Executive Committee. Investigation by a Post-Dispatch reporter disclosed that the association consists of business firms, and not of individuals, and that the W. S. Dickey Clay Manufacturing Co., not F. L. Dickey, is the member.



WALTER S. DICKEY.

Walter S. Dickey is the sole owner of the W. S. Dickey company.

The letter has aroused union labor officials in Kansas City to increased opposition to Dickey. The letter follows:

WILL YOU READ IT?

Gentlemen—If union labor is a public benefit, it should be encouraged and patronized. If union labor is oppressive, overbearing, unreasonable and a public detriment, it should be muzzled.

Labor conditions are growing from bad to worse all over the country. Unless their demands are met by concerted action on the part of organized employers, Kansas City will soon be in the grasp of labor agitators. Business enterprises will be paralyzed, as they are today in San Francisco, where their Chamber of Commerce has determined to raise $1,000,000 for the purpose of putting an end to the present strike, and bring about conditions wherein any and all men may find employment, without paying tribute to labor unions.

The street railways of New York are tied up. The dairy business of Cleveland and St. Louis are today out of business, on account of drivers' demands. The dairy drivers have forbidden grocery and bakery wagons to come, and will not permit ice to be delivered, to the dairy companies by union teamsters.

Can we expect organized labor in Kansas City to rest quietly and refuse to participate in the "labor movement" that is being promoted in other cities? Unless prompt action is taken for self-protection, Kansas City will be "union ridden," as many other large cities are. What is being done by the business interest to head of the advances of organized labor? Does anyone imagine that organized labor has sufficient pride in this city's welfare to withhold its death-dealing hand, should an opportunity arise to promote its selfish ends?

Labor unions demand that you must do business under their dictation, regardless of profits or protests. If you think union labor is competent to dictate the policy, name the wages and hours which must govern your business; then, without resistance, you should invite them in and let them take charge. If, on the contrary, one cannot subscribe to their policy and is determined to do business without outside interference, now is the time to "get busy" and make "preparedness." WILL YOU awaken before the crisis?

Should labor agitators have enacted into laws all that they have mentioned in their requests for "Legislation Wanted," the business man will soon wake up. Their Legislative Committee is at work.

The Employers' Association is perfecting arrangements to prevent a "tie-up" of industries in Kansas City, to oppose the enactment of laws that will injure business and place undue burdens on employers. Will you co-operate with us for mutual protection?

Yours truly,

H. H. ANDERSON,
Secretary.

Union Leader Against Dickey.

John T. Smith of Kansas City, organizer in Missouri for the American Federation of Labor, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that in his opinion every union labor man in Kansas City, except those who placed party affiliations above their own interests, would vote against Dickey.

"Dickey and union labor never have been friendly," said Smith. "Ten or 12 years ago I organized the employes of the Dickey clay pipe plant here. Dickey refused to sign an agreement with the union, and for a year union men worked for him under a verbal agreement.

"At the end of that year the union demanded that he sign the agreement. He again refused and I pulled all the union men out of the plant. He put strike-breakers in their places, and ever since that time he has employed nonunion men in his plants.

"The Dickey plant is on the unfair list of the Carpenters' Union in Kansas City, and at the meeting of the State Federation of Labor in Joplin three weeks ago a resolution was introduced to have him declared unfair by the State federation.

"The resolution was referred to R. T. Wood, president of the State Federation of Labor, with authority to act on the resolution. He has not yet announced his decision.

"The slogan of union labor now is, 'Partisan to a principle, but not to a party.' We believe in protecting our friends and defeating our enemies. Pursuing that policy union labor in Kansas City, where it knows Dickey, is opposing him."

In Manufacturers' Association.

Dickey was a member of the National Association of Manufacturers, which maintained a lobby in Washington for many years for the purpose of influencing legislation in Congress.

This was one of the lobbies denounced by President Wilson at the first Congress after he became President. Revelations of its ramifications in a congressional investigation conducted largely by Senator Reed and brought about by the Post-Dispatch's exposure of the lobby startled the country in 1913. It was shown that Government employes were bribed by agents of the lobby to reveal confidential information, that some members of Congress actually were on its payroll, and that it pursued relentlessly members of Congress who were friendly to organized labor and would not do the bidding of the lobby. It was shown that agents of the Manufacturers' Association supplied money to defeat unfriendly Congressmen for re-election.

Dickey's membership in the association is shown in an official list of its members published by it several years ago.

Dickey's connection with the Kansas City natural gas franchise has been the subject of litigation in the Kansas City Circuit Court, the Missouri Supreme Court and has been brought prominently forward in nearly every Kansas City campaign for more than 10 years.

For many years prior to 1905 Kansas City had had artificial gas supplied at 75 cents per 1000 feet by the Kansas City (Mo.) Natural Gas Co., owned by the United Gas and Improvement Co. of Philadelphia, which Senator Reed in many speeches has termed the "Gas Trust."

About that time natural gas in large quantities was discovered in Kansas and Oklahoma, and Kansas City, being informed that the cost of its production was almost nothing, dreamed of obtaining gas at 6 or 7 cents per 1000 feet. The newspapers day after day predicted that Kansas City, because of cheap fuel, would become the nation's greatest manufacturing center.

Walter S. Dickey and seven associates formed themselves into a syndicate, which organized the People's Natural Gas and Fuel Co., a $2000 corporation, which applied for a 50-cent natural gas franchise.

Another syndicate formed a corporation known as the United Gas and Fuel Co., and also applied for a 50-cent franchise.

There was still another group known as the Corbin crowd asking for a franchise.

Deadlock for Months.

With the three syndicates in the field there followed months of jockeying with the City Council, each interest apparently attempting to obtain the franchise over the others. There seemed to be lively competition, and the ordinances were amended at various times, the proposed price for gas finally getting down to 35 cents. There were veiled insinuations in the Kansas City newspapers and open talk on the streets that illegal methods had been used in obtaining the support of certain members of the City Council by each syndicate.

A deadlock finally developed. Each franchise seeker obtained enough members of the Council to prevent any of the others from getting the franchise, but no one had enough votes to get the franchise.

One interesting feature of the contest was the fact that the Dickey syndicate, although applying for a franchise to furnish Kansas City with natural gas, had no gas. Dickey admitted in a deposition that his company was commonly called the "gasless gas company."

With the deadlock on, the various syndicates began to look for means to break it. One little company, known as the "Corbin crowd," represented that it had leases on gas lands, and negotiations were begun between it and the Dickey syndicate which terminated in it getting out of the fight and giving the Dickey interests an option on the lands it was supposed to hold.

In the meantime, Hugh J. McGowan, representative of the United Gas and Improvement Co., which had a "good thing" in its artificial gas franchise in Kansas City, began making mysterious visits to Kansas City, although up to that time none of the United Gas interests had introduced a natural gas franchise ordinance in the Council.

When the case finally got into the courts it was revealed that the Dickey interests, to get the Corbin crowd out of the way, had agreed to pay $20,000 for an option on its supposed gas lands, and that McGowan had agreed to pay 70 per cent of the $20,000. Only $15,000 ever was paid to the Corbin crowd, the remainder being withheld because it was unable to deliver the oil lands. Of the $15,000 McGowan paid $14,000.

With the Corbin crowd eliminated, the natural gas franchise competition was limited to the Dickey interests and the United Gas and Fuel Co., and there began negotiations between these conflicting interests. The result of the negotiations was that the Dickey interests transferred to the United Gas and Fuel Co. interests half of its capital stock in exchange for half the capital stock of the United Gas and Fuel Co., thus merging the two companies, and seemingly stopping all franchise competition, from which citizens of Kansas City had expected finally to obtain natural gas at a low price.

The agreement between these two companies was that while both franchise ordinances were to remain before the Council, only one was to be pushed actively and that the two companies would share alike in a new company to be organized to take over the franchise.

At this stage McGowan, whose at that time to public knowledge, in supplying the money to get the Corbin crowd out of the way, wrote a letter to the Council saying that his company controlled the pipes in Kansas City and that if a natural gas franchise was to be let, it would be better to let it to a company which had the great distributing service of the Kansas City Gas Co. He asked for a little time to submit a proposition. The time was granted.

McGowan and the increased Dickey crowd then began secret negotiations which terminated in a decision that McGowan was to introduce a franchise ordinance, and that neither the Dickey nor United Gas and Fuel Co. ordinance was to be pushed for passage. As a consideration the Dickey interests were to be let in on the financing of the company which would take over the McGowan franchise, it being agreed that 30 per cent of the stock of the Kansas City Gas Co. would be transferred to the Dickey interests at its original price. Its original price had been nothing, the company having been financed on a scheme by which a certain number of shares went as a bonus to the purchasers of the company's bonds.

Under this arrangement the Council passed a McGowan ordinance at 35 cents per 1000 feet. The Mayor vetoed it, and citizens of Kansas City employed Senator Reed, Frank Hagerman and R. J. Ingraham to bring a suit to enjoin the Council from passing the ordinance over the Mayor's veto. This suit was successful, and as a result of the fight made on the franchise the ordinance which finally was passed provided for gas at 25 cents.

In the taking of testimony in this case the inside story of the franchise deals became public, and the attorneys were able after many attempts, to get possession of the many secret contracts entered into. Dickey on the witness stand refused to produce the contracts and refused to answer many questions. Senator Reed, who was questioning Dickey, directed the notary public before whom the testimony was being taken, to commit Dickey to jail. The commitment actually was prepared. Dickey called his attorney by telephone and was advised to answer the questions.

Several years went by and the Dickey interests were not taken care of under the secret agreement they had made with the United Gas interests. Dickey and his associates employed Senator Reed, Ingraham and John H. Atwood to bring a suit to collect the money due them.

The attorneys went to Indianapolis where they met McGowan and other representatives of the United Gas Co., and after an all-day conference the

IF KIDNEYS FEEL LIKE LEAD OR YOUR BACK IS ACHING, TAKE SALTS AT ONCE

We all eat too much meat, which clogs up the Kidneys, and they need a flushing, else we must suffer.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorder come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.—ADV.

Fulton Mothers Now Treat Children's Colds Externally

They Find Vap-O-Rub Better Than Internal Medicines for Croup and Cold Troubles.

Mrs. J. S. Pugh, 510 Market St., and Mrs. Mary Bolton, 105 Ravine St., both of Fulton, Mo., have found, in common with many other Missouri mothers that it is no longer necessary to dose children with internal medicines for cold troubles. In the South Vick's Vap-O-Rub is the standard remedy for these troubles, but it was only last winter that it was introduced here. Vap-O-Rub was discovered by a North Carolina druggist. He found how to combine Menthol and Camphor with the volatile oils of Thyme, Eucalyptus, Cubebs and Juniper, in salve form, so that when applied to the body, the ingredients are vaporized by the body heat.

These vapors are inhaled with each breath, through the air passages, to the lungs, carrying the medication direct to the affected parts, and, in addition, Vick's is absorbed through the skin, taking out the tightness and soreness. This double action makes Vap-O-Rub really a remarkable remedy for many forms of inflammations. Either inflammations of the air passages, such as head colds, catarrh, bronchitis, sore throat, or deep chest colds, or inflammations of the skin tissues, such as burns, bruises, stings, piles, itchings and muscular soreness. It is particularly recommended for small children, as it can be used freely, with perfect safety on the youngest member of the family.

But let these Missouri mothers speak for themselves. Mrs. Bolton writes—"I have used Vap-O-Rub on baby for bad colds. Results were excellent. I find it better than any internal medicine I ever used."

Mrs. Pugh's experience is—"I tried your Vap-O-Rub on three of my children for bronchitis. They would cough so hard at night I could not sleep, so would get up and rub their throats and chests with Vap-O-Rub and they seldom coughed any more that night and after I had kept it up for several nights they stopped coughing. I believe it is better than taking so much medicine internally." Three sizes, 25c, 50c or $1.00. At all druggists.

ORNSTEIN WILL PLAY FUTURIST MUSIC HERE

Russian Pianist to Perform His "Wild Men's Dance" at Sheldon Memorial Saturday.

Leo Ornstein, who at 20 years of age is called the one true-blue Futurist composer living, and who is said to have gone far beyond even the Austrian, Schoenberg, and the Russian, Stravinsky, in the rabid anarchism of his music, will make his first St. Louis appearance Saturday night in a piano recital at the Sheldon Memorial, playing some of his own works.

Among these will be his "Three Moods—Anger, Peace and Joy," which once aroused a London audience to open mutiny; and his terrific "Wild Men's Dance," concerning which the composer says that when its chords first occurred to him he thought he was going mad.

Ornstein is a Russian, having been born in Odessa. His music has been called on the one hand the insanest rant ever written, and on the other the dawning of a new epoch in tonal expression. He not only has thrown into the discard all of the musical science developed in centuries of evolution, but has cast overboard most of the technique of his own instrument, the pianoforte. There is not room enough on his staff for all the notes he calls for, and they branch off from their stems like clusters of grapes. Of course, 10 fingers could not paly them all, so he gives instructions as to how one mass of notes is to be struck with the palm of the hand and another with the thumb.

All agree, however, that he is a pianist of notable originality and extraordinary virtuosity, possessing an amazingly delicate color sense and an unsurpassed mastery of tonal character through touch and pedaling. He appeals to optical as well as aural curiosity, with his sullen countenance, his long, flail-like arms depending limply from high, narrow shoulders, his hair "mussed up" unbecomingly, and his coat collar a study in cubism.

Of his own works he will play here the "Russian Suite," Opus 12, the "Three Moods" and "The Wild Men's Dance." But many other composers of widely different schools will be represented, such as Schumann, Chopin, Grieg, Liszt, Debussy, Cyril Scott, Albeniz, Grondahl and Schytte.

KANSAS CITY UNIONS FIGHTING DICKEY FOR SENATE AS LABOR FOE

Dickey interests were paid an amount said to have been $139,000.

The franchise obtained by the United Gas Co., was carried out and Kansas City has been supplied with gas under it. However, the company bought its gas from the Kansas Natural Gas to which it has paid 65 per cent of all it received. A Kansas City financier, who was interested in one of the original franchise applications, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that at the time the franchise was granted it was known by "those on the inside" that the franchise was not a workable franchise because of the price the United Gas Co. controlled distributing company was to pay the United Gas controlled pipe line company, the Kansas Natural Gas Co.

The franchise contained a clause that if at any time the grantees under the franchise were unable to obtain a reasonable supply of gas, the rights under the franchise should revert to the old artificial gas franchise at 75 cents.

It has been charged that the interests of the United Gas Co. was to obtain just such a franchise so that eventually they could again furnish artificial gas at a high price.

For several winters Kansas City has not had sufficient natural gas, the Kansas field failing to supply the needed quantity. It has been contended in Kansas newspapers that this could be remedied by extending the pipe lines in the Oklahoma fields, but this has not been done. Several residents of Kansas City have predicted that it would be only a short time until the United Gas Co. again would be supplying 75-cent artificial gas.

Attention has been attracted during the past two weeks to the unusual advertising campaign being conducted by Dickey in the Republican and independent country newspapers of Missouri. The same advertisement is appearing in all the papers. It advertises the Dickey vitrified salt-glazed silo. It is an eight-inch ad, and is signed Walter S. Dickey instead of the W. S. Dickey Clay Manufacturing Co., Dickey's company.

At Democratic headquarters in St. Louis there has been much comment on the appearance in the same issues of many of the papers containing the ad an eulogy of Dickey, or an attack on Senator Reed, or both. The Caruthersville Republican of Sept. 23 had the ad and had one editorial attack on Reed, and three editorial eulogies of Dickey.

Dickey resides in a costly home in that part of Kansas City usually referred to as Quality Hill. Several men with a knowledge of Kansas City real estate values told a Post-Dispatch reporter that in their opinion the Dickey estate, including house and grounds, which are ornate with a lodge-keeper's house, a fish pond, garage and broad expanses of sward and stately trees, has a value of at least $1,000,000.

Dickey, in appearance, is of big financier or "Big Business" type of man. He is short of stature and inclined to corpulence. He is of reddish complexion and has a short cropped mustache. In dress he always is immaculate.

He was born in Toronto, Canada, June 26, 1862, and was educated in the Provincial Model School for Ontario at Toronto. His father was born in Ireland and his mother in Canada.

At the age of 16 he obtained employment as a clerk in a wholesale dry goods house in Toronto, and came to Missouri when 26 years old. Almost immediately he began the manufacture of clay products, building up the business until now he owns 17 large plants in many widely separated sections of the country.

He was married in 1889 in Mount Forest, Ontario, Canada, to Miss Katherine L. McMullen. Five children were born to them. One of his sons died a year ago in Kansas City.

He entered politics soon after coming to the United States. In 1900 he was a delegate to the Republican national convention, and chairman of the Republican County Committee in Jackson County. In 1904 he was chairman of the Kansas City Republican City Committee, and in 1908 chairman of the Republican State Committee.

As a contributor to Republican campaign funds he frequently has been placed in the same class with the late Richard C. Kerens, always a liberal contributor.

The Republican campaign textbook, issued by the party's State committee, compares Dickey with the late Mark Hanna, the controlling factor in many Republican national campaigns in which corporation influence and enormous campaign funds had an active part. Concerning Dickey, the Republican textbook says:

"Those who knew Senator Mark Hanna in the days of his dominance believe that Mr. Dickey has many of that great political chieftain's masterful characteristics as a political organizer, and will likewise demonstrate in the Senate his splendid capacity for legislative leadership."

CONSUL HAS 150,000 WARDS

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Between 150,000 and 300,000 civil prisoners of Russia, held in 33 provinces embracing a territory of more than 5000 square miles, are wards of the United States consular legation at Moscow, according to John H. Snodgrass, American Consul-General there, who arrived here on the steamship Stockholm on a three months' vacation.

EAT BIG MEALS! NO INDIGESTION OR UPSET STOMACH

"Pape's Diapepsin" makes weak stomachs strong and healthy at once.

Instantly stops sourness, gases, heartburn, acidity, dyspepsia.

There would not be a case of indigestion or dyspepsia here if readers who are subject to stomach trouble knew the tremendous anti-ferment and digestive virtue contained in Pape's Diapepsin. This harmless preparation will digest a heavy meal without the slightest fuss or discomfort, and relieve the sourest, acid stomach in five minutes, besides overcoming all sour, nauseous odors from the breath.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula plainly printed on each 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will readily understand why this promptly overcomes indigestion and removes such symptoms as heartburn, a feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, belching of gas and eructations of undigested food, water brash, acidity, nausea, headache, biliousnes and many other bad symptoms; and, besides you will not need laxatives to keep your stomach, liver and intestines clean and fresh.

If your stomach is sour and full of gas or your food doesn't digest, and your meals don't seem to fit, why not get a 50-cent case from your druggist and make life worth living? Absolute relief from stomach misery and perfect digestion of anything you eat is sure to follow five minutes after, and besides, one case is sufficient to rid a whole family of such trouble.

Surely, a harmless, inexpensive preparation like Diapepsin, which will aways, either at daytime or during night, relieve your stomach misery and digest your meals, is about as handy and valuable a thing as you could have in the house.—ADV.

PRIZES TO BE GIVEN AT 'THUMB BOX' ART SHOW

Talented Amateurs Can Compete in Annual Exhibition by Art League.

Preparations are being made for the annual "Thum-box Exhibition," a presentation of small pictures and sculptures by St. Louis artists, under the auspices of the Art League of St. Louis.

The Art League Committee on Exhibitions and Lectures has announces that four prizes will be awarded by a jury of seven artists chosen as judges by vote of the contestants. Works of art must be submitted to the Artists' Guild Oct. 23 and 24.

The winners of awards will be announced Oct. 30 at a formal reception given by the Art League. There will be two prizes, $50 and $25, for the best and next best groups of paintings exhibited by one artist, and two similar prizes for sculpture. Each artist may have four exhibits, and may submit to the jury as many as he or she thinks best.

300 Artists in Directory.

Leading artists of the city will be represented and many who are less known will contribute. The committee's directory of St. Louis artists contains 300 names, and shows how St. Louis is developing a substantial "colony" of art producers and becoming a center of art production.

The character of the "Thumb-box" show, however, is such that talented amateurs can compete, and several whose names are better known in the city's social and business life than in art will have clever pictures in this exhibition. The revival of art interest in the city is making itself strongly felt, and former students of the School of Fine Arts are turning to painting and sculpture as an avocation. Study clubs and sketching grooups have been formed and some of the products of these activities will be set before the public in the Thumb-box exhibition.

The city's exhibition and other art activities receive an impetus through the enlargement of the Artists' Guild which has been going on through the summer. The thumb-box exhibition will inaugurate the expanded exhibition facilities, and an Art League musical concert will introduce the Artists' Guild Theater Intime" to the public.

The concert will be combined with the thumb-box reception on Oct. 30, and will present to St. Louis music lovers several prize-winning works of the recent Art League music composition contest. Prof. W. H. Pommer, Mrs. Berenice Wyer and Albert Stoessel are the St. Louis composers honored.

Symphony to Play Composition.

The fourth and principal music composition prize went to Samuel Bollinger for "The Sphinx,' a symphony arrangement. This is to be produced by the Symphony Orchestra at its opening, Nov. 17.

The Art League has established the custom of holding frequent meetings in the city's galleries at the Art Museum to study the important transient exhibitions and the permanent collections. Following the inititiative of the Art League, the Business Men's League and other bodies have arranged evenings in the city's galleries, with excellent results. These occasions are valuable for the development of the city and its museum. They not only familiarize the public here with the municipal art collections, but they stand in the eyes of the country's artists and art authorities as evidence of genuine St. Louis interest in the exhibitions to which the painters, sculptors and other producers are invited to contribute. The group of advisory guides and instructors, organized by the Art League and also by the Business Men's League, are available for other organizations, and afford an effective means of increasing the educational advantages of the art exhibitions.

ARGENTINA PREPARES TO BAR ALL UNDESIRABLE CITIZENS

Government Makes New Restrictions to Keep Out Indigent Immigrants After the War.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Oct. 14.—A decree promulgated last spring further restricting immigration to the Argentine Republic will take effect Oct. 26.

During the past two years the departure of settlers and others for Europe has been so marked that some statesmen have been alarmed over the fact that a country with such a large area and a relative sparse population could not hold its inhabitants. The Government, however, has not been impressed, and by decree which becomes effective next month, many stringent conditions will hereafter surround permission of immigrants to land in the Argentine.

Any persons found unfit for work, will be barred, as will all cripples, the latter provision supposedly being aimed at a possible invasion by wounded soldiers after the war. Another clause bars all those who may be considered likely to become a public charge.

It is provided in the regulations, however, that first-class passengers are exempt from all the penalties prescribed in the decree, a fact which suggests that in future immigrants may travel safely as salon passengers.

NEW PASTOR TO SPEAK TODAY

Dr. Benjamin Young, the new pastor of the Union Methodist Episcopal Church, Grand avenue and Delmar boulevard, will preach his first sermon this morning.

He comes from the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Topeka, Kan. Prior to that time he was the pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Portland, Ore. He is 8 years old. On two occasions, in contests for Bishop, Dr. Young has received a high vote, one at the Oregon conference in 1912 and the other recently in the Kansas conference.

Party for Blind Girls.

A Halloween pound party will be given at the Blind Girls' Home, 5235 Page boulevard, Tuesday afternoon and evening, with an entertainment in the evening.

Store Closes Daily at 5:30; Saturdays at 6:00 P. M.

LECTURES AT FACTORIES ON TUBERCULOSIS

Society to Conduct Noonday Meetings to Teach Workers to Avoid Disease.

The prevention of tuberculosis among factory workers will be the topic at more than 200 lectures to be given this fall and winter under the auspices of the St. Louis Tuberculosis Society. Each talk will be at the noon hour, and will last 20 minutes. All will be illustrated.

An educational program has been mapped out by the antituberculosis organization for fall and winter, and the short-talk series is only a part of that program. In many of the factories, exhibits of photographs showing causes and prevention of the disease will be placed several days before the lecture. In some of the factoreis, a series of four lectures on general health problems will be included. The lecture work is being conducted directly under the auspices of the Committee on Relief and Prevention, on which Dr. M. J. White, United States Public Health Service representative in this city, and also medical director of the tuberculosis society, is chairman.

An open-air school for negro children, which been decided upon by the Board of Directors, will be established soon after the first of the year. Workers already are taking applications for the new school. A survey recently made shows the death rate among negroes from consumption is four to one white person, as compared to the population, and it is estimated that one per cent of the school children need open-air treatment.

Another activity of the society, for which the semiannual report was made public yesterday, was the night and day camp, a preventorium for working girls and women. This institution, of which Mrs. Ben F. Bush is chairman, has discharged 86 patients who have regained their health within a six months' period. There are 29 in the camp and 15 on the waiting list. It costs the society 86 cents a day to keep a patient in the camp, and the average gain in weight of discharge patients was 11 pounds 2 ounces, the average stay in the camp being two months and eight days.

The society, according to the report given the Board of Directors by Mrs. E. A. De Wolf, chairman of the Open Air School Committee, spent $3600 last year in feeding children in the two schools; the price each day for each child was 15 cents, and about 50 of the 175 pupils in attendance were paid for by that organization.

WOOLEN AND WORSTED MEN WANT TO SEE DYE CENSUS

They Protest to Secretary of Commerce Redfield About Delay of Its Publication.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—The American Association of Woolen and Worsted Manufacturers have protested to Secretary of Commerce Redfield against the delay in the publication of the dye census, in these terms:

"The census will prove of great practical utility to all users of colors in this country who in the past have rarely been furnished with correct information as to what they bought.

"This state of ignorance has been used for purposes of adulteration, reduction of strength and misrepresentation by dealers, to such an extent that trade conditions became a public scandal. The report is a step in the direction of protection for American interests on the lines of the food and the drugs regulation. This association protests against its suppression at the demand of persons who so far as their names have been published are concerned only with the interests of foreign manufacturers. We request to be supplied at the first opportunity with 200 copies for the use of our members."

RILEY FETE AT "SWIMMIN' HOLE'

Indiana Children Attend Ceremony for Birthday Celebration.

GREENFIELD, Ind., Oct. 17.—Hancock County paid tribute to the memory of James Whitcomb Riley in services at Riley Park on the bank of Brandywine Creek, a few hundred feet from the "old swimmin' hole" in which the poet frolicked as a boy.

Plans were made months ago for exercises in observance of Riley's birthday on the school day nearest the date. Every school in the county was closed and 1500 children marched in the procession from Greenfield to the park. Three thousand persons attended, among them Edmund H. Eitel of Indianapolis, a nephew of Riley. Will A. Hough of Greenfield, president of the State Bar Association, delivered the chief address and Riley's poems were read by school children.

CITY MUST CLEAN ICY WALKS

Ohio Supreme Court Makes Ruling in a Damage Suit.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 14.—The State Supreme Court has knocked out city ordinances compelling property owners to clean ice from their sidewalks, ruling that it is the city's duty and that municipal authorities can do no more than ask property owners to aid them.

The decision was made in upholding Hamilton County courts in refusing Matilda Steinbeck damages from the John Hauck Brewing Co. of Cincinnati for injuries received when she fell on an icy sidewalk near their plant.

Y. M. C. A. Salesmanship Course.

The salesmanship class of the Y. M. C. A. will begin the winter's course at the association building tomorrow night. This course is conducted with the cooperation of the Sales Managers' Bureau of the Business Men's League. The class will meet weekly on Monday evenings.

HOW TO REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT

A SIMPLE, SAFE, RELIABLE WAY

People who are over-burdened with superfluous fat know only too well the discomfort and ridicule that over-stout people have to bear.

If you are carrying around five or ten pounds of unhealthy fat you are unnecessarily weakening your vital organs and are carrying a burden which destroys the beauty of your figure.

There is no need of anyone suffering from superfluous fat. If you want to reduce your weight in a simple, safe and reliable way, without starvation diet or tiresome exercise here is a test worth trying: Spend as much time as you can in the open air, breathe deeply and get from Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. or any good druggist a box of oil of korein capsules; take one after each meal and one before retiring at night.

Weigh yourself once a week so as to know just how fast you are losing weight and don't leave off the treatment or even skip a single dose until you are down to normal.

Oil of korein is absolutely harmless, is pleasant to take, and helps digestion. Even a few days' treatment has been reported to show a noticeable reduction in weight, footsteps become lighter, your work seems easier and a lighter and more buoyant feeling takes possession of your whole being.

Every person who suffers from superfluous fat should give this treatment a trial.—ADV.

NOTED AUTHORITY O K'S GARDNER'S LAND BANK PLAN

Prof. Fetter of Princeton Says System Would Be Splendid Thing for Missouri.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 14.—"There is not only no reason why the land bank proposed by Col. Gardner, with efficient and honest administration, should not be a success; it is certain it will be and that it will be a splendid thing for the farmers of Missouri."

So Prof. Frank A. Fetter, who holds the chair of political economy at Princeton University and who is regarded the world over as an expert on rural credits, summed up a talk with a Post-Dispatch reporter who asked him what he thought of the Gardner plan, its efficacy, the need of it and its relationship to the Federal rural credit plan.

Prof. Fetter had just read Gardner's speech, delivered at Chillicothe on the night of Sept. 23 and published in the Post-Dispatch in full the following day, and though his political instincts, as he puts it, "are generally Hamiltonian," he is most heartily in accord with Gardner, the manner in which he always refers to him.

"I met the Colonel some years ago while on a trip to Europe," said the professor. "We were all in the one party and Col. Gardner's keen interest in the development of agricultural resources, especially along the line of economic efficiency, naturally led us together and we talked a great deal about it. I was taking advantage of the trip to make a study of the same subjects, but I also looked into other things, while Gardner devoted practically all his time to the one general subject and his investigations were comprehensive and most intelligent.

Studied Land Purchase Law.

"We studied rural credits and we studied the co-operative stores, especially in Denmark, in England and in Ireland. In Ireland we had a most interesting discussion with Sir Horace Plunkett, who is keenly interested in the movement for agricultural development in the United States, and we also studied thoroughly the working of the land purchase law.

"I soon learned to have a high respect for Gardner's earnestness and his high ability. We were both heartily in accord in the belief that agricultural interests of the country had never been fairly treated by the Government. The source of such a great bulk of our wealth production was the one thing for which the Government has never done anything until general attention had been attracted to the matter by the advancement of prices following a more rapid growth of consumption than of production.

"Gardner some years ago reached the conclusion that the farms of the country and their workers were as much entitled to encouragement from the Government as manufacturing and transportation enterprises, labor organizations, etc., and like a practical business man he started in to make a study of the situation to see what the natural remedy should be. He reached the conclusion that land banks, with resultant cheap money for the farmers and for those desiring to enter agriculture, was the quickest and best way to bring about the necessary reform and his land bank bill was the logical consequence.

"While it is true that I corresponded with Gardner after our return from Europe and that we discussed many features of his plan, it is hardly fair to consider me as a co-author of the bill with him.

"I heartily agree with Gardner that ½ of 1 per cent will bear all the costs of administration. In fact, 1-3 of 1 per cent has been found sufficient in some parts of Europe. The bill, as I understand it, provides that various county officers shall give the bank their services in minor ways free of charge and that the general administration will be under the jurisdiction of the State Banking Commission as it already exists, and of certain State officials who will serve by virtue of their offices to which they are elected.

Would Free It From Politics.

"If I wanted to criticise the bill at all I would take issue with that feature of it because such an enterprise should be wholly divorced from politics and removed from its influence in any degree. I think the administration should be in the hands of experienced and capable men who would have practically a life tenure. With heads elected every four years, there is no telling when some political upheaval or another might bring in a bad administration as has happened in many of our states and for such a bank as this the most complete honesty of administration is essential.

"For that reason I believe that the minor factors of administration, too, should be governed wholly by nonpartisan, or rather by a wholly unpolitical merit system. The most essential feature of administration will be in the honesty of the appraisals on which loans are made. For this purpose I think it inadvisable to permit any appraiser to set a value on any piece of property in his own section. Appraisers should be brought from other sections of the State where they cannot possibly be influenced by any sense of acquaintanceship or friendship in reaching a judgment as to the 'borrowing limit of any given piece of property.

"I do not see how competition with the Federal rural credit system can be considered an argument against the Gardner bill. As I remarked, I am inclined to the Hamiltonian theory of government, yet I am a believer in home control of matters which have their entire life within a State. I think this matter of rural credits is essentially a State matter, still there are states which are not as wealthy as Missouri and which could not afford to launch such an enterprise as this where the Federal law will serve a great purpose. Then, again, the Federal law is more immediate in its general application. But I do not think it should be held to be a sufficient reason for Missouri hesitating to form her own State bank. The competition with the Federal system will give a basis of comparison in administrative methods and costs which will be valuable and we will also have a splendid opportunity to see how the two systems work out and which is the better one.

"Incidentally, it might be recalled that Mr. Taft, while President, issued a report, prepared I believe by Gov. Herrick of Ohio, in which the conclusion was reached that the establishment and maintenance of rural credit systems were properly State, rather than Federal, functions.

"I do not think that the State land bank can possibly injure the country banks of deposit. In fact, by increasing the general prosperity, it will help them. Loans by these banks are always for seasonal purposes and on short term notes and with a higher production, which ought to come with cheaper long time land loans, there will be a greater demand than ever for the short loans for crop moving and seeding purposes. The long time mortgage loans have generally been handled in the big cities by companies having vast funds in hand, like the insurance companies. This rule will still prevail, only instead of making direct loans the big lending companies will buy the bonds. The State land bank will merely organize the credit base in a far simpler and more economic manner, and while the lending companies will not get as high a rate of interest as under the direct loan system, there will be such an immense saving in the cost of making and carrying the loans that there will probably be a better net profit in the end.

"These companies have to maintain vast establishments to investigate and keep watch over these loans, before and after they are made. Now the land bank steps in and does that in the most economic and safest way and the lending companies will have nothing to worry about when they buy bonds. Of course, I presume they will still keep corps of investigators to look into matters and the bank administration generally, but these investigations will be only occasional and inexpensive as compared with the present cumbersome system of investigating each separate loan. It is in the organization and bulking of these loans into bond issues that the great economy will be effected and the farmers will get the profit of this economy."

The Heater That Wastes No Coal

HOLY SMOKE: We waste 2,000,000 tons of coal a year in St. Louis, says Prof. Ohle of Washington University. That much goes up in smoke. In other words, about 20 per cent of the soft coal used in St. Louis is wasted through imperfect combustion. It is horrible to contemplate the sheer waste of coal—and even more horrible to inhale in fumes. The two million tons of coal that we waste in breathing and begriming ourselves would run several good-sized railroads, not to mention factories, and it would warm the poor all Winter.—From Post-Dispatch, Oct. 15, 1915.

When Varnish Needs Something More Than Beauty

If leaky plumbing gave your floors and woodwork a wetting, you'd have to revarnish at once, unless they were Valsparred.

Valspar saves the day in such cases. Simply mop up the water and no harm is done. Valsparred surfaces are kept clean with soap and water.

No need of oiling them.

Valspar starts with a beautiful finish and keeps it through spilling, leaks or absolute immersion in boiling water or alcohol. No other varnish could do this. We sell Valspar and recommend it. Don't ask for just "varnish", ask for Valspar.

This Wife and Mother Wishes To Tell You FREE How She Stopped Her Husband's Drinking

By All Means Write to Her and Learn How She Did It.

For over 20 years Jas. Anderson of 10 Pearl Ave., Hillburn, N. Y., was a confirmed drunkard. His case was about as bad as it could be, but a little over twelve years ago his devoted wife, after years of trying, finally succeeded in stopping his drinking entirely.

Write to this woman if you have a relative or friend who drinks

Not only did she save Mr. Anderson, but she stopped the drinking of her brother and several of her neighbors as well. All this she accomplished by simple home treatment which she now desires every man and woman who has a relative or friend who drinks to know all about, for she feels that others can do just as she did.

The treatment can be given secretly if desired, and without cost she will gladly and willingly tell what it is. Therefore, every reader of this notice who is interested in curing a dear one of drinking should write to Mrs. Anderson at once. Her reply will come by return mail in a sealed envelope. She does this gladly in hopes that others will be benefited as she was. One thing she asks, however, and that is that you do not send money, for she has nothing to sell. Simply address your letter with all confidence to Mrs. Margaret Anderson at the address given above and she will reply by return mail in a sealed envelope.

52 ORGANIZATIONS INDORSE ISSUANCE OF SCHOOL BONDS

Sixty Speakers Volunteer to Advocate Vote Nov. 11 for Raising Needed $3,000,000.

Fifty-two business and civic organizations have indorsed the proposed $3,000,000 school bond issue, which will be voted on at a special election Nov. 11.

Sixty speakers have volunteered to explain the need of a bond issue. Many requests for speakers to address organizations are being received at the headquarters of the Citizens' School Bond Committee, 911 Locust street.

Circulars issued by the committee were sent through the pupils of all schools to the parents presenting the fiscal conditions and asking the voters whether the children of the public schools have a right to attend school all day, be sheltered in modern, permanent buildings and get the best education St. Louis can provide.

The pupils of 15 schools are on half-time sessions, and without prompt relief, several thousand others will get but half-day schooling, the circular points out. More than 6000 pupils are housed in portable, wooden buildings, and many thousand more may have to be accommodated in portables or rented quarters.

Views of Secretary Swope.

Horace M. Swope, secretary of the Citizens' Committee, yesterday declared that unless the bond issue passed the standard of education will generally be lowered in St. Louis because of the imperative discontinuance of several departments.

The summer and night schools probably would be first to be cut off, he said, and open-air schools, special schools for backward children, and the hygiene department likely would be next to go. This virtually would destroy the present educational standard set in St. Louis, he said, but would be made absolutely necessary to provide funds for more school quarters.

The additional tax to supply $3,000,000 worth of buildings would be only 50 cents a year to persons paying taxes on $1000 worth of property, Swope said. It would mean an addition of only 5 cents on each $100 taxable valuation.

This would meet the crisis and assure a continuance of the present school system in permanent and comfortable buildings, Swope said, and would give the children an all-day education.

Might Stop Free Text Books.

If it becomes necessary to abolish free text books, the cost to parents of providing school books would be much more than the increased tax to the average taxpayer, he asserted. If summer and night schools must be discontinued, the burden of caring for the many thousands of children would be shifted to the playground and other municipal departments and would be paid from municipal revenue raised by taxes, and would be an additional expense to taxpayers, he pointed out.

The bonds would run 20 years, and many of the children now attending the schools would later pay their share of the expense when they become voters and taxpayers.

Meetings to Be Held This Week to Advocate School Bonds.

Speakers of the Citizens' School Bond Committee will discuss the proposed $3,000,000 school bond issue at the following meetings during the week:

Monday, 8 p. m.—Gratiot School, Manchester and Billon avenues; Gordonville School, 6651 Gravois avenue; Christian Endeavor Congress; Old Orchard Congregational Church, Webster Groves.

Monday, 6:30 p. m.—Implement, Vehicle and Hardware Association, Planters' Hotel.

Tuesday, 8 p. m.—Delaney School, 6131 Virginia avenue.

Wednesday, 8 p. m.—Engineers' Club, 3817 Olive street; North St. Louis Citizens' Association, Twentieth and Salisbury streets.

Thursday, 6:15 p. m.—St. Louis Association of Credit Men, City Club.

Saturday, 2 p. m.—Teachers' Fellowship Association.

CHINESE AND VENEZUELAN AT WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY

Registration Statistics Show Gains in College and Undergraduate Departments — 318 in Saturday Classes.

Two students from distant lands have just registered at Washington University. One hails from Shanghi China, the other from Caracas, Venezuela.

The young Chinese student, Nao-Te Tsao, has matriculated as a pre-medical freshman, under the auspices of the Chinese Educational Board. He comes from Tsing Hua College. He will probably return to his native country as a medical missionary.

The young Venezuelan is Ernesto Wulff, of the Colegio Sucre and the Central University of Venezuela. He is in the preparatory department of the School of Engineering.

Registration statistics from Washington University show a net gain of 71 in the college and 86 in the undergraduate departments. Registration in the Saturday classes at Washington University, while as yet incomplete, indicates an increase of 20 to 25 per cent over that of last year. The total registration for last year in this department was 330. To date, 318 students have registered for this work this year. Indications are that approximately the same percentage of increase will hold good in the night classes.

The Doctor's Advice

by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Ellwood Sts., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Bad Cough" writes: "I have a bad cough and cold in my head. My ears ache and my whole system seems full of cold inflammation. Please prescribe."

Answer: There is nothing which will relieve your condition more surely and quickly than the use of mentho-laxene syrup. Secure from your druggist 2½ oz. essence mentho-laxene. Mix this with one pint of sugar syrup or honey and take according to directions. You should receive immediate relief and benefit. The mentho-laxene is slightly laxative, and drives the cold inflammation out of the system.

"Mr. W." asks: "What can I do for a long continued case of constipation? I have headache and dizziness and my complexion is sallow. At night I can't sleep I'm so nervous."

Answer: Continued constipation affects the blood and makes it impure. You need a good blood purifier and laxative. Use three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur). They aid digestion, act on the bowels and clean and purify the blood.

"S. F. H." writes: "I have a very severe case of dandruff. My scalp itches and my hair is coming out in handfuls."

Answer: Get a jar of plain yellow minyol at your drug store. Wash the hair and while still wet rub well into the scalp plain yellow minyol. Rinse out thoroughly and your scalp will feel clean and active. Repeat this treatment three or four times after washing, and in a few weeks all your dandruff should disappear and your hair become healthy and soft.

"Corpulent" asks: "What will overcome corpulency? I am so fat as to be in my own way. I'm short of breath and cannot stand exercise."

Answer: To reduce safely, use five-grain arbolone tablets. They are the most reliable reducers I could prescribe. Many are pleased with results from arbolone.

"Misery" writes: "I have been a worn-out man for the past few months. My physical and mental forces are much impaired. I do not seem to be able to think clearly. I am much depressed all the time and my usual ambition and energy seem to have died. I have headache and pains in my back."

Answer: Your condition is identical to thousands of others brought to my attention yearly. Yes, your physical and mental forces are, as you say, much impaired, but you need not be alarmed over your condition. The use of three-grain cadomene tablets should soon put you back in normal condition and fit to combat any troubles. Cultivate regular habits of living.

"Mite" asks: "I seem to be shrinking in size. I am very pale and thin. I do not feel sick, but I'm very weak. I want to increase my weight."

Answer: You are anaemic, and the food you eat does not properly nourish your system; three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets cause proper food assimilation and increase weight and strength. Take them with your meals. Sold in sealed packages.

"Mrs. Ella M." writes: "Please prescribe for me again. This time for my kidneys. I have chills and fever, look bad, have puffs under my eyes, and sometimes my back hurts."

Answer: You should get almost instant relief from the use of balmwort tablets. I have prescribed these in numerous cases of kidney trouble and they have given excellent results. Most drug stores carry these tablets and they come in sealed tubes with proper directions.—ADVERTISEMENT.

H. G. WELLS, ON VISIT TO ISONZO FRONT, SAYS ITALIANS GIVE GREAT AID TO ALLIES

By H. G. WELLS.
Famous Novelist and Political Economist.

ROME, Oct. 2.

MY first impressions of the Italian war center upon Udine. So far I had had only a visit to Soissons on an exceptionally quiet day and the sound of a Zeppelin one night in Essex for all my experience of actual warfare. But my bedroom at the British mission in Udine roused perhaps extravagant expectations. There were holes in the plaster ceiling and wall, betraying splintered laths—holes that had been caused by a bomb that had burst and killed several people in the little square outside. Such excitements seem to be things of the past now in Udine. Udine keeps itself dark nowadays, and the Austrian seaplanes, which come raiding the Italian coast country at night very much in the same aimless, casually malignant way in which the Zeppelins raid England, apparently because there is nothing else for them to do, find it easier to locate Venice.

My earlier rides in Venetia began always with the level roads of the plain, roads frequently edged by water courses, with plentiful willows beside the road, vines and fields of Indian corn and such-like lush crops. Always quite soon one came to some old Austrian boundary posts; almost everywhere the Italians are fighting upon what is technically enemy territory, but nowhere does it seem a whit less Italian than the plain of Lombardy. When at last I motored away from Udine to the northern mountain front I passed through Campo-Formio and saw the white-faced inn at which Napoleon dismembered the ancient republic of Venice and bartered away this essential part of Italy into foreign control. It just gravitates back now—as though there had been no Napoleon.

All Resources at Work.

And upon the roads and beside them was the enormous equipment of a modern army advancing. Everywhere I saw new roads being made, railways pushed up, vast store dumps, hospitals; everywhere the villages swarmed with gray soldiers, everywhere our automobile was threading its way and taking astonishing risks among interminable processions of motor lorries, strings of ambulances or of mule carts, wagons with timber, wagons with wire, wagons with men's gear, wagons with casks, wagons discreetly veiled, columns of infantry, cavalry, batteries en route.

Every wagon that goes up full comes back empty, and many wounded were coming down and prisoners and troops returning to rest. Gorizia had been taken a week or so before my arrival; the Isonzo had been crossed and the Austrians driven back across the Carso for several miles; all the resources of Italy seemed to be crowding up to make good these gains and gather strength for the next thrust. The roads under all this traffic remained wonderful; gangs of men were everywhere repairing the first onset of wear, and Italy is the most fortunate land in the world for road metal; her mountains are solid road metal and in this Venetian plain you need but to scrape through a yard of soil to find gravel.

One traveled through a choking dust under the blue sky, and above the steady incessant dusty succession of lorry, lorry, lorry, lorry that passed one by. one saw, looking up, the tree tops, house roofs, or the solid Venetian campanile of this or that wayside village.

Quaint Yellow Sicilian Carts.

Once as we were coming out of the great gray portals of that beautiful old relic of a former school of fortification, Palmanova, the traffic became suddenly bright yellow, and for a kilometer or so we were passing nothing but Sicilian mule carts loaded with hay. These carts seem as strange among the gray shapes of modern war transport as a Chinese mandarin in painted silk would be. They are the most individual of things, all two-wheeled, all bright yellow, and the same size, it is true, but upon each there are the gayest of little paintings, such paintings as one sees in England at times upon an ice cream barrow. Sometimes the picture will present a Scriptural subject, sometimes a scene of opera, sometimes a dream landscape or a trophy of fruits or flowers, and the harness—now much out of repair—is studded with brass. Again and again I have passed strings of these gay carts; all Sicily must be swept of them.

Through the dust I came to Aquileia, which is now btu an old cathedral, built upon the remains of a very early basilica, standing in a space in a scattered village. But across this dusty space there was carried the head of the upstart Maximin who murdered Alexander Severus, and later Aquileia brought Attila near to despair. Our party alighted; we inspected a very old mosaic floor which has been uncovered since the Austrian retreat. The Austrian priests have gone, too, and their Italian successors are already tracing out a score of Roman traces that it was the Austrian custom to minimize. Capt. Pirelli refreshed my historical memories; it was rather like leaving a card on Gibbon en route for contemporary history.

A Cleverly Masked Battery.

By devious routes I went on to certain batteries of big guns which had played their parts in hammering the Austrian left above Monfalcone, across an arm of the Adriatic, and which were now under orders to shift and move up closer. The battery was the most unobtrusive of batteries; its one desire seemed to be to appear a simple piece of woodland in the eye of God and the aeroplane.

I went about the network of railways and paths under the trees that a modern battery requires. I went on through the wood to a shady observation post high in a tree, into which I clambered with my guide. I was able from this position to get a very good idea of the general lie of the Italian eastern front. I was in the delta of the Isonzo. Directly in front of me were some marshes and the extreme tip of the Adriatic Sea, at the head of which was Monfalcone, now in Italian hands. Behind Monfalcone ran the red ridge of the Carso, of which the Italians had just captured the eastern half. Behind this again rose the mountains to the east of the Isonzo which the Austrians still held.

The Isonzo came toward me from out of the mountains, in a great westward curve. Fifteen or 16 miles away where it emerged from the mountains lay the pleasant and prosperous town of Gorizia, and at the westward point of the great curve was Sagrado with its broken bridge. The battle of Gorizia was really not fought at Gorizia at all. What happened was the brilliant and bloody storming of Mounts Podgora and Sabotino on the western side of the river above Gorizia, and simultaneously a crossing at Sagrado behind Gorizia and a magnificent rush up to the plateau and across the plateau of the Carso. Gorizia itself was not organized for defense, and the Austrians were so surprised by the rapid storming of the mountains to the northwest of it, and of the Carso to the southeast, that they made no fight in the town itself.

As a consequence, when I visited it I found it very little injured—compared, that is, with such other towns as have been fought through. Here and there the front of a house has been knocked in by an Austrian shell, or a lamp post prostrated. But the road bridge had suffered a good deal; its iron parapet was twisted about by shell bursts and interwoven with young trees and big boughs designed to screen the passerby from the observation of the Austrian gunners upon Monte Santo. Here and there were huge holes through which one could look down upon the blue trickles of water in the stony river bed below. The driver of our automobile displayed what seemed to me an extreme confidence in the margins of these gaps, but his confidence was justified. At Sagrado the bridge had been much more completely demolished; no effort had been made to restore the horizontal roadway, but one crossed by a sort of timber switchback that followed the ups and downs of the ruins.

It is not in these places that one must look for the real destruction of modern war. The real fight on the left of Gorizia went through the village of Lucinico up the hill of Podgora. Lucinico is nothing more than a heap of gray stones; except for a bit of the church wall and the gable end of a house one cannot even speak of it as ruins. But in one place among the rubble I saw the splintered top and a leg of a grand piano. Podgora Hill, which was no doubt once neatly terraced and cultivated, is like a scrap of landscape from some airless, treeeless planet. Still more desolate was the scene upon the Carso to the right (south) of Gorizia. Both San Martino and Doberdo are destroyed beyond the limits of ruination. The Carso itself is a waterless upland with but a few bushy trees; it must always have been a desolate region, but now it is an indescribable wilderness of shell craters, smashed-up Austrian trenches, splintered timber, old iron, rags and that rusty, thorny vileness of man's invention, worse than all the thorns and thickets of nature—barbed wire. There are no dead visible; the wounded have been cleared away; but about the trenches and particularly near some of the dugouts there was a faint, repulsive smell.

Yet into this wildness the Italians are now thrusting a sort of order. The German is a wonderful worker; they say on the Anglo-French front that he makes trenches by way of resting, but I doubt if he can touch the Italian at certain forms of toil. All the way up to San Martino and beyond, swarms of workmen were making one of those carefully graded roads that the Italians make better than any other people. Other swarms were laying water pipes. For upon the Carso there are neither roads nor water, and before the Italians can thrust further both must be brought up to the front.

As we approached San Martina an Austrian aeroplane made its presence felt by dropping a bomb among the little tents of some workmen in a little scrubby wood on the hillside near at hand. One heard the report and turned to see the fragments flying and the dust. Probably they got some one. And then, after a little pause, the encampment began to spew out men; here, there and everywhere they appeared among the tents, running like rabbits at eveningtime, down the hill. Vrey soon after, and probably in connection with this signal, Austrian shells began to come over. They do not use shrapnel because the rocky soil of Italy makes that unnecessary. They fire a sort of shell that goes bang and releases a cloud of smoke overhead, and then drops a parcel of high explosive that bursts on the ground. The ground leaps into red dust and smoke. But these things are now to be seen on the cinema. Forthwith the men working on the road about us began to drop their tools and make for the shelter trenches, a long procession down the length of the road going at a steady walk. Then like a blow in the chest came the bang of a big Italian gun somewhere close at hand.

Along about 4000 miles of the various fronts this sort of thing was going on that morning.

This Carso front is the practicable offensive front of Italy. From the left wing on the Isonzo along the Alpine boundary around to the Swiss boundary there is mountain warfare like nothing else in the world; it is warfare that pushes the boundary backward, but it is mountain warfare that will not, for so long a period that the war will be over first, hold out any hopeful prospects of offensive movements on a large scale against Austria or Germany. It is a short distance as the crow flies from Rovereto to Munich, but not as the big gun travels. The Italians, therefore, as their contribution to the common effort, are thrusting rather eastwardly toward the line of the Julian Alps through Carinthia and Carniola.

From my observation post in the tree near Monfalcone I saw Trieste away along the coast to my right. It looked scarcely as distant as Folkestone from Dungeness. The Italian advanced line is indeed scarcely 10 miles from Trieste. But the Italians are not, I think, going to Trieste just yet. That is not the real game now. They are playing loyally with the allies for the complete defeat of the Central Powers, and that is to be achieved by striking home into Austria. Meanwhile there is no sense in knocking Trieste to pieces, or using Italians instead of Austrian soldiers to garrison it.

Your Family Deserves a Piano or Player

Last week we advertised rebuilt Pianos that we had taken in exchange for Grands and Player-Pianos. We expected an immediate response, but were completely unprepared for the avalanche of buyers that swarmed into the store within the last few days looking for these bargains. Our stock of used Pianos is rapidly being depleted, but on account of the fact that we were unable to accommodate so many prospective buyers with used Pianos and also owing to the congested condition of our stock, we have decided (after mature deliberation) to let our entire stock go, including used Pianos, discontinued styles, shopworn Pianos, in fact, everything on our floors, at terms that will meet with your approval. We are grateful to the piano-purchasing public of St. Louis and vicinity for their instant and immediate response to our announcement of special sales in the last few days, and by way of showing our appreciation we have decided to give every prospective purchaser in St. Louis an opportunity of buying a high-grade Piano at an actual bona-fide saving. Don't let this opportunity go by. Don't wait. Don't hesitate. But DO IT NOW.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

'BIG BROTHERS' REPORT ON 400 BOY CASES

Secretary's Statement Shows 92 Per Cent of Lads Counseled Are Doing Well.

The report for the first quarter's work of the Big Brother organization of the Church Federation of St. Louis, made public yesterday, shows progress which has encouraged the formulation of a much larger program for the coming year than was at first anticipated.

Of the more than 400 cases of delinquent boys brought to the attention of the organization and taken in hand by the secretary, 92 per cent are regarded as successes. This means, the report states, that this percentage of the cases are doing well, and show no prospect of developing later into failures.

The secretary of the Big Brothers organization, Robert A. Roessel, is too conservative to claim them as unqualified successes, because, he says, only time can determine that, but at least that percentage of the total are by way of becoming good citizens instead of criminals because of the work of the Big Brother organization. Some of these boys are wards of the Juvenile Court and others would have been soon.

Aid by Friendly Counsel.

The Big Brother organization aims to help delinquent boys by friendly association and counsel of men who personally will undertake the supervision of individual cases. This includes finding jobs for boys who need them, encouraging boys to go to school, instilling right ideas and ambitions into the minds of the boys and aiding them wherever possible, but not giving them money or presents.

Two hundred business and professional men of the city, members of the various evangelical churches which comprise the Church Federation, are doing this work, and 60 boys now are in charge of 60 men, who are acting as big brothers to the boys.

The year's work which the organization has outlined includes several important civic movements. The establishment of a municipal child welfare commission, the formation of branch organization in individual professional and commercial circles of the city, a city-wide propaganda, enlisting the churches individually as well as collectively, and using the inherent gang spirit of boys to establish and develop group association for a mutually beneficial end.

Movement Began 11 Years Ago.

The Big Brother organization of the Church Federation is the outgrowth of the national Big Brother movement begun 11 years ago in New York City, but it working independently of that organization and deals only with St. Louis conditions and persons. Its officers are Judge Thomas C. Hennings of the St. Louis Circuit Court, honorary president; J. L. Howell, president; Police Captain Seth Singleton, vice president; Robert A. Roessel, secretary; A. O. Wilson, treasurer; Benjamin Wood, W. C. Ayer and Dr. George B. Mangold, head of the St. Louis School of Social Economy, directors.

THOUSANDS OF BELGIANS HOLD GOOD JOBS IN GERMANY

BERLIN, Oct. 14.—"Newspapers in hostile countries are spreading reports that Belgian workmen are compelled by the German Governor-General of Belgium, in violation of international law to perform labor for military purposes," says the Overseas News Agency. "This is far from the truth. For more than a year many Belgian workmen have preferred to live on public charity instead of working for an honest livelihood.

"Thousands of workmen availed themselves of offers made to them in Germany where they received wages higher than in Belgium. They have been working in Germany for some time and feel content.

Workmen who wish to live on charity will be sent to suitable places of employment in a short time. Most of these workmen are employed in quarries or in other work which is connected in no way with carrying on the war."

To Make Your Hair Look Naturally Curly

After shaking the hair down and brushing it out, apply a little liquid silmerine with a clean toothbrush and then roll the hair in curlers. This produces as beautiful curls and waves as you could wish for, perfectly natural in appearance, and they will last a long time. The full effect is secured within three hours, though some prefer to keep the hair done up over night.

A few ounces of liquid silmerine—which can, of course, be had at any drug store—will last for weeks, so it is quite economical to use. It also serves as an excellent dressing, giving the hair a delightful gloss. When the hair is combed out it will be as fluffy as though it had just been shampooed.—ADV.

THREE STAGES FOR CHURCH PAGEANT AT THE COLISEUM

Performance for Episcopal Convention Wednesday and Thursday Nights to Be Continuous.

The Missouri Diocese will produce for the General Convention of the Episcopal Church, now in session, the Pageant of the Church, with a cast of 2000 persons, at the Coliseum on Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

The final dress rehearsal will be conducted at the Coliseum Tuesday evening, under the direction of Dr. George Long, the pageant master, and his assistants, the Rev. Henry Mizner and Oliver C. Smith. The book, stage settings, costumes and music of the pageant were studied with experts.

The pageant will unfold itself from three stages, arranged as a continuous performance, so that the picture will be devoid of inartistic waits. The central arch permits a stage 50 feet wide, flanked on either side by a stage 22 feet wide, and the performances will present the new Coliseum settings for the first time. All available space in the building will be used as dressing rooms to handle the huge cast.

Biggest Indoor Pageant.

The Pageant of the Church will have several unique distinctions. For one, it will be the first pageant of ambitious size to be produced indoors. Also, it will be presented before the greatest gathering of the church, both in respect to prominence and numbers of its representatives, in its history. The delegates in attendance at the convention include 125 Bishops and 400 priests of the church.

The pageant is presented by the Executive Committee on arrangements as "An entertainment with a purpose," an expression coined by the pageant master. This purpose, he says, is to show by its episodes and tableaux the historic continuity of the church from the Day of Pentacost to the present year.

"By teaching, by addresses and by text books," says Dr. Long, "the fact of the continuity of the church has been presented to American church people, and yet it is not so indelibly impressed upon the minds of the majority that they can always recognize under varying conditions the historicity of the communion to which, by the providence of God, they belong. So it is hoped to give in the pageant another form of emphasizing this; and that it will perform the function of instructing the mind and quickening the imagination of many, not only of the church people and non-church people of St. Louis and community, but also of those attending the convention from afar; that all may be filled with a desire to absorb and impart to others the important facts of church history."

Scene at Jerusalem.

Beginning with a representation of the church at its first official and ministerial work, a tableaux depicts the scene in the upper room at Jerusalem, just after the descent of the Spirit upon the Apostles. The dramatic episode of the Council at Jerusalem and a tableau illustrative of St. Paul's first missionary endeavors at Athens follow.

In similar tableaux the scheme of episodes carries the spectator down through history, with successive representations of the vision of Constantine, the Council of Nicaea; St. Ambrose forcibly rebuking the presumptuous Emperor Theodosius; the martyrdom of St. Alban; St. Columbia at Iona; St. Gregory in the Roman slave market; St. Augustine and the British Bishops; St. Aidan and St. Oswald; martyrdom of Thomas A. Becket; signing of Magna Charta; Wycliffe and his poor preachers; Caxton and his printing press; the coronation of Edward VI; Archbishop Parker consecretaed; Elizabeth deposed by Rome; preaching at Drake's Bay; Jamestown and the evangelization of America.

The finale is highly idealistic, and will endeavor with all the force of dramatitc expression to bring out the spiritual theme, which, with the historicity, is the twin motive of the pageant. Replete with symbols, the finale closes with the representatives of the evangelized nations of the world grouped on the stage, with the characters of the pageant appearing in inverse order. With the picture complete, cherubims appear at the open golden gates of the City of God; a shaft of light spreads its effulgence to typify the eternal majesty of the trinity; and the concealed choir sings the "Te Deum" and "Hallelujah Chorus."

Music for the pageant has been specially written by Dr. Long and will be interpretive of the scenes. The orchestration has been done by Noel Poepping for his orchestra. A special cast committee, headed by Rev. Mr. Mizner, has supervised the roles.

Some of the Cast.

The individual tableaux have been prepared and rehearsed by the various parishes. Some of the more important roles are filled as follows: C. B. Woodward of St. John's as "St. Paul;" Carl W. Minch of St. Paul's of Carondelet as "St. Columbus;" the Rev. James Wise of Holy Communion as "St. Augustine;" Frank Weinel of St. Alban's as "St. Alban;" H. B. Condie of St. Stephen's of Ferguson as "Caxton;" Alex. Skinker of Clayton as "Admiral Sir Francis Drake;" George C. Mackay of Christ Church Cathedral as "St. Germanus;" Edward C. Bergt of St. Stephen's as "John Hancock;" the Rev. Edmund Duckworth, Church of the Redeemer, as "Henry VIII," and Mrs. Charles Cummings Collins as "Elizabeth."

It was originally intended to produce the pageant on but one night, but owing to an unprecedented advance sale, Manager George A. Randolph and his committee decided to repeat the spectacle. Seats are on sale only at Famous & Barr's.

LIKE DAYLIGHT AT NIGHT

Think of driving your car on a pitch-black night and all the road ahead for 300 feet, and the sides of the road, back 50 feet each way, all bathed in a strong yet softly diffused light that reveals every rut, stone, dip and rise as clearly—almost—as you'd see them in daylight—yet absolutely without glare.

That would be safe night-driving, wouldn't it? Yes, and it is just the safety that you and every other motorist may have who equips his car with the new and wonderful Prismolite Lens. The lens is a mathematically and scientifically perfect solution of the Motor-light Problem. As its name indicates, it projects light forward through prisms. The entire surface of the lens is formed under tremendous pressure into many small squares, each having four mathematically correct prismatic faces. These faces completely break up a direct projection of light rays, throwing them instead in every direction.

Prismolite

(Copyright and Patent Applied for)

The result is a vast volume of strong, mellow, glareless light that shows everything with perfect clearness and without confusion.

Prismolite Lens are extra strong well-tempered glass, ground and polished on one side to a plate glass finish. They stand all weather conditions.

Prismolite Lens do away with dimming of lights for City driving—meet the requirements of rigid City ordinances and make night-driving as safe as daylight driving. They have passed every test wherever demonstrated.

AUTOMOBILE STOCK!

—Backed By An Old-Established Automobile Factory, Now Producing Popular Priced Cars at About the Rate of 5,000 per Year.

Not a Mere "Prospect" on Which You Are Invited to Speculate on a Possible Outcome—Not an Investment Based on "Paper" Plans for a Problematical Plant to be Built "Some Time" in the Future—But a Real Opportunity to Participate in the Big, Sure Profits of a Successful Company Now Increasing Its Capacity for Supplying Demand That is Growing by Leaps and Bounds.

Brief Statement of Leading Facts:

THIS is not a new, untried proposition, nor a speculative venture in any sense. It is an invitation to join the Officers and Directors of the Crow-Elkhart Motor Company in their carefully matured plans for developing this long-established, successful automobile manufacturing plant to a point where production will take care of the enormously increased demand for the well known Crow-Elkhart cars.

Present Production at Rate of About 5,000 Cars per Year

During the past seven years the Crow-Elkhart factory (shown below) has been producing cars on a constantly increasing scale. From a first year production of 450 cars, the business has steadily grown to a present production of about 5,000 cars per year.

The business, without change of management, has grown to its present size without the sale of a dollar of stock to the public. The officers of the company, by careful and conservative management, have increased the original investment about one thousand (1,000%) per cent during the past seven years, making an annual profit of more than one hundred and twenty-five (125%) percent on the original investment.

A thoroughly efficient Sales Organization has been built up, consisting of 400 loyal, enthusiastic Dealers and Distributors, who believe in the car and the company back of it.

Earnings to be Greatly Increased

Now the same men, who have brought this big enterprise to its present success, propose to build up this already going business as quickly as possible to a production of 30,000 cars per year, at which point they conservatively estimate that they can increase the earnings to between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 per year within a reasonable time.

Special Protection for Investors

The $10 par value shares, now offered for a limited time at $5.50, are treasury stock. There is no promotion stock on the market. Every dollar of the proceeds from the sale of this treasury stock goes into the treasury of the Company for the expansion of its business.

By special agreement the principals have placed all their stock in escrow for two years. During that period their shares cannot be offered for sale. No other Investment Banking or Brokerage House is authorized to offer Crow-Elkhart treasury stock for sale without permission from W. M. Sheridan & Co., (Inc.)

Stock Quotations Sure to Rise

These unusual safeguards protect the market and give investors every assurance of an uninterrupted rise in the quotations on this stock. Within a few months the shares now offered at $5.50 will be quoted at par—$10 per share.

In order to put into immediate effect their carefully worked out plans for increased capacity on a large scale, additional capital is needed. It has, therefore, been decided to place on the market a block of treasury stock of the

CROW-ELKHART MOTOR COMPANY

Capitalization 1,000,000 Shares of Common Stock, Par Value, $10 Each. No Preferred Stock. Fully Paid, Non-Assessable, Non-Forfeitable. A limited number of shares of Treasury Stock are offered at $5.50 per share to raise additional capital for enlarging plant and equipment and increasing production to 30,000 cars per year.

The People

The people back of this company are the same who have developed the business to its present stage of success. They are men of high personal and business standing in Elkhart and throughout the State of Indiana. Their record of results achieved during the past seven years is a sufficient guarantee that the interests of stockholders will be in safe hands.

M. E. Crow, President

A man of wide experience in the manufacture of motor cars. His early experience was with the Elkhart Motor Company, building a very high priced and luxurious car. He is President of the Collier Motor Truck Company, Director of the Sevinson Electric Company, and a member of the Advisory Board of the Norwalk Auto Parts Company. Mr. Crow is also a member of the Society of Automobile Engineers.

Dr. E. C. Crow, Treasurer

Dr. Crow was Treasurer of the Elkhart Motor Company before the organization of the Crow-Elkhart Motor Company. He is a prominent physician of the city of Elkhart, who has been honored many times by offices in State Medical Societies, and is now actively identified with a National Association. He is Vice-President of the Public Service Board of Elkhart, and Vice-President and Director of the Christiana Country Club.

D. C. Thomas, Secretary

Mr. Thomas gave up the banking business some five years ago to become identified with the Crow automobile interests. Previous to this time he devoted fifteen years of his life to the banking business. He was formerly Secretary of the Equitable Building and Loan Association.

A. H. Handler, Engineer and Production Manager

A man of very wide European experience in the manufacture of automobiles. He received his early education along mechanical engineering lines at the University of Bruges, Belgium, after which he served a long apprenticeship in the leading mechanical shops of European countries. Mr. Handler is a member of the Royal Society of Mechanical Engineers of England and has had both Belgian and English experience.

M. E. Hoshaw, Sales Manager

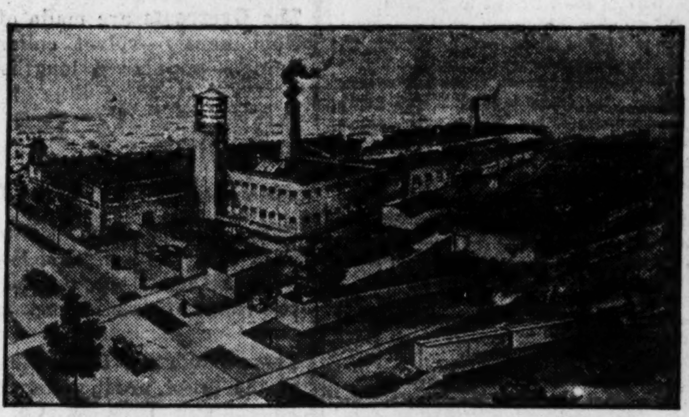
Was Sales Manager of the Marvin-Smith Company for a number of years, and has been with the Crow organization for the past seven years. He is a man of wide experience and has a large personal acquaintanceship with dealers throughout the country.

The Plant



This Entire Plant, Now Producing Cars at the Rate of About 5,000 per Year, Is Owned and Operated by Crow-Elkhart Motor Company

When you buy shares of Crow-Elkhart treasury stock you are acquiring an actual interest in this successful plant, which now meets every requirement, except as to size. The present factory is a model of efficiency, so far as it goes. The buildings are equipped with the most modern machinery and tools possible to obtain for the economical manufacture of automobiles. It is now only a matter of adding new structures (some of which are already under way) and increasing equipment to a point necessary to quickly double the present output of about 5,000 cars per year, and then as rapidly as possible to bring production up to 30,000 cars per year.

The Product

The entire effort of the company is centered on the production of a light 5-passenger touring car selling for $795, and a light ("Clover Leaf" body) 3-passenger roadster at $845, both built on the same Chassis. These cars embody more high grade features than any others selling for less than $1,000. The New 1917 Model 5-Passenger Crow-Elkhart "35" at $795 is proving a genuine selling sensation, as it represents a bona fide saving of $200 to $300.

Features of Crow-Elkhart Cars

The big and growing demand for Crow-Elkhart cars is due to their genuine merits. The Crow-Elkhart 5-Passenger "35" represents a thousand dollar construction at $795. The specifications clearly prove it a car of superior merit.

Wheel base is 114 inches—extra long, giving plenty of room; Motor, 35 horsepower, 4 cylinders en bloc; Body, full streamline, beautifully upholstered—instruments on cowl; Electric Equipment, dyneto 2 unit, 6 volt starting and lighting system, Willard storage battery; Zenith Carburetor, Connecticut Ignition; Clutch, Multiple disc, 7 plate, Raybestos lined. Full Floating Rear Axle; Weight, 2,040 pounds.

A Confidence-Breeding Test

The remarkable sturdiness of this car gives you confidence. The other day, a Crow-Elkhart "35" covered 300 miles over some of the worst roads, hills and sand in the United States between Elkhart, Indiana, and Cincinnati, Ohio, with gears locked in high! No car of this price—to our knowledge—has ever equaled this performance. Seven years' success has proved the basic engineering principles which remain unchanged in this new 1917 edition.

Not an "Assembled" Car

The insurance of steady production of Crow-Elkhart cars is satisfactorily safeguarded. A very large proportion of its component parts is manufactured in the company's own factory and, unlike most manufacturers of medium priced cars, they do not depend upon others for bodies, upholstering, painting, tops, fenders, tanks or other sheet metal parts. In addition to these parts, they manufacture their own clutches, control sets, mufflers, etc., and do all their own machine work and plating.

A Safe and Profitable Investment

This is a clean, honest, ably-managed business, without a single uncertain, "freakish" or untried feature. We have spent several months thoroughly investigating every angle of this proposition, and we can unreservedly recommend it to our old friends and prospective clients as what we consider to be an absolutely safe and unusually profitable investment.

Those who know us realize that we would not come out with this strong endorsement unlesss we were perfectly sure of our ground. But we feel that we are right! We have the utmost confidence in the essential soundness of The People, The Plant and The Product back of this offer.

Here is the big point of difference that makes Crow-Elkhart as an investment stand out clearly in a class by itself:

The officials of this Company during seven years FIRST built up the business to a point of recognized success with a REAL factory producing 5,000 REAL cars per year; a REAL dealers' organization, clamoring for double and treble their present allotment of cars, and over 1,000 per cent REAL profits—THEN they come to the public and offer to let them participate in future earnings on a big scale.

Compare these big, basic FACTS carefully point by point with the claims submitted by any other automobile investment offer now before the public. Then draw your own conclusions!

Better still, visit the Crow-Elkhart plant at Elkhart. Go through the factory and see with your own eyes just what is going on there. President Crow will welcome your visit and give you every possible opportunity for getting ALL the facts. In the meantime ask any bank in Elkhart, or any leading commercial agency, what they think of the Crow-Elkhart Motor Co.

This Stock Will Advance Substantially

For immediate acceptance we offer Crow-Elkhart Common at $5.50 per share, par value $10.00. There is no preferred stock in this Company. As $5.50 is the public opening quotation, and the stock is sure to be quoted at par or above, we advise an immediate purchase as you may never again have another opportunity to buy at the price of only $5.50 a share. The safety of this investment, coupled with the assurance of unusual profits, makes this proposition the most attractive we have ever handled.

YOU CAN'T BRUSH OR WASH OUT DANDRUFF

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight and by morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—ADV.

Work was done in triangulation, base-line, measurement, topographic surveying, etc. A side trip to the Cheesman dam gave the students a glimpse of one of the United States Government's big engineering feats. A trip was made also to the smelter of the American Smelting and Refining Co. in Denver.

"OCTAVE THANET" ATTENDING CHURCH CONVENTION HERE

Noted Author and Anti-Suffragist a Member of Episcopal Auxiliary.

IS MISS JESSIE FRENCH

Tells of Her Work During Recent Votes for Women Campaign in Iowa.

By MARGUERITE MARTYN.

"It is good to find a cause conceded to be wholly harmless, without any upsetting effect, such as is the Women's Auxiliary, to which women can devote themselves."

This remark of Miss Alice French I quote as an impression in epitome of the writer who is better known by her pen name, Octave Thanet.

Upon all occasions I should not find such anti-radical, unrevolutionary views suited to my mood.

But after a day's strenuous and unsuccessful effort to catch up with and engage for a moment the uninterrupted attention of some of the hundreds of interesting women attending the Episcopal triennial convention—to find anybody home between services, meetings, social functions—and after a surplus of oratory and soul-wearing eloquence in debates pro and con, it was nice and "comfy" to sink into a chair in the living room of her suite at the Planters and hear it placidly stated that few things need changing and upsetting in the world after all.

"I think when all these zealous gentlemen have had a chance to unburden their minds of the opinions with which they are overflowing there will, after all, be few if any changes in the church canons," was another remark.

Idea of Omitting Word "Obey."

"The idea of omitting the word 'obey' from the marriage service! It is ridiculous to bother about it. Whichever will is the stronger prevails—always has, always will—be it the huband's or the wife, however it is written in the book."

"I understand you are strongly anti-suffrage," I queried to her, and she responded:

"Not strongly so. I am not insensible to right on both sides of the question. When in Iowa it became necessary to assert an opinion in opposition to a change which threatened simply because of indifference to the subject. Then I helped to organize an anti-suffrage association, and in our county we very effectively outnumbered the suffragists three to one.

"But now that the campaign is over, suffragists and antis are as friendly as ever, and we work side by side for any public cause as we could not do if we were divided on partisan lines.

"Any sort of organization among women is good because it teaches them to work together in comradeship—something they have not heretofore learned."

Queries brought out some of her objections to the suffrage as follows:

"If it were efficiency in Government that is desired there need be no distinction on account of sex. The distinction ought to be made on the basis of tax paying. It is the taxpayer who bears the burden. There might with justice be this distinction, the small taxpayer having as much voice as the large taxpayer

"The ballot is nothing except a political device for getting at public opinion and public sentiment would be far better expressed without the conflicting element of partisan politics."

The several stock arguments of the antis that women are too emotional, or too indifferent, too personal, too partisan, were expounded, too.

Only Right Is Might.

"After all," was her sweeping conclusion, "there is only one right and that is the right of the strongest either mental, moral or physical. It is bound to prevail. Let woman become strong in her own peculiar sphere and man become stronger in his. The evolutionary trend is to try to make women and men as different as possible."

Miss French's views may sound annoyingly complacent to some who are striving so earnestly to change things, but in her personality she carries conviction to a degree.

She has lived quite a number of years, I judge by her white hair, yet her face is amazingly unlined, her eyes brilliant, her poise perfect.

Around her are gathered the evidence of competence, comfort, luxury. A homelike transformation had been wrought in the hotel room. An array of books, boxes of candy, cigarettes were within arm's reach. She looked comfortable, contented.

It is three years, she confessed, since she has written a line, and where formerly she was a delegate to these conventions, now she is content to be an alternate with but little to do.

I wondered if she never had experienced striving and unrest and asked if this tolerant attitude always had been her philosophy.

"I thing if I am able to see both sides of these many questions it is due to the fact that I had several brothers," she replied. "Reared in a household of boys, buffeted and knocked about, a one-sided view-point has not much chance to survive. I think I early learned to love fair play."

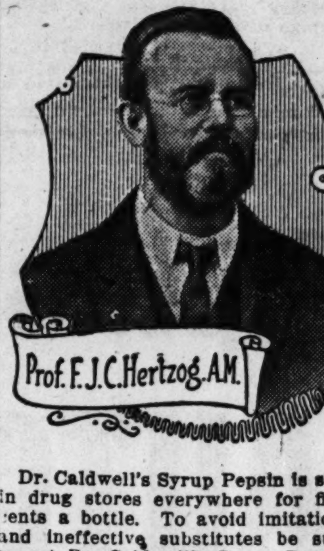
Professor Hertzog Praises This Perfect Laxative

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin an Ideal Remedy for Constipation.

In every family there is more or less occasion for a laxative remedy. It is to meet this need that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is prepared, and that this combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin fulfils its purpose is proven by its place in thousands of American homes.

Prof. F. J. C. Hertzog, the well known linguist, 2341 North Orianna St., Philadelphia, Pa., wrote to Dr. Caldwell that he has used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in his household with excellent results and that he and his family consider it indeed a friend in need, and always keep a bottle of it on hand.

Constipation is the direct cause of much serious illness and is a condition that should never be neglected. Harsh cathartics and violent purgatives should never be employed to relieve constipation because the very violence of their action shocks the entire system. A mild laxative, such as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is far preferable, being mild and gentle in its action without griping or other pain or discomfort; its freedom from all opiate or narcotic drugs makes it an ideal remedy for children.



Prof. F. J. C. Hertzog. A.M.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold in drug stores everywhere for fifty cents a bottle. To avoid imitations and ineffective substitutes be sure to get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. See that a facsimile of Dr. Caldwell's signature and his portrait appear on the yellow carton in which the bottle is packed. A trial bottle free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 455 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.

"READY TO FIGHT FOR THINGS THAT ARE AMERICAN"

—PRESIDENT WILSON.

Tells Delegation of Pennsylvania Democrats That Peace and Continuance of Prosperity or a Disturbance Policy Are Issues of Campaign.

G. O. P. VOCAL ELEMENT FOR WAR HE SAYS

Silent Party Intimates It Wanted Peace, but of Another Kind, He Declares—Asserts Progressive Leaders Betrayed Their Party.

By Associated Press.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Oct. 14.—In a speech before a large delegation of Pennsylvania Democrats who came here with bands playing and banners flying President Wilson declared today that, while he is for peace, "America is always ready to fight for things that are American." He summed up his idea of the issues of the present campaign in the words: "America knows that it is faced with this choice: Peace, the continuance of the development of business along the lines which it has now established and developed and the maintenace of well known progressive lines of action, on the one hand, or, on the other, a disturbance of policy all along the line, new conditions, new adjustments, undefined alterations of policy, and back of it all invisible government."

The President discussed what he declared was the attitude toward war and peace of defeated elements of the Republican party.

"I understand from the leaders of the Republican party that nothing has been done right," he said. "They do not say that the thing done was always wrong, but the way in which it was done was always wrong.

What Was Done Obtained Peace.

"They do not venture to say—that is, the private counsel does not venture to say—that we wanted anything but peace, but they would have preferred some other way, not disclosed, of obtaining peace. The vocal part says, 'We wanted war.' The silent part intimates that we wanted peace, but wanted another kind of peace. They can never get over that fundamental uneasiness, gentlemen, that America is in charge of somebody else than themselves. But America knows that the things that were done did obtain peace, and it does not know that the things that might have been done would have obtained peace."

Mr. Wilson reiterated previous declarations that it is almost impossible to do anything in the field of foreign affairs, because foreign nations "have been led to believe that a dominant element in the Republican party is in favor of drawing the United States into the European war, and they have been told, with abundant evidence, that it is probable that if the Republicans succeed we shall enter upon a policy of exploitation of our neighbors in Mexico."

The President declared that although the leaders of the Republican party demand that the rights of Americans be protected everywhere, on one occasion the "Republican machine was able to compel a majority of its members in the House of Representatives to vote that American citizens had no right to travel on the high seas." He added:

"If their leaders believe in the rights of American citizens, why don't their followers? If their leaders are so stiff to see that Americans get their rights everywhere, why do these men vote that Americans shall get their rights nowhere? One of the most regrettable incidents of American history is that there should have been found men in the Congress of the United States willing to vote in that sense."

Attacks Progressive Chiefs.

Mr. Wilson reiterated his advocacy of a league of Nations to preserve the peace of the world and attacked the leaders of the Progressive party who, he said, had betrayed the rank and file. He also declared that the selection of a Congress is just as important as the election of a President, because "the real source of action and the real machinery of obstruction is in Congress.

He asserted that the forces of reaction are in control of the Republicans in Congress.

Vance C. McCormick, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, presided at the meeting and A. Mitchell Palmer, Democratic National Committeeman from Pennsylvania, introduced Mr. Wilson. The delegation, which came here on eight special trains, constituted the largest audience which has heard the President speak at Shadow Lawn. After the speech the President shook hands with everybody present.

The President's Speech.

President Wilson in his speech said in part:

"I need not tell you that I am glad to see you, but let me say that I am especially glad to see you because there are some things which

LOCKS HUSBAND IN HOME AND GOES TO SUE FOR A DIVORCE

Woman Makes Sure She Will Get Service on Summons When She Returns With Deputy.

When Mrs. Olive Mae Blanton Burgess, 30 years old, of 7222 Elm avenue, Maplewood, set out yesterday to file suit for divorce at Clayton, she took extraordinary measures to see that her husband, Frank L. Burgess, an enlisted man in the navy, could be had readily found when the time came for him to be served with a summons.

Arising early in the morning, when her husband was in bed, she hid his clothing and locked him in the house.

A lawyer had the petition drawn up, alleging desertion and abuse, had it filed at Clayton and took a deputy home with her to serve the summons.

In the kitchen they found Seaman Burgess, looking like a union suit advertisement, reading a newspaper. The family dog was near him.

The first thing the deputy heard Mrs. Burgess say to her husband was: "Why didn't you let the dog out of the house?" The answer, in even tones, was: "How could I when you had all the keys?" The officer then read the summons and departed.

VETERAN POSTMAN MUSTERED OUT IN MILITARY STYLE

F. A. Pim, Who Retires After 36 Years, Saluted by Men at Ceremony in Postoffice.

The formal ceremony of an honorable army discharge was used yesterday by Postmaster Selph to mark the retirement from the St. Louis Postoffice of Frederick A. Pim, a clerk, who had a record of 36 years service. Pim, who lives at 2604 North Eleventh street, resigned to enter other employment. He is 59 years old.

About 100 of Pim's fellow employes assembled in the Postmaster's office for the ceremony. Postmaster Selph made a short address. At a signal, a bugle was blown and Pim's fellow employes saluted. The Postmaster announced that Pim was "mustered out with an honorable discharge."

FORCED AIR HEATERS IN ALL STREET CARS THIS WINTER

State Commission Orders Fresh Air Inlets Be Kept Open Except When Temperature Is Below 10 Degrees.

The State Public Service Commission yesterday issued an order regulating the heating and ventilating of street cars this winter, in response to a complaint from the Public Health Committee of the Civic League.

The League complained that the inlets for fresh air and the roof ventilators were kept closed and that the foul air was being circulated in the cars through the forced air heaters. The United Railways Company will have every car in the service equipped with forced air heaters this fall.

The new rule requires the ventilators and fresh air inlets to be kept open at all times except when the temperature outside falls below 10 degrees.

The letter was addressed to the Kuttawa postmaster and contained the stained slip of paper.

The letter is signed by M. F. Davin, who says he is a former resident of the United States, but now in the service of France.

TODAY MRS. WILSON'S BIRTHDAY

President Buys Her a Diamond and Platinum Brooch.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Oct. 14.—President Wilson slipped away from Shadow Lawn today and motored over to Asbury Park, where he purchased a diamond and platinum brooch—the most expensive the jeweler had. Then he returned to Shadow Lawn, asking that his little shopping expedition be kept a secret.

Tomorrow is Mrs. Wilson's 44th birthday and the brooch is to be the President's present to her. There will be a birthday party, to be participated in by all of the Shadow Lawn household, and a birthday cake.

HUGHES DENIES VOTE FOR HIM IS A VOTE FOR WAR

"I Am a Man of Peace," Candidate Says at Lincoln, Neb.

REVIEWS HUERTA AFFAIR

Declares Present Prosperity Is Due to European Conflict—Predicts "Awakening."

LINCOLN, Neb., Oct. 14.—Charles E. Hughes today characterized as "preposterous" the declaration that a vote for him means a vote for war.

"I am a man of peace," Hughes said. "Who wants war? I don't want war."

Correct politics, Hughes said, would keep America out of war.

"The sort of thing we have been having will not keep us out of war," he said. "It will embroil us in difficulty."

In the six addresses which marked the opening day of his campaign in Nebraska the Republican nominee discussed nearly all the issues of the campaign. He characterized as "temporary and abnormal" the present prosperity of the country, and urged support of the Republican party so that a protective tariff might be enacted to fortify American enterprises, after the war, against unequal competition.

The country is living, he said, on "the stimulant" of the European war and will not long have the stimulant.

"You might as well talk to a drunken man of the bliss of intoxication," Hughes said. "Our opponents, instead of making political capital out of the present prosperity, which came up through the European war, ought to be thinking of what they did to the country with their policy, put in force through the Underwood bill. There may be those who enjoy the contemplation of that sort of thing, but they will have a very rude awakening."

Calls Adamson Law "Gold Brick."

The nominee assailed the Adamson law as a "gold brick" handed to labor. This declaration was made before an audience of railroad employes, who crowded around his car at Wymore, an unscheduled stop, where the train changed engines.

At Falls City, Beatrice, Fairbury, Fairmount, York and here tonight Hughes addressed audiences which frequently interrupted him to applaud. In his speech here the nominee went into detail on his views with respect to the international considerations of peace. As at Fairbury he replied to the charge that a vote for him means a vote for war.

"I have heard it said since I came into Nebraska," Hughes said, "that someone has been going through the State saying that a vote for me meant a vote for war. Did you ever hear a more preposterous proposition to present to men? I am a man of peace. I have been spending my life in maintaining the institutions of peace. I desire in that way to promote international peace. Who can think without horror of the ravages of war? Who can desire war? I do not desire war. I do not desire petty wars. I do not desire war in Mexico to satisfy a personal vindictiveness against a disliked ruler. I don't like that kind of war.

"I believe in correct policies. They will keep us out of war. The sort of thing we have been having will not keep us out of war. It will embroil us in difficulty. It did embroil us in difficulty in Mexico.

"We wish well to all people; we desire to have prosperity throughout the world, but we have a particular care here. Unless we take care of our own we shall never serve humanity. Unless we develop the great opportunities of the United States we will serve no one whatever. I am for America first and America efficient.

"Our friends on the other side seem to think that everybody who disagrees with them wants war. Well, that would be a very cheerful way for a blind man to consider the situation.

"Our friends on the other side certainly have not got a monopoly on peace. Let us look a little at the record. They tell us they are so strongly for the preservation of peace that if any one criticises what they have done he must be a militarist.

Says Administration Meddled.

"I maintain that the most important thing for the purpose of safeguarding the peace of the land is correct policies. That is important in this hemisphere: that is particularly important in Latin America. That was very important in Mexico. Instead of having a policy of peace based upon a correct attitude with regard to that unfortunate country, our administration, this present administration, entered into a policy of officious intermeddling with matters which did not concern it, and embroiled this country in actual war. That is the real fact of the case."

Hughes reviewed the administration's policy with respect to Huerta.

"I stand here to say, and I challenge contradiction, that the threat to make war upon that individual and to use whatever force was adequate to put him out of the Government which, whether we recognize it or not, others had recognized, was utterly indefensible in law or in morals," Hughes declared.

Speaking of the Democratic attitude the nominee said:

"They have not been very definite

JIM ALI SEEN WITH MAGARIAN BOY DAY LAD DISAPPEARED

Held by Police in Connection With Finding of Child's Decapitated Body.

IS CLOSELY QUESTIONED

Witness Says Child Returned Home After Receiving Candy From Turk.

The police investigation into the murder of 3-year-old Alphonse Magarian, whose headless body, tied up in an old gunnysack and with hands and feet bound with cord, was found Friday morning on the East St. Louis city dump, up to late last night had brought out the following developments, upon which Chief of Detectives Stocker said he would continue to hold two prisoners who were questioned closely for four hours last night.

A witness whose name Chief Stocker refused to divulge identified Jim Ali, a Turk, of 1400 Walnut street, East St. Louis, the latest man to be arrested, as one of two men he saw talking to the Magarian boy the afternoon he disappeared, in an alley near the home of the boy's father, A. D. Magarian, a wealthy Armenian baker. This witness said Ali gave the boy a bag of candy and then carried him from Sixteenth street almost to Fourteenth street. He saw Ali put the child down and the latter returned home.

Sacks Found in Room.

It has been established that Mrs. Magarian changed the boy's clothing after this incident and that the lad disappeared shortly afterward.

The same witness said Zacker Bogosian, proprietor of a pool room, who was the first man arrested in the case, resembled the other of the two men who met the boy, but he was not positive in this identification. Bogosian and Ali are known to be very close friends.

Three gunny sacks, found in Ali's room were similar to the one in which the boy's body was found.

A chemical test of stains on a dagger and on a piece of rope found in the room of Ali convinced the authorities that they were blood.

A close comparison of a piece of cord found in a yard near the poolroom of Bogosian convinced Chief Stocker that it was the same kind of cord as that found on the body of the boy.

The cord found in Ali's room was of the same kind, but appeared newer. All these pieces were sisal, little smaller than the size ordinarily used for clothes lines.

The holding of Ali in connection with the Magarian case was incidental to the arrest yesterday afternoon of 14 Turks on complaint of City Clerk Walsh that they were operating restaurants without licenses. Ali was one of these, and at the police station a man pointed him out as the person he had seen carrying a gunnysack on Tenth street, near Broadway, one day last week.

The police then searched Ali's room and found under the mattress a stained dagger and a piece of cord.

Upon further investigation it was learned that last Tuesday Ali took a pair of trousers to a cleaning establishment at 1336 Broadway to have some spots taken out. An employe of the place told the police the same trousers were cleaned the week before. Ali last night said these stains were from grapes.

Says Ali Was Unfriendly.

Magarian told reporters that Ali had been unfriendly toward him since another Turk had Ali arrested several months ago. Ali blamed Margarian for the arrest, the latter said.

Bogosian maintains in his answers to the police questioning his former declarations of ignorance of the crime. No analysis has yet been made of stains on an eight-inch dagger found in his room Friday. A test with peroxide of hydrogen on stains on a board found in the rear of Bogosian's place resulted in no reaction, indicating that the stains were not blood.

Chief Stocker indicated last night that he would be ready to present this evidence before the Coroner's jury tomorrow.

CANADA'S WHEAT CROP LESS THAN HALF THAT OF 1915

Official Estimate Places Yield at 159,173,000 Bushels, Compared With 373,303,600 Previous Year.

OTTAWA, Oct. 14.—The wheat crop of Canada for the present year will be only 159,123,000 bushels, as compared with 373,303,600 bushels in 1915, according to an official estimate issued today.

A marked decrease in the production of oats also was indicated by the estimated yield of 338,469,000 bushels, as against 520,103,000 bushels last year.

NORWAY BARS SUBMARINES

Craft in Territorial Water Will Be Attacked Without Warning.

CHRISTIANIA, Oct. 14.—A royal letter was issued today forbidding from Oct. 20 submarines belonging to belligerent navies traveling in Norwegian territorial waters, under penalty of attack without warning.

In hard weather a submarine, to save life, may seek refuge in Norwegian waters, but must then keep above water, fly the national flag and leave immediately the reason for entering no longer exists.

WASHINGTON IS EXPECTING SECOND GERMAN U-BOAT

Officials Believe That U-53 Is Now on Its Way Back to Wilhelmshaven.

U. S. BASE DISCREDITED

Berlin as Well as Washington Scout Report of American Supply Point.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—Government officials believe that the German submarine U-53 is now on her way back to Germany and that another is on the way to the American coast. The nature and source of information upon which their belief is founded has not been disclosed. Officials also discredit reports of secret base on the American coast. Every report of one traced down so far has been without a shadow of foundation in fact.

The British steamer Stephano, sunk by the U-53 off the New England coast Sunday, was fired on without warning, her commander, Capt. Smith, reported in an affidavit received today by the State Department. Capt. Smith declared three solid shots were used, the first of which hit the Stephano's bow. No evidence corroborating his statement has been received by the department, and action probably will not be taken until the U-53 has had time to reach home.

No Submarine Base in U. S., Says Berlin Authority.

BERLIN, Oct. 14 (by wireless to Sayville).—In answer to the report sent out by the British wireless that the German submarine U-53 "torpedoed in some cases and sank ships," a competent German authority, says the Overseas News Agency, makes the following statement:

"The commercial war near the coast of the United States is being carried on according to rules and the German promise, which means that a merchantman can be stopped and that after the vessel has been searched and the crew and passengers are in safety the vessel can be sunk under certain conditions.

"These conditions are, for instance, when a hostile steamer or a neutral steamer carrying contraband of war are involved, or when the military situation makes it impossible to bring a steamer which has been captured into port as a prize.

"In no case, however, can it be construed to mean that a merchantman may be sunk by a torpedo without previous warning.

"According to further reports from Washington the American authorities are said to be afraid that very complicated questions of neutrality may arise if the German submarines operate so near the American coast and that such submarine action is equivalent to a blockade.

"To this it is stated that the German sea forces are entitled to carry on a cruiser warfare anywhere in the open sea. Territorial waters of neutral states are carefully respected. A blockade, of course, is out of the question. Only hostile ships as prizes or such neutral vessels that carry contraband are stopped.

"A blockade means the capture of all ships steering towards or leaving a blockaded coast without regard to flag or cargo.

"The question asked by one American journal as to whether it is necessary that our coast be made a base for a German submarine must be considered superfluous, since the U-53, on touching at Newport did not even use her right to take on fuel and food to which, as a man of war he was entitled.

"No sensible American citizen will believe that a secret depot for supplying German submarines could be established on the American coast.

"Curiously opposed to these many complaints is the fact that since the beginning of the war British cruisers have been watching American ports and have even approached the coast of New York so closely that they could be seen from the roofs of tall buildings with the naked eye."

EPISCOPAL LAYMEN DEFEAT PROPOSED CANON ON DIVORCE

Change Would Have Forbidden Marriage of Either Person While Other Was Alive.

OLD CONDITION STANDS

Brooklyn Pastor Opposes Plan With Impassioned Speech in Behalf of Poor Parishioners.

Laymen of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in the House of Deputies of the Episcopal general convention at Moolah Temple yesterday, voted down the proposed canon, or church law, forbidding ministers to solemnize marriage for any divorced person whose former husband or wife is still living.

The defeat of the proposal followed an impassioned speech against it by the Rev. John Howard Mellish of Brooklyn, who declared himself a Socialist and who discussed the subject of divorce and remarriage from the standpoint of the poor and the tempted.

Turning to the New York delegation, which had been shown in the previous discussion to be strongly in favor of the proposal, the Rev. Mr. Mellish said:

"I should vote with you gentlemen from New York if this were merely a question of legislating for the rich. But I wish to speak from the point of view of the poor man and the poor woman. To illustrate my meaning, I will tell a story. Some years ago, in the mountain districts, there was a poor woman whose husband, after treating her cruelly, deserted her, leaving her four children to support. Afterwards another man took her and the children under his protection, and made a good living for them.

Bishop Furnished Divorce Fee.

"Some time later the woman was converted, and took her dilemma to a Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, now dead. After he had heard her story, he himself gave her $10 to get a divorce from her husband, and when this had been done, he himself performed the ceremony which married her to the other man."

Then he paused. The audience for the first time during the debate was giving its undivided attention to the speaker.

"I ask you gentlemen," the speaker cried, "what would you have done under the circumstances?"

There was a great burst of applause.

"Surely," the speaker added, "that is what should have been done."

The speaker said there were many instances of women with children abandoned by their husbands who would be driven to extremities for a livelihood unless they could remarry. "It would be well," he added sarcastically, "for us to draw our robes about us and shift the responsibility to clergymen of other denominations. But such action," he continued earnestly, "would conflict with the fundamental tenets of Christianity."

The House of Deputies, the lower house of the convention, with 610 members, is equally divided in its membership between clergymen and laymen. Four clergymen and four laymen represent each diocese, and each of these groups of four constitutes a voting unit. Under the rules governing the convention, any proposal, to pass the House of Deputies, must have the support of a majority of the lay groups and a majority of the clerical groups. No proposal which is not approved by both clergy and laity can be sent to the House of Bishops, the upper house of the convention.

Vote on Divorce Proposal.

The vote on the divorce proposal was: Clerical groups, 40½ for and 24¾ against; lay groups, 29 for and 32¾ against. The fractional votes are those of missionary districts, each of which is entitled to one-fourth of a vote. Eight clerical groups and six lay groups, each of which was equally divided, were not counted. As the vote within each of the groups of four was not announced, and as it might be either three to one or four to none, an exact figure, showing the number of individual votes cast each way, cannot be given.

The proposed canon was prepared and recommended by a joint commission of Bishops, clergymen and laymen appointed by the general convention of 1913, held in New York. Because of its defeat, the present canon on the subject of divorce and remarriage, enacted 12 years ago, will continue in force for at least three years more.

This canon provides that a minister may perform the marriage ceremony for a person who was the innocent party in a divorce suit, after the facts in the case have been presented to the Bishop of the diocese.

Half Holiday Taken.

The convention gave itself a half-holiday yesterday afternoon. Most of the Bishops and several of the clergymen will preach in St. Louis and suburban churches today. A list of these preaching appointments appears in another section of the Post-Dispatch. A mass meeting on the subject of "Missions," will be held at 3:30 this afternoon in Moolah Temple, and the speakers will be Bishop Brent of the Philippines, Bishop Restarick of Honolulu, Bishop Graves of Shanghai, Bishop Nichols of California, Bishop Atwood of Arizona and the Rev. Dr. R. W. Patton. A women's mass meeting will be

BROKER REPORTED TO HAVE $100,000 TO BET ON WILSON

Wall Street Man Said to Want Odds of 10 to 7 to Place Wager.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—A report was circulated in Wall street today, emanating from thoroughly trustworthy sources, that a prominent member of the New York Stock Exchange had $100,000 to bet that Wilson will be re-elected, provided he can obtain odds of 10 to 7 against the Democratic candidate.

This report had a startling effect in Wall street betting circles, but as no such odds prevailed against the chances of the President the Stock Exchange member was unable to place any of the big sum.

Edward McQuade, one of the biggest curb commissioners, had $5000 to place against Wilson at 10 to 9. Another curb broker offered $5000 against $4000 on Hughes, or 10 to 8. One bet of $700 against $1000 on Wilson was placed by McQuade, while another curb broker bet $1600 against $2000 on Wilson, or 8 to 10.

Some curb commissioners would give no odds on Hughes, and for the first time since the opening of the campaign, they held the Republican candidate at even money.

Some bettors said that between now and election the odds will work around until Wilson becomes the favorite.

A prominent railroad auditor, just returned from a Western trip with big railroad officials, yesterday bet $100 against $500 that before election day Wilson will be at least a 10 to 7 favorite.

BANK NOTES STOLEN FROM TREASURY VAULTS—CLERK HELD

Government Official Says Some of Money Was Found in Man's Home in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—For the first time in many years Uncle Sam's big money vaults in the United States Treasury here have been robbed. Mark Latham, a clerk in the office of the Auditor for the Post Office Department, but detailed to work in the vaults of the Treasury, is held in the United States jail in default of $10,000 bond.

Ten bank notes in sheets, all of which were unsigned, were stolen from the vaults. They were valued at $500. The robbery was discovered when several of the notes, bearing forged signatures, turned up at the Treasury Department for redemption.

Following the arrest of the clerk, who has been employed in the Treasury Department for 12 years, a search was made of his home. There Assistant United States Attorney Arth said, two unsigned notes of the $10 denomination were found on top of the furnace. Latham has a wife and child. He declined to make a statement.

MILITIAMAN'S MUTILATED BODY IS FOUND AT NOGALES, ARIZ.

Indications Are That He Was Murdered and Three Regular Army Men Are Arrested.

NOGALES, Ariz., Oct. 14.—The mutilated body of George K. Shiflett of K Company, Second California, Regiment, from Selma, Cal., was found early today just outside the yards of the Southern Pacific Railroad here. Bullet holes in the right shoulder and left thigh and blood-stained clothes indicate the soldier had been murdered. An effort had been made, according to the authorities, to place the body in such a position on the tracks that it would appear that it had been run over, but examination of the engine of a troop train standing near by revealed no evidence of this sort.

Three regulars, believed to have been in Shiflett's company last night, were arrested on suspicion. One of them arrested carried an automatic pistol with an exploded shell in it.

926 NAMES TAKEN FROM BOOKS BY REGISTRATION REVISION

Total of 171,386 Left—2000 to 2500 Still to Be Registered.

Revision of registration last Friday eliminated 926 names and left a total of 171,386 on the books, it was announced by the Board of Election Commissioners yesterday. It is estimated that between 2000 and 2500 names will be added when those who were sick or more than 50 miles from St. Louis, are registered on Nov. 1. Members of the First Regiment will be among those registered as absentees.

Those who removed since Sept. 21, or who will before Nov. 1, can be transferred at the offices of the Election Commissioners in the City Hall until the latter date. Absentees and "invalids" can register only on Nov. 1, but may prepare their applications and affidavits at any time before that day.

DICKEY FAILS TO REGISTER

Kansas Cityan, Candidate for Senate, Told to Produce Naturalization Papers.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 14.—Walter S. Dickey, Republican candidate for United States Senator, was unable to register today because he didn't take his naturalization papers with him when he went to the polling place. He said he would return later with them. Later he sent with the papers a brother who said Dickey had gone to St. Louis. The election officials said Dickey would have to appear personally with the papers. Unless he returns from St. Louis in time to register Tuesday he will not get to vote in the election.

When Dickey said he was born in Canada, he was requested to produce papers that showed he had become a citizen of this country. "I have never had to show them," he said. He was told that he would have to show them this time.

RESISTANCE OF RUMANIANS ON BORDER STIFFENS

Bucharest Reports Recapture of Some Points in Transylvanian Mountains and Repulse of Von Falkenhayn's Attack.

King Ferdinand to Take Command of Armies—Russian Reinforcements Said to Be on Way.

French Advance on Mile and a Quarter Front South of Somme, Take Hamlet and 800 Prisoners.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Standing on their own frontier the Rumanian troops, who recently invaded Transylvania from the south and east, are fighting desperately to prevent the forces of the central Powers from entering Rumania. Russian reinforcements are being rushed to the aid of the Rumanians, a wireless report from Bucharest says, and it is announced that King Ferdinand will take the field at the head of his troops.

In Eastern Transylvania and on the southern border, the Austro-German forces continue to make progress against the invaders. East of Csik Szereda the advance has not yet halted and west of the Vulcan pass Rumanian attacks have been checked. Berlin reports some fighting on the frontier northeast of Kronstadt. The Rumanians have recaptured the village of Dolijan-Serata, 12 miles southeast of Orna, from the Austro-Germans. Bucharest also reports the capture of Mont Siguiello and the frontier town of Muncelumare, near Petroseny, with severe losses to the Teutonic forces.

Bucharest also announces that there was a cannonade and an exchange of infantry fire all along the Danube and at several places the Rumanians sank vessels with Bulgarian troops on board which were approaching the Rumanian bank.

The wireless dispatch from Bucharest also announces that a commission of French officers is on the way to the Rumanian capital to aid the hard-pressed Generals of King Ferdinand. More than 15,000 prisoners Bucharest says have been taken by the Rumanians on the various fronts.

FRENCH CAPTURE TOWN SOUTH OF SOMME RIVER

800 Men Taken Prisoners in Offensive on Mile and Quarter East of Belloy-En-Santerre.

PARIS, Oct. 14.—In fighting south of the Somme River in France today, the French captured a first German line on a mile and a quarter front east of Belloy-En-Santerre and also the hamlet of Genermont and the sugar refinery near Ablaincourt, according to the official communication issued tonight. Eight hundred men were made prisoner.

FRENCH EXPECTED TO BEGIN DRIVE ON VERDUN FRONT

Correspondent Says Gen. Nivelle's Batteries Have Attained Supremacy Over Germans.

By LINCOLN EYRE.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE FRENCH ARMY, NEAR VERDUN, Oct. 12.—An impression of great events to come remains with me after my fourth visit to the Verdun sector. Gen. Nivelle's batteries are said to have attained complete supremacy over those of his adversary. The proportion of the French fire to the German is now 10 to 1, as it has been on the Somme for many weeks.

We inspected a hospital, sprawled out over about 20 acres, and hitched up to both the standard and narrow-gauge railroads. All that it lacked was patients, of whom I counted no more than a dozen, although 20,000 can be comfortably housed there. I asked the surgeon in chief what was the reason for so huge an establishment.

"Well, things may begin to happen here any day, you know," he said.

Berlin Tells of Minor Successes on the Somme.

BERLIN (By wireless to Sayville), Oct. 14.—The official statement regarding operations on the Western front says:

"The Somme battle continues. A repetition of the hostile attacks north of the Somme on a large front as on October 12, failed before our curtain of fire. Between the Ancre and Morvale only one strong partial attack near Gueudecourt developed completely, but it was defeated.

"Southwest of St. Pierre Vaast wood, the advantages which were gained by the French in former attacks were taken. Seven officers, 327 men and several machine guns were brought in.

"South of the Somme the fighting in Ablain court was revived with success for us. Portions of Saxon regiments by a bold raid regained the eastern part of Ambos wood, north of Chaulnes, capturing six officers and 400 men."

Submarine Destroyer Torpedoed in the Mediterranean.

BERLIN, via London, Oct. 14.—The small steamer Rigel, built as a submarine destroyer, was sunk in the Mediterranean on Oct. 2 by two torpedoes fired by a German submarine, it was officially announced here today.

ALLIES' SUMMER LOSSES 2,000,000, BERLIN ESTIMATES

Casualties Divided Equally Between Anglo-French on Somme and Russians in German Tabulation.

BERLIN, Oct. 14.—By wireless to Sayville.—British and French divisions with a total of more than 1,000,000 men have been virtually annihilated in the Somme battle, says the military critic of the Overseas News Agency.

According to figures given by the news agency, the Russian losses from June 1 to Oct. 2 were about 1,000,000 men.

The news agency's military critic writes:

"The heavy sacrifices made by the British and French for the recapture of each square yard on the Somme is proved by the fact that in three and one-half months about 90 fresh divisions were virtually annihilated, so that it was necessary to withdraw them forever. (Ninety divisions represents a total of considerably more than 1,000,000 men. There are about 12,000 men in a French division, and 19,000 in a British division.)

"These divisions disappeared completely from battle. Fifty-five divisions in consequence of their great losses were able to engage in combat only twice, 15 divisions three times and only one was able to engage in combat four times. Four divisions had suffered so severely after their second engagement that it was necessary to send them to quiet sectors, but on critical days they were again thrown in.

"A Russian official at Kiev, according to a Swiss paper, numbers the Russian casualties from June 1 to Oct. 2 at 76,000 officers and 922,500 of other ranks, or 1,000,000 in round figures."

"READY TO FIGHT FOR THINGS THAT ARE AMERICAN"

—PRESIDENT WILSON.

perhaps Pennsylvanians are more qualified to tell about than any other people in the United States. They are better qualified to testify as to the subtle and intricate means by which the purposes of the people are sometimes defeated by their Government because I know how true it is that the people of Pennsylvania have again and again attempted to demonstrate to the rest of the Union that they believed that we had come into a new age, that they believed that this new age required new elements of policy, that they desired men to lead them who would lead them to the light and not again drag them into the subterranean passages of private influence. And, therefore, I think it will be easier to expound this campaign to Pennsylvanians than to anybody else. There are a great many things that you will understand without my putting them into words.

"And the same thing is happening in New Jersey. Six years ago I had the distinguished pleasure of exhibiting the Government of New Jersey to the people of New Jersey in its true colors as it lived. I only wish I had time to exhibit it now that it has resurrected itself.

"I was privileged to lead the people of New Jersey in the direction in which they had long wanted to go, and in which these gentlemen had long pretended they were willing to lead them, but in a direction in which they had never been permitted to advance an inch. Doesn't that sound to you like a familiar story?

"And exactly the same thing that is happening in Pennsylvania, the same thing that they are attempting in New Jersey, is being attempted in the nation at large.

"I wonder if they suppose that anybody is deceived? You know that the elements that are now behind the candidates of the opposition party are exceedingly varied, but they are easy of analysis. The most interesting element is that which is most vocal. The representatives of that element are confidently telling us, though none of them is a candidate for office, what the party will do if it is given the power to do anything. But those who are nominated for office are carefully avoiding saying whether they will do what the vocal element promises. In other words, they are putting up as their spokesmen of policy those whom they do not even pretend to trust with power.

Contest for Machinery.

"Therefore, those of us who are inducted into the secrets of the craft know that the talk is vain, and that the real counsels of the party are in that other element which is in absolute control of the organization of the party in Congress and out of it and whose control has never for a moment been disturbed, never been shaken.

"The contest at Chicago four years ago and the contest at Chicago this year were for the control of the machinery of the party. I do not mean on the part of the rank and file of the Progressives. For, my fellow citizens, no more earnest and sincere body of men were ever assembled than assembled in those two Progressive conventions at Chicago. And no sincere and earnest men were ever more pitifully deceived and betrayed.

"For, after all, it turned out that the object was not to lead the nation, but to control the Republican party, and any sort of abject surrender was offered by those who spoke, though they spoke without authority for them, if they might be admitted to control that machinery. And now, after the smoke has cleared away, after the atmosphere has yielded to the influence of time, we see standing out before us that familiar old guard that has never for a moment been disturbed in its possession of power or turned aside in its exercise of the control which it has used. And what I want to call your attention to is that this is not merely a presidential campaign. There is something quite as important as the choice of a chief magistrate. I want you to remember that the real sources of action and the real machinery of obstruction are in Congress, not in the presidency.

"Do you suppose that anything could have been accomplished in the last three and a half years if there had not been a determined and willing majority in the Congress? I have not led these gentlemen; I have gone forward with them. I call your attention to the fact that there is nowhere recorded a single Wilson policy. Everything that I have asked that Congress to do was written in the pledges of the party itself. And the only power I have exercised is the power of co-operation, the power that all men exercise when, insisting upon the obvious duties of a great hour men take heart to do a great thing:

It is a very interesting circumstance, my fellow citizens, that the House of Representatives is less docile than the Senate of the United States. In the House of Representatives, it has again and again happened that the Republican minority has broken away from the control of its leaders and voted, sometimes by a majority of its members, sometimes almost unanimously, for the measures which have distinguished the action of the present Democratic Congress. They came from the people. They knew when these things were suggested in Congress that they would be held inexcusable if they did not sustain them.

Vote on American Rights.

"Only upon one conspicuous occasion did the contrary happen, when the Republican machine was able to compel a majority of its members in the House of Representatives to vote that American citizens had no right to travel on the high seas. If their leaders believe in the rights of American citizens why don't their followers? If their leaders are so stiff to see that Americans get their rights everywhere, why do these men vote that Americans shall get their rights nowhere.

One of the most regrettable incidents of American history is that there should have been found men in the Congress of the United States willing to vote in that sense.

"But it is another story in the Senate of the United States. There a serene confidence obtains in the private conferences of the Senate. I have never been admitted to their privacy, but I have seen their performance, and the most reactionary men in America have absolutely controlled the action of the minority in the United States Senate, except for a few examples of independence by distinguished individuals who did not care to be mastered and owned by anybody. But their number was so small as to be negligible.

"Much Simpler to Get Orders."

"It made the whole thing very much simpler, I admit, because you never had to speculate how the Republicans were going to vote in the United States Senate. You knew that beforehand by calculations established through a whole generation—men who could not see the light of a new age, who did not desire to see it, who wished the old methods to be resumed; not the methods of Abraham Lincoln, who listened to the voice of the people, but the methods of Mark Hanna, who listened to the voice of the interests. They have been uneasy and a little unshepherded ever since Mark Hanna and Senator Aldrich passed from the stage. It was so much easier to be told what to do. It was so much simpler to get orders.

"Now, these gentlemen are in obvious and undisputed control of the organization of the Republican party. It is they who are counselling their leaders to say as little as possible and to say it in as confused a way as possible, so that nobody may know how to calculate their orbit from day to day. The only thing that they are revealing is that they do not want anything said, and after the election is over, if they should win possession of the Government they do not mean to say anything. For obvious reasons, it is contrary to the Constitution of the United States to make a man testify against himself.

"So that it all comes down, my fellow citizens, to a very simple proposition. Are you going to leave your Government under the control of people who do know and who will tell you what they are going to do or are you going to put it in the hands of men who will not tell you what they are going to do and will serve their private interests? The choice is bigger than that; I understand from the leaders of the Republican party that nothing has been done right. They do not say that the thing that was done was always wrong, but the way in which it was done was always wrong. They do not venture to say, that is to say, the private counsel does not venture to say, that we wanted anything but peace, but they would have preferred some other way, not disclosed, of obtaining peace. The vocal part says 'We wanted war.' The silent part intimates that we wanted peace, but wanted another kind of peace. They never can get over that fundamental uneasiness, gentlemen, that America is in charge of somebody else than themselves.

Invisible Government.

"But America knows that the things that were done did obtain peace, and it does not know that the things that might have been done would have obtained peace, so that America knows that it is faced with this choice: Peace, the continuance of the development of business along the lines which it has now established and developed and the maintenance of well-known progressive lines of action on the one hand; or, on the other, a disturbance of policy all along the line—new conditions, new adjustments, undefined alterations of policy and back of it all, invisible government.

"Several gentlemen who are supposed to be spokesmen of the Republican party have in public professed to condemn invisible government, but in private they have counseled and aided and abetted it. The best way to divert suspicion is to condemn the thing that you are doing yourself. And just because the people of the great State of New York saw through that thin mask they defeated a tolerably good new Constitution by a majority that had never before been heard of in that State. (If you want to know how New York is going this time look up the records of what it did to the Constitution). And it did it to the Constitution not upon a careful examination of what the Constitution contained, but upon the universal repute of those who had proposed the Constitution. Even if they had not been able to discover the dangerous things in it, they would have known that it was full of dangerous things.

"That is the temper of the people of the United States not to exchange a handsome certainty for an unhandsome uncertainty. See how big the time is with possibility. At this present moment—I want to repeat this, because perhaps the country has not realized it enough—at this present moment it is almost impossible to do anything positive in the field of foreign affairs, because foreign nations have been led to suppose that there may be a change in our foreign affairs. Foreign nations have been led to believe that a dominant element in the Republican party is in favor of drawing the United States into the European war, and they have been told with abundant evidence that it is probable that if the Republicans succeed, we shall enter upon a policy of exploitation of our neighbors in Mexico. That is the whole moral of every criticism that I read, and until the people of the United States have spoken it is extremely difficult to come to any definite conclusion about anything that touches our relations either to Europe or to Mexico. I myself do not doubt the result, but there are some who affect to doubt it.

"I want you to realize the part that the United States must play. It has been said, my fellow-citizens, been said with cruel emphasis in some quarters, that the people of the United States do not want to fight about anything. That is profoundly false. But the people of the United States want to be sure what they are fighting about, and they want to be sure that they are fighting for the things that will bring to the world justice and peace.

What America Will Fight For.

"Define the elements; let us know that we are not fighting for the prevalence of this nation over that; for the ambitions of this group of nations as compared with the ambitions of that group of nations; let us once be convinced that we are called into a great combination to fight for the rights of mankind and America will unite her force and spill her blood for the great things which she has always believed in and followed.

"America is always ready to fight for things that are American. She does not permit herself to be embroiled, but she does know what it would be to be challenged. And when once she is challenged, there is not a man in the United States, I venture to say, so mean, so forgetful of the great heritage of this nation, that he would not give everything he possessed, including life itself, to stand by the honor of this nation. What Europe is beginning to realize is that we are saving ourselves for something greater that is to come. We are saving ourselves in order that we may unite in that final league of nations in which it shall be understood that there is no neutrality where any nation is doing wrong, in that final league of nations which must, in the providence of God, come into the world where nations shall be leagued together with nations in order to show all mankind that no man may lead any nation into acts of aggression without having all the other nations of the world leagued against it."

Bishop Brent Praises American Policy in the Philippines.

The Right Reverend Charles Henry Brent, Bishop of the Philippine Islands, speaking at a luncheon at noon yesterday at the City Club, praised the policy of the United States in the Philippine Islands. Bishop Brent, who is a descendant of Stephen Langdon, Archbishop of Canterbury in England at the time of the signing of the Magna Charta, declared that if the United States had failed to take under her protection this weaker people, Germany, today, would have abrogated to herself the task.

A reception in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of his consecration as Bishop will be tendered the Rt. Rev. Daniel Sylvester Tuttle, Bishop of the Eastern Diocese of Missouri and presiding Bishop of the Triennial Episcopal Convention, in Moolah Temple tomorrow night, from 8 to 10 o'clock.

The reception will be nonsectarian, all creeds being invited, according to Joseph R. Barroll, chairman of the Arrangements Committee, who had invitations sent to Archbishop John J. The Women's Auxiliary of the Episcopal Church also will have a large representation present.

VENIZELOS DOES NOT EXPECT KING TO JOIN ALLIES

Head of Provisional Greek Government Says No Overtures Will Be Made.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Former Premier Venizelos of Greece, who is at the head of the provisional Government set up in opposition to the policy of King Constantine in regard to the war, is quoted by Reuter's Saloniki correspondent to the effect that no overtures have been made to the King beyond an appeal to him to abandon the path in which he has persisted.

"Nor does the provisional Government contemplate any further steps in that direction," the former Premier added. "I have no hopes that the King will change his conduct of affairs.

"His Majesty had a splendid opportunity to repudiate his engagements with Germany when the Germans allowed the Bulgarians to violate their solemn undertaking that they would not enter Seres, Kavala or Drama, but that opportunity was allowed to escape, because, forsooth, Constantine was convinced German legions eventually would come to his assistance and rescue him from the hands of the entente Powers."

Venizelos is quoted as saying further that he counts on the sympathy and support of liberal countries, especially England and France, in the struggle between constitutional liberties and a return to a feudal system, "which is what the present issue in Greece amounts to."

Athens Explains Munition Shipments to Thessaly.

ATHENS, Friday, Oct. 13.—Greek army officers say that the shipment of war munitions to Thessaly, the stoppage of which was demanded in the note presented to the Greek Government yesterday by Admiral du Fournet, commander of the Anglo-French fleet, was merely for the purpose of supplying the soldiers of the Fourth Army Corps who were not taken to Germany at the time of the Bulgarian occupation of Kavala. The equipment of these soldiers, who were taken to Larissa, fell into the hands of the Bulgarians.

WILSON GAINING IN STRAW VOTE OF NEW YORK HERALD

Figures Show That the President Is Developing Great Strength in Illinois.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—The New York Herald's straw vote canvass printed this morning up-to-date shows that the President is gaining slightly.

In the total of 107,403 votes taken to date Charles E. Hughes has a plurality over the President of 4926.

The changes during the last week were less marked than during the previous week. From all that can be gleaned at this time the Republicans are at a standstill and President Wilson is going ahead slowly. Nowhere is there a suggestion of a landslide or anything approaching it. The States of New York, Illinois, Ohio and Indiana will beyond all question decide the election, says the Herald. Any one of them may.

The straw votes and the inquiries made by correspondents indicate that Hughes has the better of the situation in New York, Illinois and Indiana, and it is a "toss-up" in Ohio. All the States mentioned are in doubt. Illinois, which was presumed by the Republicans to be overwhelmingly Republican, and conceded by the Democrats to be very likely to go strongly for Hughes and Fairbanks, has begun to waver.

The women, so far as the straw vote discloses, favor the President because of his peace program. The male element of the electorate is in a large majority for the Republican ticket, but the attitude of the women voters, of whom there are a half million, inject a distinct note of uncertainty in the situation there.

New York perhaps enjoys the spotlight more than any other State. Conditions there remain about the same as last week. The President, from present straw vote indications, will have a small plurality—small by comparison—in New York City, and Mr. Hughes will have a small—also by comparison—plurality up-State. Calculations made from the 18,058 straw votes taken throughout the State indicate that Hughes will have 45 electoral votes of this perhaps vital commonwealth, says the Herald.

LAMM AND DICKEY TO OPEN ST. LOUIS CAMPAIGN TOMORROW

Will Address Meeting at Odeon in Evening—Reception and Luncheon for Candidates Today.

Henry Lamm, Republican nominee for Governor, and Walter S. Dickey, nominee for United States Senator, will open their St. Louis campaign at the Odeon tomorrow night. Charles Nagel, former Secretary of Commerce and Labor, will speak at the same meeting.

Lamm will be met by a committee when he arrives at Union Station at 11:30 tomorrow morning and will be taken to the Planters Hotel, where a reception will be held. He will be the guest of honor at a luncheon at the Mercantile Club at 12:30, at which former Judge Henry S. Caulfield will preside.

At 4 o'clock he will speak in the Washington University gymnasium, this assignment having been made on the written request of officers of the Hughes-Lamm club of the university. One of the signers of this request was Prof. Roland G. Usher, faculty adviser of the club.

HUGHES DENIES VOTE FOR HIM IS A VOTE FOR WAR

about it; they have not told us exactly what they stand for. If they do not stand for a tariff for revenue only, they do not stand for anything at all, so far as I know, in connection with the tariff. If they are not for that principle, so far as the tariff is concerned, they are without principle, because they certainly have not declared their faith in any other principle.

Favors Tariff Commission.

"They have, however, told us that they will give us a tariff commission. I sincerely believe that we should have every possible aid to an understanding of the facts affecting these serious problems. I do not believe in going blind. I have not come to this place of candidacy, leaving the career of which I spoke, for the purpose of parceling out special privileges at the expense of the public welfare to any class or to any group.

"I want to see this very difficult and important matter attended to with the utmost care and fairness. It can be done if we get the facts that apply to each situation, and I believe in a tariff commission; but it is perfectly idle for anybody to talk to the American public as if a tariff commission were a solution of tariff difficulties. Tariff commissions don't legislate."

Blows at Agriculture.

Two "menacing blows" had been delivered, the nominee said, at the agricultural interests of the nation. One, he said, was the passage of the Underwood bill; the other was the passage of the Adamson bill. The nominee declared that the administration's "surrender to force" constituted "government by holdup."

"And I denounce that as un-American," he continued. The crowd cheered him.

"I like to think of the development of our Agricultural Department, and I do not withhold any credit for the continuity of that development," he said. "If I have the honor to be invested with executive responsibility there is no department of our Government which I shall desire to see more carefully and persistently extended for the advantage of the agricultural interests of our country.

"But we want something more than departments. We want something more than mechanical aid. I think that this administration delivered a menacing blow at the agricultural interests of the country in the passage of the Underwood bill. Most of our agricultural products were put on the free list, or given a rate of duty that was extremely low. That policy has not been changed.

"The administration has delivered a menacing blow to our agricultural interests in the recent action taken in the passage of the Adamson bill. The bill is a menacing blow at the farmers, because the burden rests peculiarly upon all in the community who were not represented in the small group which are to receive the advantages of this hasty measure."

Mr. Hughes spoke for the election of a Republican Senate.

"I do not wish to see simply the success of the Republican ticket," Mr. Hughes said. "I want to see a Republican Senate and the election of a Republican Senator from this State."

Mr. Hughes will remain in Lincoln over Sunday.

"Made in St. Louis"

Why we got aboard the "Redden-Truck-Maker"

"TRUCK-MAKER" attachments for converting pleasure cars into trucks have been the sensation of the year in the power truck field. The business has grown from nothing to twenty million dollars a year.

We kept off at first. It seemed too good to be true that one could make a reliable ton truck out of a Ford.

Before we were willing to tell our customers to invest, we wanted to be shown. We wanted to see if "Truck-Makers" would stand up and do the work; if the Ford end of it was structurally sound, if there was back of the "Truck-Maker" ample capital, adequate manufacturing facilities and a sound engineering staff.

We are convinced.

We have seen hundreds of "Redden-Truck-Makers" working. We have talked to the owners and found them enthusiastic. We have examined cost sheets and checked up the astonishing savings over horse hauling. We have seen a "Redden-Truck-Maker" doing the same work day after day as a heavy truck at half the cost.

We have examined the "Redden-Truck-Maker" and found it to be as sturdy as any ton truck we ever saw—a powerful truck axle and truck frame which fits over the Ford frame and takes up all the strain; big sturdy truck wheels with solid rubber tires, truck springs that will stand up under a 50% overload, and an all-around soundness of design and construction.

We know merchants who have doubled their number of customers, and reduced their delivery costs with a "Redden-Truck-Maker."

Then we investigated the Redden Motor Truck Co. We found that it was a half-million-dollar corporation with a fine plant and a staff of able engineers. We found that it controlled the Cook Patent which covers absolutely the principle of converting pleasure cars into trucks.

We learned beyond all question that the imitators of the "Redden-Truck-Maker" are infringing the Cook Patent, and will be prosecuted for infringement.

We believe this is the greatest truck proposition this country has produced, and that it will greatly increase the volume of our business and add to our list of satisfied customers. We know that as soon as Grocers, Butchers, Department Stores—all retailers, Laundries, Manufacturers, Wholesalers—realize what a tremendous saving they can effect with a "Redden-Truck-Maker" they are going to come to us and buy.

We know that as soon as the "Redden-Truck-Maker" comes into general use, it is going to save money on everything that people eat, wear, or use. It is going to cut down the cost of living.

The "Redden-Truck-Maker" costs $350. A new Ford chassis costs $325. That gives you a brand-new "Redden-Ford" one-ton truck chassis for $675 which will do the work of a truck costing double the price. It can be maintained at one-half the cost of the ordinary ton truck. You can have any type body your business needs.

If you already own a Ford, you simply remove the body and bolt on the "Redden-Truck-Maker." Any garage can make the change in a few hours or you can do it yourself.

One thing more—don't buy until you have investigated as thoroughly as we did. Remember the Redden Truck is licensed under the Cook Patent—that means not only protection but is also a guarantee of quality. There are several infringers of the Cook Patent and to buy such a truck is to invite trouble, and a possible lawsuit.

The "Redden-Truck-Maker" is the soluton of your hauling and delivery problems because it will cut your costs in half.

Call in and see how easy it is for you to convert any Ford into a guaranteed One-Ton Truck in just a few hours' time.

"REDDEN-TRUCK-MAKER" $350 F.O.B. Detroit

FIREMEN DENY HENDERSON WAS ABUSIVE AT FIRE

Man Near Chief at College Says He Slipped and Fell, Not Pushed.

SAYS NO ONE WAS STRUCK

Witnesses Give Various Descriptions of What Chief Wore on Day of Fire.

Firemen who testified at yesterday's session of the Christian Brothers' College fire inquest gave various descriptions of the costume worn at the fire by Chief Henderson, but all agreed that Henderson did not strike or otherwise abuse his men and that he did not order them to go into dangerous positions. A number of previous witnesses had testified about the actions of a fire department official and had variously described his apparel.

Edward Rebore of Engine Company 29 testified that a report that Henderson had pushed a fireman to the ground might have originated from the fact that while he was working on the east side of the building Chief Henderson went to him and put his hand on his shoulder and ordered him to get a short ladder.

Slipped in His Haste.

Rebore said that in his haste to comply with this command he slipped and fell. The Chief's order, he said, was given in a kindly manner and his fall was not due to the fact that the Chief's hand was on his shoulder. Both Henderson and Assistant Chief Christie warned the men not to go into danger, Rebore said. He quoted Christie as saying to him and other firemen: "Boys, don't be ashamed to run if you hear anything." By this he said Christie meant they were to get out of danger if they heard indications of a collapse.

Capt. William Juelich of Engine Company 29 testified that a short time before the wall fell, killing six firemen, he was working on the fourth floor balcony of the rotunda and four men of Truck Company 19 also were there. Five of the six men killed belonged to this company.

Juelich said the men of Truck Company 19 left the balcony about 10 minutes before the collapse and one of them told him they had been ordered into the basement by Capt. Michael Waters, who later lost his life.

Capt. Martin Tierney of Engine Company 17 testified that when he arrived at the fire at 9:30 a. m. he saw the Chief in a blue uniform coat and fedora hat.

Andrew Burke, chauffeur for Assistant Chief Christie, said he and Christie arrived about 7:30 a. m., on the second alarm. Christie wore a white rubber coat and white helmet.

A short time before the wall fell, he said, he and Christie went through the basement and saw seven or eight firemen working there. He was not asked if Christie ordered these men out.

Wore White Coat, One Says.

Lieut. Frank Werminghaus of Truck Co. 17 testified he arrived at the fire at 7:25 a. m., and a little later saw Henderson at the northeast corner of the building wearing a white coat and white helmet. He said that after Louis Nolan, a nurse, jumped from a fifth story window and knocked Fireman George Morris off a ladder, he saw a woman in the crowd point to Chief Henderson and say, "That big brute struck that fireman and knocked him down."

Morris was lying on the ground and Henderson was leaning over him.

Werminghaus said he explained to the woman that Morris had been knocked from the ladder and had not been struck by the Chief. Later he said he told the Chief a woman had accused him of striking Morris and Chief Henderson replied: "Hell, no. He was struck by that man who jumped from the window."

Capt. George W. Broomfield, of Engine Co. 32, described Henderson as wearing a white coat and white helmet. He said he heard no abusive language.

Lieut. William McGuire of Engine Company 48 testified that he was working in a stairway at the north side of the building when he looked from a window and saw Chief Henderson in his shirtsleeves. Asked if he was sure of this he said:

"Well, he was all white above the waist line, but not below it. It seemed to me he had on no coat."

KAISER TELLS TROOPS IN EAST RUSSIANS "MUST BE BEATEN"

"Many of Enemy Know Not Why They Fight," Emperor Declares in Speech to Men.

BERLIN, via London, Oct. 14.—During his visit to the eastern front last week Emperor William told the troops of Gen. von Eben that their two slogans should be, "He shall not get through" and "He must be beaten." Following is the Emperor's speech:

"Not far from your ranks the battle is raging, and we hear a cannon shot now and then. I had the privilege of receiving deputations from the troops, who, in hard fighting against great odds, won glory and did a great service to the Fatherland. It is for me a duty and an honor to express the most profound and most cordial thanks on behalf of the Fatherland that you, along with your Austro-Hungarian comrades in arms, have held your ground so bravely.

"When you again move against the enemy, take with you these two slogans: First, 'He shall not get through,' and, second, 'He must be beaten.' We are fighting for a just cause. Every one of you knows why you are risking your life, but many of the enemy know not why they fight. Numbers do not impress you, and I am convinced that you will show yourselves just as plucky in the future as in the past.

"Let the enemy crush his head against a wall of iron. God help you in this great work."

POLICE GUARD HUGHES WOMEN FROM "DEMOCRATIC DEVILTRY"

Oregon Woman Threatened to "Boo-Hoo" Under Windows of the Special Car.

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 14.—Policemen surrounded the Hughes women's campaign special when it drew into Portland today, because some Democratic women had vowed to come and "boo-hoo" under the car windows. Opposite the station a banner asked "Who was the goose that laid the golden egg of the campaign special? Was it Mrs. Belmont or Mrs. Smelter Trust Guggenheim?"

The climax of "Democratic deviltry" came later, when Miss Elizabeth Freeman was scheduled to hold a street corner meeting. Dr. Marie Equi, a labor leader witih a large I. W. W. following, mounted a table on the opposite corner and started an opposition meeting. The street became filled with a jostling crowd. Democratic women in automobiles flaunting large yellow Wilson banners forced their cars through the crowd, tossing out campaign literature.

Miss Freeman finally succeeded in addressing the part of the crowd near her car. Other meetings were held in factories, clubs and the Y. W. C. A. Tonight the Democratic women held a counter rally.

MRS. ANTOINETTE FUNK TALKS FOR WILSON IN EAST ST. LOUIS

Former Progressive Says She Found All of Hughes' Speeches Colorless.

Mrs. Antoinette Funk, a Chicago lawyer and a former member of the Progressive party, in a speech before 800 persons at the Democratic headquarters in East St. Louis last night told why her support in the coming presidential election would be for Wilson.

"When the Progressive party was abandoned at Chicago," said Mrs. Funk, "I expected to return to the Republican party. I heard Hughes' first speech. It was colorless. The more I heard of his speeches the more colorless they became. Finally I decided that Mr. Hughes is about seven or eight years behind the times. For the first time in history the Republican party is without an issue.

"I think," she said, "Mr. Hughes is a man of good morals, but with a corporation squint, which he cannot help. He was born that way."

BLEWETT SPEAKS IN CHICAGO

Tells How St. Louis Has Kept School System Out of Politics.

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—How St. Louis has managed to keep her school system out of politics and develop it until it has become known as the most efficient of all the large cities of the country was told today to the committee of schools of the City Council by Ben Blewett, superintendent of instruction in St. Louis. He gave the first of a series of addresses by nationally prominent educators who have been invited to Chicago by the committee to give advice as to how Chicago can improve its school methods and administration. He said teachers in St. Louis may belong to any organization.

"Nineteen years ago St. Louis faced a keen situation, with regard to its schools," said Blewett, "and was forced to radical action. As a result, a charter was secured which vests complete control and responsibility for the schools in the Board of Education.

BARRY ARRIVES IN DETROIT

Peace Delegate Returns From Europe to Confer With Ford.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 14.—John D. Barry of San Francisco, author and journalist and a member of the neutral conference which was the outgrowth of the Ford peace expedition, has arrived in Detroit from Berlin, and will confer with Henry Ford next week. Barry went to Germany from Stockholm to study conditions.

"Germany is ready for peace," said Barry, "but wishes to dictate terms. As yet there is no sign of starvation, but the people of Germany are weary, though never critical. All they say is, 'It has gone on long enough.'"

PLAN TO LEASE FREE BRIDGE AND CUT FREIGHT RATES

Consulting Engineer Submits Scheme to Reduce the "Arbitrary" 5 Cents a Ton.

On the assumption that a special charge for transporting freight across the river is unavoidable, C. E. Smith, consulting engineer for the Department of Public Utilities, proposes the leasing of the free bridge to railroads at such a low rental that they can afford to make a lower rate than the Terminal Association's "arbitrary" of 20 cents a ton. This recommendation appears in a special report that Smith submitted yesterday to Director of Public Utilities Hooke, and which will go to the Board of Public Service next Tuesday.

By fixing the rental of the bridge to one or more railroads on the basis of wheelage, Smith suggests, the charge for delivering on switches in any part of St. Louis could be lowered to 15 cents a ton, as against 20 cents a ton on commodities and to and from points to which the Terminal Association's "arbitrary" is now applicable.

City Must Invest.

Unless the city makes another large investment to provide connections between the free bridge and railroads on both sides of the river, Smith says, the present "arbitrary" can neither be eliminated nor reduced.

The additional facilities which Smith recommends as a means of increasing the utility of the free bridge are an approach to the south to connect with the St. Louis Transfer Railway for the acquisition of which from the Terminal Association the city is now negotiating and with the Manufacturers' (Busch) Railway and the Iron Mountain, and tracks from the west approach along Gratiot street to Twenty-third street, so as to provide for tapping the Missouri Pacific, Frisco, Wabash and Rock Island railroads. With the St. Louis Transfer Railway as a beginning, Smith says, a municipal belt line can be built to the extreme northern part of the city and connect with the M., K. & T., the Burlington and the McKinley system with the free bridge.

The cost of the south approach is estimated by Smith at $800,000. Connections on both sides of the river, and an interlocking system, would require an expenditure of $300,000 more, he says. He gives no figures as to the cost of the west extension to Twenty-third street, but this has been placed at from $1,000,000 to $5,000,000, depending on the area of property that would have to be acquired for rights of way for connections running from Gratiot street to the Missouri Pacific, Frisco and Wabash.

Would Charge $1 a Car.

The charges against the bridge, calculating only interest on the investment of $7,800,000 that would be invested, and maintenance, would be about $365,000 a year. Smith says it would be difficult or impossible to induce any one railroad to pay a rental equal to these annual charges, but that the city could afford to permit the first road applying for the privilege the use of the bridge on the basis of $1 a car, which would figure 2 cents a ton on a load of 50 tons.

On this basis, Smith says, a railroad could afford to haul a 50-ton car from the East Side to St. Louis and, after absorbing the switching charge of 10 cents a ton collected by the line on whose switch it was delivered, make a rate of 15 cents a ton for the whole service, leaving 3 cents a ton for operating expensees and profits, and yet save the shipper or consignee 5 cents a ton compared with the Terminal "arbitrary.

The plan he proposes, Smith says, would leave the city independent of the Terminal Association by giving independent roads direct connection with every line entering St. Louis without the use of a single foot of Terminal trackage.

U. S. TROOPS IN MEXICO ARE SENT TO PROTECT MORMONS

FIELD HEADQUARTERS, AMERICAN EXPEDITION in Mexico, Oct. 14.—A squadron of cavalry has been sent from the field headquarters of the American expedition to Colonia, Juarez, 18 miles from this camp, to protect several hundred American Mormon colonists there, following the robbery last Thursday night of Alonzo and Adelbert Taylor, Mormon merchants, by four Mexicans.

Threatening death, the robbers demanded $10,000 of the Taylors and held one brother prisoner while two of their number took the other to the Taylor store and got several hundred dollars. While the two Mexicans were attempting to secure more money from another wealthy resident of Juarez, the prisoner escaped. Learning of this, the robbers took to the hills to avoid capture.

STRIKERS ARRESTED AT BAYONNE OVER HANDBILLS

Police Will Charge Distributors With Inciting to Riot—600 More Men Walkout.

BAYONNE, N. J., Oct. 14.—Sixty policemen in automobiles this afternoon entered the industrial strike zone and began arresting men found in possession of handbills which Standard Oil strikers and sympathizers have been distributing. The authorities said every man arrested would be charged with inciting to riot.

The handbills, printed in three languages, urged the men who are idle not to congregate and to adopt a peaceful attitude and announced that "4000 Standard Oil workers" at Elizabeth, N. J., had struck. It was this last statement which, according to the authorities, tended to inflame the local strikers.

Six hundred men walked out at the Bayway plant of the Standard Oil Co. today in sympathy with the Bayonne strikers. The shops then closed down, throwing 1200 more men out of employment. There was no disorder.

BRITAIN'S REPLY ON BLACKLIST SAYS IT MUST BE MAINTAINED

Note Coming by Mail Declares Measure Is Purely Internal and Is Absolutely Necessary.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—Officials of the State Department know that the British Government's reply to the American note against extension of the blacklist to the United States, now on the way to Washington by mail, does not accept the American contentions and holds that the blacklist is a purely internal measure and must be maintained as an absolute necessary military measure, though every effort will be made to avoid injury to neutrals.

MRS. SANGER TELLS OF SECRET CLINICS FOR BIRTH CONTROL

Says That in Short Time They Will Be Operated in the Open.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—"Judge Wadhams is the first Judge in America with the courage to view birth control through human and not legal eyes," said Mrs. Margaret Sanger, leader of the birth-control propaganda.

Mrs. Sanger had just read the accounts of Judge Wadhams' refusal to sentence Mrs. Rebecca Schnur, wife of a tuberculosis sufferer, who is forbidden by the New York Health Department to work at his trade. Mrs. Schnur pleaded guilty to stealing money and a watch to buy food for her six children. In suspending sentence Judge Wadhams called attention to the lack of family regulative laws.

Mrs. Sanger told a Post-Dispatch reporter of the work being done in birth-control clinics in Brownsville and Manhattan in disregard of statutes prohibiting the giving of contraceptive knowledge.

Mrs. Sanger's two unadvertised clinics have been in operation less than two weeks. Two hundred and fifty women have received advice in that time, Mrs. Sanger said.

"Before the end of the year I see no reason why our clinics will not be in open operation in every part of the city," she continued. "All of the women who call for advice have the same story, the keynote of which is this: 'I love my babies and I don't dare have any more. If more come we cannot care for any of them as we want to.'

"Our clinics have advised women of the working class from practically all over the country. In our clinics we pay absolutely no attention to the laws. We do not try to violate them; we ignore them. We treat each case that comes to us not legally but humanly."

COUPLE TRIED FOR MURDER OF WIFE'S FORMER ADMIRER

Nashville (Ark.) Man Gets Five Years —Jury Deliberating on Woman's Case.

NASHVILLE, Ark., Oct. 14.—A jury trying John Smith for the murder of C. S. Ledford found him guilty late tonight and sentenced him to five years in the penitentiary. Another jury is still deliberating in Mrs. Smith's case.

Mrs. Smith shot and killed Ledford, a barber, in his shop. Witnesses testified that when Mrs. Smith shot Ledford her husband rushed into the shop and commanded her to shoot the barber again while he lay on the floor. This she did, witnesses said.

Mrs. Smith testified she and Ledford had been intimate for several months. It was testified that Ledford's wife learned of the affair by finding one of Mrs. Smith's letters in Ledford's shoe. Mrs. Ledford showed Smith the letter About the same time Smith found letters Ledford had written his wife. The tragedy occurred a few days later.

MUNITION COMPANIES EXPECTED TO FIGHT NEW FEDERAL TAX

Stockholders in Hercules Company Will Lose From $30 to $35 a Share, Letter Says.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 14.—Delaware munition companies are expected to attack the validity of the Federal munition tax of 12½ per cent on net profits, and it will probably be on the grounds of class legislation. Officials of the Hercules Powder Co. are considering its validity, according to a circular letter sent to stockholders. Russell H. Dunham, president, estimates that because of the tax stockholders will be deprived of from $30 to $35 earnings on each share this year, while the Dupont Powder Co. today issued figures showing that its stockholders will lose at least $16 a share.

It is intimated that the company may abolish the war bonus paid to its 60,000 employes at the end of the year.

The burden of the tax on the Dupont company will fall on the small shareholders, and the reduction in earnings per share is based upon the company's estimate that its net profit for the year will be $76,000,000.

Miners Out Pending Agreement.

United Mine Workers' officials announced yesterday that the men would continue to work at least until Oct. 25, when a strike vote is to be taken by a special convention.

JIM COLE, SOCIAL CERBERUS FOR 50 YEARS, IS A HOST

Negro Doorman at Society Functions Celebrates Golden Anniversary in Work.

Jim Cole, 68 years old, negro doorman at society functions, and head usher of the Veiled Prophet ball since that event was established, celebrated last night, at his home, 3955 Finney avenue, the fiftieth anniversary of his entrance into the form of "social service" in which, for a half-century, he has held a unique position. Fifty negro men, most of them waiters, who are frequently employed at society affairs, were his guests.

Society, to be exclusive, must exclude. The official excluder of St. Louis society is Jim Cole. He knows who is who, and who is not. He knows those who are entitled to attend society functions, and he welcomes them with a courtly nod, and admits them without asking for their invitations. When persons appear who are not entitled to admission, Jim Cole turns them away, and he does it with the least possible friction or disturbance.

A Barber by Trade.

Cole is a barber, and is to be found every day at his chair in the barber shop of a downtown office building. But his earnings as a barber are supplemented, in the social season, by the fees received for his services as doorman at weddings, balls and receptions.

The first occasion on which he served at a society gathering, at a time which he figures as 50 years ago, was a function given by Henry R. Taylor Sr., Jim related last night. The Taylor home was on Morgan street. Jim, then 18 years old, was cloakman at this function, but he soon advanced to doorman, and the first big wedding where he remembers being on sentry duty was that of Charles H. Turner and Margaret Barlow, at the old Barlow home in Kennett place, Dec. 14, 1870. The latest event at which he served as doorman was the Erwin-Tinning wedding, last Wednesday evening, at the Walsh home in Westminster place.

Jim sees nowadays, at the functions where he is on duty, the grandsons and granddaughters, and even the descendants in the fourth generation, of those who were in society when he first knew it. He said, in commenting on the changes which have occurred, that he believes young girls have a better time now than they used to have. They enter society earlier and some of them are tired of it at an age when, in the society of earlier days, a girl would be just beginning.

As to the comparative tone of society in the different times which have come under his observation, Jim has no expression to make. "I see nothing, hear nothing and say nothing," he remarked. "That's why they all send for me."

Valet for Three Rich Men.

Jim was at different times in his earlier days valet for three wealthy St. Louis men, and traveled extensively with them. His last service of this kind was with Soulard Lamonte. A recent letter from Ambassador David R. Francis, written in reply to a note which Jim sent him when he left St. Louis for Russia, hangs in a frame on the wall of Jim's home. Jim said he had received checks from 12 men who had heard of his golden anniversary celebration.

Jim was married 35 years ago and has had four children, all of whom are married. Mrs. Cole went to a picture show last night, that the "stag" character of her husband's party might not be impaired. The affair was "dry," with a luncheon of sandwiches and pickles.

PRESIDENT AND ADAMSON LAW ATTACKED BY T. R.

He Says Wilson Should Have Settled Railroad Trouble Like He Did Coal Strike.

SPEAKS AT WILKES-BARRE

Declares Executive "Plays Second Fiddle" to Gompers in Mexican Affairs.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Oct. 14.—Col. Roosevelt attacked President Wilson and the Adamson law before a meeting of coal miners here tonight. He related how he settled the anthracite strike in 1902 and declared that by forcing arbitration in so doing he set a precedent which the President should have followed in dealing with the threatened railroad strike. He said in part:

"In the case of the settlement of the anthracite coal strike, the action I took was of precisely the kind which President Wilson now says the law should make obligatory in all similar cases in the future. There is another point of different and a vital point. The action I took was intended to meet the situation at once. The action that Mr. Wilson took has been deferred so that it shall not take place until considerably after election.

Mine Owners Refused to Arbitrate.

Fourteen years ago the great anthracite coal strike had occurred in this region. On the one side were the greatest and wealthiest mine owners of the country, intimately connected with the wealthiest and most powerful industrial and railroad corporations in the country. The financial strength of Wall street was behind them. These men absolutely refused to arbitrate. They said there was nothing to arbitrate, that I had no power under the Constitution to act, and that the public could not interfere, nor the representatives of the public, with the way in which they managed their business. The representatives of the mine workers, of labor, on the contrary, expressed their entire willingness to arbitrate. I made every effort to get the two sides to agree. When I failed, I decided that I would act myself. I held that where the public necessity was national and imperative it became the duty of the chief of the nation to act.

"I held, moreover, that in any case of such importance and such interest we must have full knowledge before final action on any of the points at issue was taken, and that this knowledge must be obtained by an unbiased body of arbitrators after a thorough study of the situation. I decided that I would use the entire power of the nation to see that there was an arbitration by dispassionate experts, and that the conclusions of that arbitration were accepted by both sides, and that until their decision was rendered the work of mining should go on in the interests of the people as a whole. When the mine owners positively refused to arbitrate I proceeded to appoint an arbitration commission without them, securing the consent of a political opponent, ex-President Grover Cleveland, to serve at the head of that commission. I saw the Lieutenant-General of the army and arranged with him that if necessary I would put the army in possession of the mines and would treat him as a receiver to run the mines, and to see that neither side interfered with the running. When it became evident that I meant what I said, that both sides could count on my endeavor to do strict justice, and that they could also count on my insisting that the public needs be immediately met, the capitalists yielded and the commission was appointed.

Arbitration Successful.

"The arbitration was successful. More important still, it set the precedent for the course that ought to be followed in all disputes of this nature hereafter. Mr. Wilson, on the contrary, has set a precedent which he himself admits must never hereafter be followed if justice is to be done. When 14 years ago I acted there was no precedent for me to follow. I had to establish the precedent to establish in order to meet a great crisis. I had to create my own instrument, the Arbitration Commission. Mr. Wilson had before him the precedent I had created, and he had as instruments ready to hand the Arbitration Board, and the Interstate Commerce Commission, with its enlarged powers. But he failed to follow the precedent, or to use the instruments which were ready to his hand. Mr. Wilson, with all the agencies of law subject to his command, ignored them, destroyed the principle of arbitration in the settlement of industrial disputes, and put a premium on securing this settlement by threat and duress."

There is grave reason to believe that in the course the President has followed he did violence to his own real convictions, the Colonel said, declaring that until Mr. Wilson became a candidate for office he was a "bitter, ungenerous and often unjust critic of labor unions."

Likens Wilson to Buchanan.

Col. Roosevelt said "Mr. Wilson betrayed the public" when he permitted the contest between the railroads and their employes to be "decided in deference to greed and fear," and continued:

"Mr. Wilson announced that it was 'futile' to stand firmly against these improper demands. It would not have been futile if a Democrat of the stamp of Andrew Jackson or Grover Cleveland had been President. The futility inhered solely in Mr. Wilson himself. * * * What President Wilson did was to permit the overriding of justice by appeals to brute force. President Wilson felt it was failure to oppose these men, exactly as President Buchanan, his spiritual forbear, felt in 1860, that it was futile to oppose secession. That type of futility gives the real measure of the man who practices it. What Buchanan considered futile Lincoln made heroic.

"I champion Mr. Hughes as against Mr. Wilson because in every such crisis Mr. Wilson, by his public acts, has shown that he will yield to fear, that he will not yield to justice; whereas the public acts of Mr. Hughes have proved him to be incapable of yielding in such a crisis to any threat, whether made by politicians, corporations or labor leaders.

Gompers' Support of President.

Roosevelt referred to the support of President Wilson by Samuel Gompers, head of the American Federation of Labor, because of the President's Mexican policy. He said:

"Mr. Gompers has recently established himself as the especial champion of Mr. Wilson and claims joint credit with Mr. Wilson for their joint conduct of our foreign affairs so far as Mexico is concerned. He asks labor to support Mr. Wilson specifically on the ground of Mr. Wilson's attitude in Mexico, which, he states, he has helped to secure. He says, for example, that he was largely instrumental in securing the recognition of Carranza in Mexico, because of Carranza's sympathy with the labor movement there. For the details of what I speak, I refer you to Senator Fall's recent speeches, where the exact quotations are given. Mr. Gompers states that when all other agencies failed in the effort to secure the recognition of Carranza by President Wilson, Gompers intervened on Sept. 22, 1915, and Mr. Wilson's recognition of Carranza immediately followed.

"Mr. Gompers continues by saying that Carranza was recognized as the friend of the working people in Mexico. On Sept. 2, 1916, Mr. Gompers appealed for the support of laboring men for Mr. Wilson on the ground of Mr. Wilson's policy as regards Mexico. He thus tied himself up with Messrs Wilson and Carranza as one of the triumvirate which exercises supreme control in Mexican matters. This makes it worth while for the workers to whom Mr. Gompers especially appeals to study what Carranza, the favored friend and ally of Messrs. Gompers and Wilson, has done to laboring men in Mexico—not to speak of what he has done to Americans in Mexico.

"Mr. Gompers states that when Carranza refused to surrender the American soldiers taken prisoners at Carrizal, in response to President Wilson's request, he, Mr. Gompers, telegraphed on June 28 last to Carranza, appealing to him upon the ground of "patriotism and love" for the release of the American soldiers; and that immediately Carranza responded on June 29 to Mr. Gompers, saying that he had ordered the release of the prisoners. The telegram closed with: "Salute, very affectionately, V. Carranza." Thereupon Samuel Gompers, in the name of the Federation of Labor, on June 30, thanked Gen. Carranza for releasing the American soldiers.

"I really question whether we have ever in our history known anything as extraordinary as the President of the United States playing second fiddle in such a manner to the head of a private organization when dealing with international matters."

Roosevelt read one of Carranza's decrees prescribing the death penalty for anyone who should promote a strike among the employes of an electric light company.

TRAINMEN'S PRESIDENT IS HECKLED AT CLEVELAND

City Club Members Get No Direct Reply to Questions Concerning the Adamson Law.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 14.—William G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, spoke before the City Club here today, and was heckled by members of the club with questions about the purpose and effect of the Adamson eight-hour law.

Replying to some of the questions, Lee said that the bill will increase the wages of railroad workers. "Call it what you wish," he answered when members asked whether it should not be called a wage increase measure, rather than an eight-hour law.

M. V. Emerman, a lawyer, made an insistent demand to know whether Lee considered the bill really an eight-hour measure at all. Lee replied that "in some instances it will also make for a shorter work day." Another lawyer asked whether the public had not been misled by the name of the law, and Lee replied: "It may be that the public has been misled, but it is almost impossible to correct such a misconception."

CHICAGO RESORTS PROTECTED, POLICE CAPTAIN TESTIFIES

Chief's Secretary Advised Him Not to Raid Places, W. J. O'Brien Says.

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—William J. O'Brien, Police Captain, suspended on charges of neglect of duty, testified today that he had been powerless to control vicious resorts in his districts because of interferences from higher officials. His testimony was given before Chief Justice Olson of the Municipal Court on State's Attorney Hoyne's application for warrants for the arrest, on charges of malfeasance and conspiracy, of Chief Healy and his secretary, William Luthardt.

State Senator George F. Harding and Oscar de Priest, negro Alderman of the Second Ward, were mentioned, as well as Healy and Luthardt, by the witness as exercising a restraining hand over the Police Captain, in whose district had recently sprung up several all-night cafes, in which whites and blacks met and danced and drank together.

O'Brien said he had refused to recommend licenses, but that they had been issued in spite of him, and that when he wanted to raid the places Luthardt had said: "No, you better not do that. We can do something else."

"If the names of the persons who participated in some of these dances between whites and blacks became known there would be considerable scandal," read a report to Capt O'Brien from the patrolman on the beat and seized in a raid by Hoyne on Healy's office. O'Brien gave this as a reason for seeking to close the places by police order, rather than raids.

Mayor Thompson has been summoned as a witness and is expected to appear Monday.

Tonight the city hall is under special guard to prevent further raids and seizures by Hoyne. "There will be no more raids without warrant of law," said Chief Healy. "I have ordered a policeman to patrol every corridor and will keep them there until the whole controversy is over."

Mayor Thompson would make no comment on the revelations by Capt. O'Brien other than his previous declaration that Hoyne's activities were inspired by political animus. The Mayor and other Republican officials have thrown their strength to the suport of Harry B. Miller Hoyne's Republican opponent for election to the office of State's Attorney.

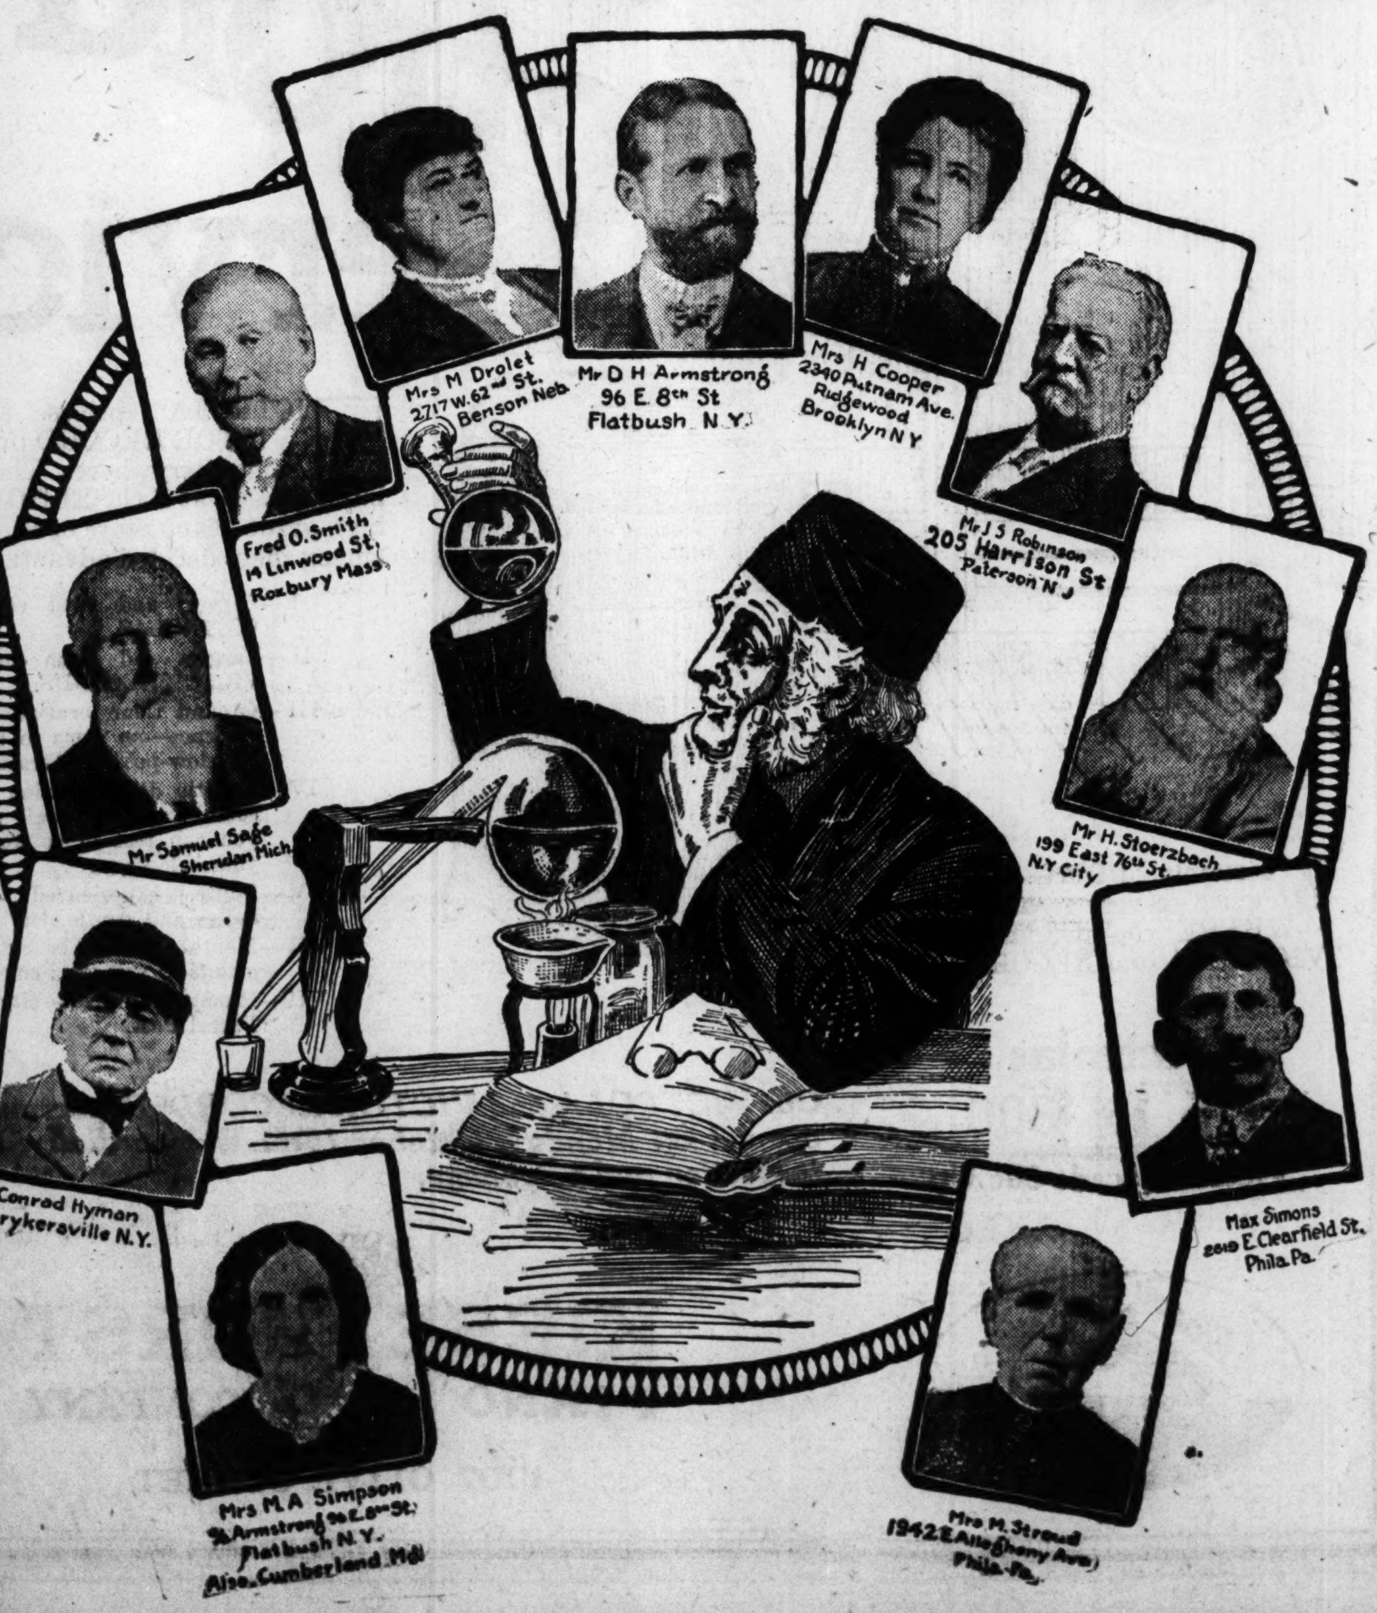
The "Old Chemist" and His Friends



If these good people should meet the "Old Chemist," face to face, what wonders they'd tell him about Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey!

More good words would be spoken of this time-tested remedy, perhaps, than have ever before been told in print. But surely nothing more truthful and sincere could be said of it than the remarkable restorations to health they have already told of over their own signatures, and all attested to by a notary public. Anyway, the "Old Chemist" would receive their grateful thanks for so carefully guarding the absolute purity of Duffy's for upwards of 50 years. Everybody knows that anything that will supply strength quickly will speed recovery from ill health.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

does this by gently stimulating the processes of digestion and assimilation, which in turn strengthen the blood forming organs, so that its recuperative effects are soon felt.

Ask yourself this: "Am I healthy?" Many call themselves healthy because they are not confined to their beds; but health knows no kinship with headache, debility, or any irregularities of the system. How many drugs have you taken without bestowing a single discernible benefaction? Then remember that Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has the virtues of a medicine without the disadvantages of a drug; that no claims are ever made for Duffy's that are not justified by the facts; and that Duffy's will really help to give you new health, new strength, new vitality, and new life.

"Get Duffy's and Keep Well"

You should have no hesitancy in doing like many others in every section of this country are doing, if you would enjoy the precious boon of good health. Duffy's was good enough for Granddad—it's good enough for you.

Sold by most druggists, grocers and dealers, $1.00. If they can't supply you, write us. Useful household booklet free.

ALLIES PROMISE TO REMEDY ABUSES IN HANDLING MAIL

Note Just Made Public Reiterates Entente's Right to Search Correspondence.

U. S. PRECEDENTS CITÉD

Dangerous Plots Said to Have Been Foiled by Information Gained From Letters.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—In their latest reply to American protests against interference with neutral mails, made public tonight by the State Department, the allied Governments reiterate their right to intercept and search all genuine mail found on neutral vessels on the high seas or in allied ports, but they promise to remedy "any faults, abuses or serious mistakes" in censorship that may be brought to their attention. They declare unjustified by facts the Americans charge that illegal jurisdiction has been gained by diversion of neutral ships from the high seas into the territorial waters of the allies. The next move of the American Government has not been determined.

It is maintained by the allies in their latest note that they are "sincerely endeavoring to avoid any encroachment of the legitimate exercise of the rights of inoffensive neutral commerce." Delays and annoyances are unavoidable, it is pointed out, in the exercise of full belligerent rights by the allied authorities and a long list of precedents are cited to support the validity of the allied censorship methods. It is suggested that The Hague convention quoted in the American memorandum is not binding because it has not been ratified by several belligerent Powers, though the allied policy has been guided by the intentions it expresses.

Convention Does Not Apply.

The note argues that the United States and the allies agree that the postal union convention does not apply and that postal packages may be examined to see if they contain contraband. That being so, the note contends it is necessary to open postal bags and examination cannot take place at sea without delay and inconvenience. Arrangements now have been made to carry on the examination with the least possible delay and to forward innocent articles to their destinations. Although the Hague convention of 1907 has not been accepted by some of the belligerents, the note says the allies are prepared to accept the principle in the preamble as to "guarantees due to peaceful commerce and legitimate business," but cannot abandon their right to prevent the fraudulent use by the enemy of neutral mails for belligerent purposes. The case of the Atlanta is cited to show information can be as useful a means of war as ammunition, and the note says information as to military operations and enemy plots in neutral countries, especially the United States, has been discovered in this way.

An examination of precedents is held to show that the great Powers have claimed the right to intercept enemy correspondence in neutral mails. The allied argument follows the line of President Lincoln's proclamation of May 12, 1862, which declared things and information as equally contraband of war, and cites the fact that intercepted enemy correspondence was used in the United States courts during the Civil War and laid before Congress. The contention of the United States, the note argues, that money order lists should be classed as genuine mail and not as merchandise, does not take into consideration that such lists sent from the United States to Germany and Austria by mail correspond to money deposited in this country and serve as a notification to postal authorities of the Teutonic powers to pay out the amounts indicated, increasing the financial resistance of the allies' enemies. In view of this, money order lists are refused passage.

In connection with the reminder that the United States already has agreed that examination of private postal correspondence to ascertain whether it contains contraband is permissible, the note says:

"It is evident that this examination, which necessarily entails the opening of the covers in order to ascertain their contents, could not be carried out on board without involving a great deal of confusion, without causing serious delay to the mails, passengers and cargo, and without great risk of error, loss or non-delivery. It was for the reasons that the allies have initiated the removal of the mail bags and their dispatch to points provided with the staff and material requisite for prompt and regular mailing.

In all this the allied Governments have no other purpose but that of diminishing by all means in their power the inconvenience that the legitimate exercise of their belligerent rights in regard to enemy mail might cause to inoffensive neutral correspondence and to neutral vessels."

After asserting that the United States and the allies are in agreement on principles, but differ as to their application, the note, in reply to Secretary Lansing's declaration that the allies "compel neutral ships without just cause to enter their own ports, thus acquiring by force or unjustifiable means an illegal jurisdiction," says:

"The allied Governments have never differentiated between their treatment of mails on board a neutral vessel on the high seas and those on board a neutral vessel compulsorily diverted to an allied port. They have always recognized that visit carried out in a port to which a vessel has been compulsorily diverted must in this respect be assimilated to visit on the high seas, and the criticism put forward by the United States Government does not, therefore, appear to them to be justified."

Defending the practice of exercising jurisdiction and the right of search over a merchant vessel calling of its own accord at an allied port, the note says:

"When a neutral merchant vessel enters an allied port it is legitimate for the authorities of the allied Governments, before giving her clearance, to satisfy themselves that the vessel is carrying nothing hostile to the interests of their national defense. It must be added that the German custom of abusing neutral mails and of forwarding enemy correspondence, even official correspondence bearing upon hostilities under apparently inoffensive covers, sent from one neutral to another, has rendered necessary the supervision of mails in transit to or from countries adjacent to Germany, exactly as in the case of mails in transit to or from Germany itself. But it need hardly be said that in the case of correspondence between neutrals, which it not used as a cloak for such abuses, there are no grounds for apprehension."

"Dangerous Plots Foiled.

Contending that the practice followed by the Powers in former wars establishes the general rule of the right to examine mails outside of territorial waters, the note amplifies that argument in the following terms:

"On the high seas, according to international law, it is for the belligerents to search for and to prevent operations of transport or other services by which neutral vessels can give co-operation and assistance to the hostile operations of the enemy. A few lines of a letter conveyed to the enemy may be as usful or more useful to his war-like operations than a cargo of arms and ammunition. Experience in the course of the present war has, in fact, demonstrated the truth of this observation. Hostile acts have failed which had been planned through the mails. Dangerous plots, which the enemy does not even spare neutral countries, have been detected in the mails and foiled.

The note concludes:

"The American memorandum lays great stress on the view that the rights of neutrals and of belligerents are equally sacred and must be strictly observed. The allied Governments for their part entirely share this view. They are sincerely endeavoring to avoid any encroachment on the legitimate exercise of the rights of inoffensive neutral commerce through the exercise of their own belligerent rights. But they consider that they are within their belligerent rights in exercising on the high seas the control recognized by international law as accorded to them in order to prevent all transport destined to furnish assistance to their enemy in the conduct of the war and to maintain his resistance.

"The rights of the United States, as a neutral Power, cannot, in their opinion, include that of protection given by the Federal Government to dispatches, parcels, correspondence or communication of whatever nature they may be, which have a hostile character, manifest or disguised, and a hostile destination, direct or indirect. Such communication can only be carried on by private American citizens at their proper risk and peril. This is the very principle which has been expressly cited by the President of the United States in his proclamation of neutrality.

"Finally, if any faults, abuses or serious mistakes, alleged to have been committed by the allied authorities responsible for the examination of mails, are brought to the attention of the Government of France or Great Britain, the latter will be prepared, as they have always been, to determine the responsibility and to take the requisite measures in conformity with the principles of law and justice from which it is not and never has been their intention to depart."

FUNSTON SAYS REAL EMERGENCY CALLED OUT GUARD

Declares It Was Question of Hours and It Has Not Been Safe to Reduce Patrol.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Oct. 14.—At no time since the mobilization of the national guard has it been safe to reduce the number of men on the Mexican border, in the opinion of Maj.-Gen. Frederick Funston, commanding the Southern Department of the United States army.

"When you men of the national guard were called out," Funston said, "of course you expected to go slam-bang across the border, and let me assure you that when history is written it will show that the calling out of the guard in June was no child's play—that it was a 'question of hours.' The reason for calling out the national guard was absolutely necessary. All of you will know why some day. And I do not think there has been any time since when it would have been safe to reduce the number of men on the border."

The General's remarks were made at a dinner last night given by the Third and Fourth Illinois Infantry, under the auspices of the Army Young Men's Christian Association. He said his remarks were not addressed simply to his hearers, but to all members of the guard, and he requested the men present to tell their companions that they held his fullest confidence.

Troops Are Still Needed on Border, Says President.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Oct. 14.—The emergency which caused the militia to be sent to the Mexican border still exists, President Wilson told Gov. Whitman of New York in a letter written Oct. 9 and made public today. The President said he believed conditions in Northern Mexico are improving but he could not say with certainty when it would be possible to release the remaining New York units about which Gov. Whitman had asked.

The purpose of the recent policy of sending fresh militia units to the border to relieve some of those which went first, the President said, is to "distribute this duty over as wide an area as possible and make its burden fall as equally as is practicable upon the organized militia forces." He pointed out that this policy has resulted in the return of several of the New York organizations. The President's letter then concludes:

"I share your admiration, my dear Governor, for the spirit in which these men have served and are serving their country, and would be very sorry to have it supposed that their retention on the border is for any mere purpose of completion of their military training or any less commanding purpose than the preservation of our frontier from aggression."

ROACH REFUSES TO PLACE EVRARD'S NAME ON BALLOT

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Oct. 14.—Secretary of State Roach tonight in a letter to I. N. Evrard of Marshall refuses to certify his name as the Republican nominee for Superintendent of Public Schools. There is no vacancy, he says, under the laws and constitution of the State. He notified alll party committees likewise tonight, that he will not certify any nominations for this office.

Roach holds that when Gov. Major appointed Uel W. Lamkin of Clinton to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Howard A. Gass last month that this appointment was for the rest of the Gass term, which would be until Jan. 1, 1919.

In his letter Roach says there is ample time for a court review of his ruling if any is desired.

The constitution provides, says the letter, that the Superintendent of Public Schools shall be elected at the general election in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight and every four years thereafter. Section 10.918 R. S. of Mo. 1909 provides for the filling of vacanc. in the office of State Superintendent of Public Schools in the following language: "In case of vacancy occurring in said office by death, resignation or otherwise the Governor shall fill the same by appointment, who shall hold his office until the next general election."

"I am of the opinion," says the letter, "that section 10,918 should be read and interpreted to conform to the Constitution. In other words, I believe that the appointment that has been made to fill the office, in which there is a vacancy caused by the death of Howard A. Gass, holds until the next general election for State Superintendent of Public Schools which election in regular course does not come until November, 1918. I believe that one who studies the intent of the framers of the Constitution is forced to the conclusion that the election of the chief executive officer of the Department of Schools was intended to be made at a time when presidential and State politics would not be mixed with the election of the chief school officer of the State.

"I am in receipt of an opinion from the office of the Attorney-General sustaining me in the conclusions I have herein expressed."

AEOLIAN-VOCALION

Monthly Payments as Low as $5

PRICE $100

THIS is one of the most popular models of the Vocalion, the remarkable new phonograph which is now recognized in both Europe and America as the supreme instrument of its kind.

Style G, though very moderate in price, embodies all of the important scientific discoveries and inventions that contribute to the wonderful musical quality of the Vocalion.

VOCALION FEATURES:

The Sound Box

—which produces a rich, mellow and rounded depth of tone wholly new to the phonograph. The Vocalion sound box revoices as never before possible such delicate effects as the sustained string tone of violins and the plaintive wood tones of flutes and clarinets.

The Symphonetic Horn

—which amplifies without distortion the exquisite tone produced in the sound box. It is largely due to the perfect design of the Vocalion horn that all suggestion of nasal stridency and all covered or hollow effects are eliminated from the Vocalion tone.

The Automatic Stop

A new triumph of simplicity and efficiency. But two movements are required to "set" the record to stop at any point desired and start it playing. The Vocalion has many such mechanical improvements, each minor in importance itself, but all contributing greatly to the convenience and pleasure the Vocalion will give.

The Wonderful Graduola

—which confers the wholly new phonographic privilege of perfect and artistic tone control. It lets you play the phonograph with all the musical feeling you possess. If an interpretation suits you or has not yet become monotonous, you let it play itself, as it does on other phonographs. But at any moment and on any record you can introduce just the subtle variations needed to make it sound freshly new and to express your own individuality, as well as the artist's.

Beautiful Cabinets

The simple dignity of line and the richness of fine mahogany beautifully finished, impart to the Vocalion cabinets an artistic distinction unapproached in phonographs heretofore, and impossible to convey in illustration.

EAST ST. LOUISAN, SHOT BY POLICEMAN, IS RECOVERING

James Farrel Was Erroneously Reported to Have Served Term in Penitentiary.

James Farrell, 32 years old, of 1759 North Ninth street, East St. Louis, who was shot Sept. 30 by Police Sergeant Roper when the policeman tried to arrest him, is expected to recover. His condition was serious, a bullet having passed through his body.

It was erroneously stated in the Post-Dispatch of Oct. 3 that Farrell had served a term in the penitentiary. This statement, given to a Post-Dispatch reporter by police officials, has since been found to be incorrect.

There was a warrant for Farrell when he was shot. The shooting was a direct result of the presence of winerooms on Third street, in the rear of the police station. A woman called Roper into a saloon to stop a fight. Farrell ran out. Roper pursued him, and in a struggle that followed Farrell was shot.

MUENSTERBERG IS CATECHISED BY HIS FELLOW PROFESSOR

Harvard Instructor Wants Explanation of Parts of His Letter to German Chancellor.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 14.—Prof. William Ernest Hocking, a noted professor at Harvard University, has asked Prof. Hugo Muensterberg to make a further public explanation of statements contained in a letter which Prof. Muensterberg sent to Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg of Germany earlier in the year, which was intercepted by the British censors.

Prof. Muensterberg, according to Prof. Hocking, has found fault with the translation of his letter on matters touching President Wilson, as it appeared in the press, but has not mentioned "other points, and," continues Prof. Hocking, "the natural inferences from this letter as published are so grave as to justify this public inquiry."

Professors Are Colleagues.

In the following paragraphs of the letter, Prof. Hocking implies that Prof. Muensterberg's apparent activities are such as might be understood to be more favorable to Germanism in this country than to Americanism.

Both men are associated with the Harvard department of philosophy, and in most things are colleagues. Prof. Hocking's communication, which is headed, "an open letter to Prof. Muensterberg," is in part as follows:

"Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 13, 1916.—My Dear Prof. Muensterberg — Ostensibly, your report to your Chancellor is a simple report of facts. You say that there has been a 'slump in the German-American cause,' meaning by this that there has been 'a tendency to accentuate Americanism and to avoid what might be construed as favoring Germany.' You speak of a 'patriotic wave' in this country which has swept along with it 'all the weaker elements, meaning perhaps the elements of weaker character, or of weaker German attachments. You assure the Chancellor that many of the German-Americans who are now beginning to emphasize their loyalty to America are indeed against war with Germany, but in America's not Germany's interest. Do you regret that these American citizens are doing their thinking in America's interests rather than in the interest of Germany?

Asks Vital Questions.

"Is it the part of a man who stands for public enlightenment, and for an idealistic philosophy, to play from a hiding place upon the ideals of other men, whether ideals of peace or any other ideals, in order to mislead them into a service of which they are unaware, and which they would reject?

"Why do you speak of the strengthening of American attachment on the part of our German-American population as a 'slump' in the cause you represent? Do you, in reality, wish that the Germans in this country who have declared their citizenship and loyalty here (as you have not) do you wish that they shall still be first Germans at heart, and not first Americans? And are you acting upon such a wish—doing what you can to weaken Americanism in order that Germanism may prevail among us?

"By what name would such activities be called in your own fatherland? It is a part of the ambition and pride of a modern American university, not alone to tolerate but to welcome the most radical differences of opinion. But clearly it becomes a very different matter when to these welcome differences of thought and adherence there is added an activity, perhaps of wide scope, aimed at the integrity of the citizenship in the country which we, your colleagues, and this university owe our protection and welfare.

"I do not accuse you of such activity. Your letter has accused you in the minds of many, and this present letter offers you the public opportunity to reject the natural inference."

Pevely Company Has New Sanitary Method of Handling Milk.

Health Commissioner Starkloff says the pure milk bill is largely responsible for saving the lives of more than one-fifth of the babies of St. Louis. The infant death rate has been reduced 21 per cent since the passage of the bill. Tests of the Health Department show that the Pevely Dairy Co.'s milk is of the very highest quality. A new pasteurizing process is a feature of the Pevely company's output at its new four-story plant, Grand and Chouteau avenues, which is declared to be a great improvement in the sanitary handling of milk. This new method, invented by one of the chemists of the company, is drawing favorable attention to St. Louis. The company asserts that an offer of $50,000 has been made for the exclusive Canadian rights.

KANSAS AND NEBRASKA FOR WILSON, SAYS VICE PRESIDENT

Marshall on Stop in St. Louis Thinks Democrats Will Also Carry Wisconsin, Kentucky and Missouri.

Vice President Marshall, stopping over in St. Louis yesterday on his way to Paducah, Ky., to make a speech, predicted that Missouri, Wisconsin, Kentucky, Kansas and Nebraska would go solidly Democratic. He thought the women voters would have a great deal to do with the Democratic success.

He characterized the speeches of Charles E. Hughes as those of a typical candidate. "They are nice, sweet and flabby and will not win or lose a vote," he said.

But motorists continue to buy that make of tire only because the first tires have made good—have given satisfactory mileage and service.

Motorists bought United States Tires so consistently that, during the first seven and one-half months of this year, we sold and delivered more tires than during the entire twelve months of last year.

And motorists are continuing to buy United States Tires at the same phenomenal rate.

If straws show which way the wind blows, such phenomenal sales increases certainly show where the best tire service comes from.

Q. Why is the company capitalized for $10,000,000.00?

Ans. The experience of other companies which have been merged or taken over by larger companies, or where they have been compelled to increase their capitalization from time to time, proves that without sufficient capitalization a large demand for cars cannot be filled without borrowing tremendous sums or increasing the capitalization and selling more stock; therefore, we believed it a wise plan to capitalize our company for $10,000,000, in order to supply the necessary funds to operate a big business.

Q. Why do you invite the public to buy shares in your company?

Ans. We believe that because of his financial interest in the company every stockholder will become an advertiser and booster for the car. Thousands of stockholders giving their "word-of-mouth" advertising will greatly reduce selling expense, which is a big item in every large manufacturing enterprise. So we believe it good business sense to have thousands with us in this "people's company," rather than to interest only a few persons who might finance the enterprise.

Q. Why do you advertise the sale of your shares in the newspapers?

Ans. Because it brings the proposition to the attention of millions of people almost simultaneously. We know of no other way of doing it so quickly and so economically. This advertising has served a double purpose at one expense—it has financed the company thus far and created a demand for the cars.

Q. How do you know that Emerson "Fours" can be built to sell at $395.00, and that you can make $69.00 profit on each one?

Ans. Because of our experiences in the business and because we have already demonstrated, by securing contracts for parts at a less figure than we had originally planned, therefore we should manufacture the car even cheaper than we first anticipated, especially when we can turn out big quantities up to one hundred cars a day, for which we have already created a demand.

Q. How did you create the demand?

Ans. Through advertising and selling our securities, which have been taken by about 10,000 people up to this time.

Q. In what form is this demand which you state to be for 30,000 cars?

Ans. Applications received from automobile agencies and actual orders for cars. If we were to grant the applications of all these agents, it would tax a factory of more than double our anticipated capacity. The applications for agencies are being investigated for proper qualification and territory. They may be seen upon request by any person interested.

Q. Are you now manufacturing Emerson "Fours?"

Ans. We have already manufactured ten, which are on exhibition in large cities, and are now building five hundred more in our temporary factory on Sixth Street, Long Island City. In a short time we will occupy our new factory at Kingston, N. Y., where we will commence the manufacture and delivery of cars at factory capacity, which we figure will be at the rate of one hundred cars per day, or thirty thousand cars during the fiscal year.

Q. What evidence or further proof do you offer as a safeguard to investors?

Ans. Our sincerity of purpose, we believe, is best evidenced by the fact that the stock interests of the officers of the corporation are non-transferable and non-negotiable; that is, they are held in trusteeship until June 1, 1919, thereby putting all possibility of stock manipulation aside. Furthermore, none of the directors owns any of the preferred stock, and that stock is 7% cumulative, and this interest must be paid before any of the common stock receives any dividend whatever. Furthermore, the company has got to make good and pay 7% interest on all its outstanding preferred stock before they can receive any profit whatever on their own holdings.

NOTE: If there are other questions which any reader of this newspaper would like to ask, we welcome correspondence on the subject. We have been, and always will be, glad to furnish all the information necessary to gain the esteem and confidence of all intending investors. Our books and statements, in addition to being audited monthly by the American Audit Company of New York, have been and are now wide open to investigators, stockholders or intending stockholders, and on the basis of the contents of this announcement we invite people to join us in the upbuilding of this "people's company" and the building of this "people's car."

More Than 12,000 Miles in the Emerson "Four"—
Read This Sworn Statement

Since July 15, 1916, I have driven an Emerson "Four" 12,758 miles. Have consumed a total of 495 gallons of gasoline, 11 gallons of oil, 3 quarts of transmission grease and 2 pounds of cup grease

I have carried more than 400 people, and in every case they have told me that it is a comfortable, roomy and easy-riding car.

It is not necessary to change speed, and its hill-climbing qualities are most remarkable. I have never seen a hill where it was necessary to change to first speed, and I have on hundreds of occasions passed on hills cars of three times its power. I am still using the four original tires.

I have allowed other drivers (men and women) to operate the car, and in every case they frankly admitted that the car is easy to operate, quick to get away and easy to handle in traffic.

(Signed) EDWARD FLETCHER.

PREFERRED STOCK OFFERING

The Company is now offering for sale a limited amount of its 7% cumulative preferred stock, and with each two shares purchased NOW will give one share of common stock free as a bonus—par value of all shares $10 each.

Meantime you are not deprived of a single right or prerogative in the way of dividends. You will receive them all when earned and as paid.

NOTE—The common stock interests of the officers of the Company are also in the same manner non-negotiable and non-transferable until after June 1, 1919, thereby removing all possibility of stock manipulation. This should assure intending subscribers of the reliability and proper intentions of the Company.

Read This Carefully

The 7% cumulative preferred stock shares are a guarantee as to first profits. The common stock shares have no limit or fixed amount of earning capacity—therefore a combination holding of both preferred and common should prove to be a fine investment. Upon conservative figuring based upon an output of 30,000 cars to be sold at $395 each, and at a profit of only $69 each, it is estimated that the common stock should earn 20%. By adding to this 7% on the preferred stock the returns on the investment should be most satisfactory, while with an increased output in the years to come the earnings should be greatly increased.

M'KINLEY, SOLDAN AND CENTRAL WIN IN PREP BATTLES

South Side Juggernaut Runs Over Principia Eleven for 85 to 0 Victory.

WEBSTER GROVES IS EASY

Mid City Team Wins From County Foes, 31-7—West Enders Trim St. Louis U. High.

The McKinley High School juggernaut crushed the last spark of life out of the Principia team at High School Field yesterday morning, running off with an 85-0 victory. Incidently, the overwhelming victory threw an awful scare into the Soldan camp for it was just one week ago that this same Principia team held Soldan to two touchdowns and one subsequent goal, a total of 13 points.

In justice to Principia, it must be said that McKinley never played a better game. Every "break" favored the South Siders. While fumbles were not infrequent, McKinley lost the ball but once while Principia lost the ball every time it fumbled.

George Thompson, the McKinley fullback, got away for a 40-yard run in the first few minutes of play for the first of a series of touchdowns. He kicked goal. Seibert scored the second touchdown on an end run following a 30-yard pass, Thompson to Ronat. That was all the scoring in the first quarter, but McKinley came back in great fashion in the succeeding quarters, scoring 20 in the second, 27 in the third and 24 in the final, a field goal from the 28-yard line by Thompson being the final score of the game.

The lineup:

McKinley.	Positions.	Principia.

Soldan Wins 27-0 From St. Louis U. High School

Soldan High School gridiron team vanquished the St. Louis University High School boys on the High School Field this afternoon, to the tune of 27 to 0. The Westenders outplayed the wearers of the blue and white in every stage of the game except that the Soldan boys were not allowed to advance through the line as much as they desired.

Jack Savage, Soldan's star halfback, played an unusually good game and it was he who made the two touchdowns during the second quarter. The first touchdown being made after a series of line plunges while the second was made by Savage making a 40-yard run around left end and planting the pigskin fairly between the posts. The lineup:

Soldan.	Position.	St. Louis U. High School.

Gil Whitley Stars When Central Beats Webster

Central High School's eleven defeated the Webster High School boys, 31—7. The Grand avenue players made an excellent showing against the boys from the county as a result of the hard work they have been doing during the week in their daily practices.

Gil Whitley was shifted to left half and he certainly proved that he was capable of holding down the job. He made three of the five Central touchdowns.

The last touchdown in the fourth quarter was made by O'Connor, after an 80-yard run around right end.

Howze, who made the only touchdown for the Webster boys, broke through left tackle and, dodging Central's safety man, ran 60 yards for a score.

Fischer, who started the game at left tackle for Webster, had to be taken out in the third period on account of a dislocated elbow. Coach Roberts said that he thought nothing serious would result from it. This is the third time during prep school games that a doctor has been called for and no one responded. It seems that football is a little too exciting for the members of the medical profession.

The lineup:

Central.	Position.	Webster.
E. Whitley	Left end	Gibson
Hoffman	Left guard	Fischer
Holt	Left tackle	Jannapoulo
Klaiber	Center	Howze
Winterroth	Right guard	Buser

Substitutions—Central: Manewal for Winterroth; Schloss for Manewal; Shipper for Schloss; Weidlick for E. Whitley; Shelton for Taggert. Time of quarters—10m.

Yesterday's Football Scores

CONSIDERING the early date, yesterday's football games saw comparatively few surprises. Chicago's improvement, Ames' defeat of Kansas, the surprising strength shown by the Brown U. and Dartmouth teams, and the defeat of the Washington State by the Oregon Aggies, were about the only notable ones.

Illinois and Penn were beaten, but their enemies figured to give them hard, close games.

Lafayette, which is supposed to have a fair team, succumbed to a minor school, Ursinus.

Out of 46 important games, the dope ran true in all but nine. Two contests, both figured to be close, resulted in ties.

Wynn's 40-Yard Dash Nets St. Louis U.'s Only Score

Southern Illinois Normal Eleven Holds Billikens Even, After First Ten Minutes of Play, but Fails to Cross the Local Goal Line—Joern Makes Good Showing.

ST. LOUIS UNIVERSITY'S new graduate-coached football juggernaut—heavy on the naught, men—wheeled into action for the second time this season at Robison Field yesterday afternoon and tried to steam roller the rather green but husky bunch of football warriors representing the Southern Illinois Normal School of Carbondale.

After the first quarter the steam roller skidded and the Billikens were rather fortunate to come through with a 7 to 0 victory over the visitors.

Carbondale must somewhere have imbibed a respect for the local eleven that the Billikens have done little this season to deserve. From the time of lining up for their first scrimmage the visitors astounded the 1000 persons present by booting the ball on first down every time it came into their possession. Owning a good fullback and a strong and capable leg in the person of Whittenberg, the Normals seemed so terrified at the possibility that St. Louis U. might get within 50 yards of their goal line that they forced this player to kick constantly, in their own territory or out of it.

For the first two periods of play Carbondale confined its efforts to purely defensive tactics, kicking on the first down unfailingly.

Wynn Makes 40-Yard Run.

It was in the first quarter that St. Louis U. did its best work. For 10 minutes they slammed Big Bill Joern into the right side of the Normal's line for good but not consistent gains. This was backed up by spectacular individual playing with Flug or Manning carrying the ball for good gains.

With but four minutes to play St. Louis recovered a Carbondale punt in mid field. After a few short gains Wynn broke through the secondary defense of the visiting eleven and streaked it for the Carbondale goal like a liner with a U-boat in her wake. Schedel and Whittenberg nailed him hard simultaneously, hurling the Billiken runner across the side line only one yard from goal line.

This was one of the few good tackles made by either side during the game, and it put Wynn on the ground for quotes. When he recovered, the Billiken captain tried Wekenman at the weak side of the Carbondale line; but, with the secondary defense up, he didn't even dent it. On his second try he rebounded from the wall of linemen without puncturing the enemy. Then Wynn was called upon. He catapulted into Big Joern's niche and barely drove through for the only touchdown of the game. Flug kicked goal making the score 7—0.

Billikens Miss Two Chances.

Still pounding the right side of the Carbondale line, with Joern, the big tackle, pulled back for straight plunges and deception plays, the Billikens continued to rip through the Normals intermittently in the second quarter, but never for a long "march." But at length Manning shook off a flock of opposing tacklers and skirted the left side of the opposing line for a 30-yard run, bringing the ball to within five yards of the Normals' goal.

Here St. Louis U. first learned that there would be no steam-rollering done to the Illinoisans' line. It held hard and forced the Billikens to a forward pass over the goal line, which grounded before being caught.

Again in the same period, Manning pussy-footed his way through a broken field to within the 10-yard zone. But here again St. Louis U. fell down, the Normals holding stanchly on the fourth down, recovering the ball.

Carbondale foolishly adhered to the defensive policy throughout this quarter and let St. Louis U. do all the ramming and attacking.

In the latter part of the second quarter Coach Painter of the Billikens sent a flock of substitutes, with Doran at quarterback, Harbrecht at fullback and Corcoran and Cahill halfbacks.

The new men failed to make much headway and the Normal team steadily forced the Billikens to kick on the fourth down, while maintaining its own inexpricable policy of booting on the first play.

In the second half St. Louis went back to its regular lineup and began to use Joern more and to inject more frequent forward passes—a style of play in which the locals showed as much proficiency as a blind Hottentot.

Normals at Last Cut Loose.

The expected offensive of Carbondale was also unbelted, in this period, and proved ineffective for consistent gains. Now and then a trick play netted good gains, but St. Louis U. was never threatened.

In the fourth period the Carbondallans woke up and began to make serious but intermittent gains. Big Whittenberg, fullback, drove through between Joern and Guard's position for about 30 yards and the Carbondale subs began to shout "Touchdown" on the side lines.

But, ragged as was the St. Louis play, the line was stiff enough to hold off the enemy safely.

However, the St. Louis machine did not seriously endanger the enemy's goal more than once in the last half and the two elevens, such as they were, appeared very evenly matched.

Painter's team—and the visiting outfit, too—was very crude in many respects. St. Louis U. tried the forward pass 11 times and failed to complete it once. One pass was intercepted. Carbondale tried two forward passes without avail. Once the Carbondale forwards broke through so fast they were upon Manning before he had time to throw the ball and knocked it from his hands, a visiting player recovering it.

Both elevens averaged up about 168 pounds, with the regulars all in. The St. Louis U. line was fairly good, but the backfield men, Manning,

WOMEN'S CITY GOLF TITLE IS WON 3-1 BY MISS KAISER

Champion of Missouri Also Takes Local Crown by Defeating Mrs. Steedman.

LOSER LEADS AT HOLE 10

New Title-Holder Was One Down, After Completing the First Nine Greens.

Miss Laurie Kaiser yesterday won city golf championship, defeating Mrs. E. H. Steedman, 3 up and 1 to play, on the Country Club links, in the final round of the Women's City Golf Association tournament.

At the turn, Mrs. Steedman was 1 up, for the first nine holes, having taken 44 strokes, while Miss Kaiser required 45.

On the ninth hole Miss Kaiser used 7 strokes, owing to the fact that she drove her ball into a clump of trees and then, on the next shot, sent it into a sand pile. On this hole Mrs. Steedman took only five strokes.

Mrs. Steedman was out-driving Miss Kaiser on almost every hole, but lost this advantage on the greens, where Miss Kaiser was much more reliable.

This is the first time that Miss Kaiser has held the city golf championship. She is also the present holder of the women's state title, which she won from Mrs. A. N. Edwards this fall at Kansas City.

The cards:

Miss Kaiser:
Out	5	5	6	5	5	4	3	5	7—45
In	5	4	6	7	5	6	5	5	x—44
Mrs. Steedman:

In	5	6	5	7	6	7	4	6	x—46

Mrs. Sullivan and Wolff Win.

Mrs. E. C. Sullivan and Clarence Wolff, a star of the municipal golf links, won the low gross prize in the mixed foresomes decided yesterday afternoon on the links of the St. Louis Country Club with a score of 91. There were three ties for the low net score between Miss Filley and Guy Oliver, Mrs. H. McKay Jones and Mrs. Langenberg and Mrs. Douglas and Miss Pope. This prize will be drawn for.

Triple A Final in Sight.

The golf tournament at Triple A has reached the finals in the upper frame and Christian Kenney is now waiting to play the winner of the lower frame.

Today's match between Elsworth Smith and Andrew McCreery will no doubt result in McCreery playing Kenney in the finals.

The driving, approaching and putting contests will be resumed today and the winner will be decided upon by night. As it stands now there are several of them tied.

Kansas Aggies Hold Heavy Nebraska Eleven to 14-0 Victory in M. V. Battle

LINCOLN, Neb., Oct. 14.—The University of Nebraska defeated the Kansas Aggies in a hard game here today by the score of 14 to 0. The Aggies had a strong defensive at critical points. Twice the heavy Nebraska team carried the ball to within the shadow of the Aggies' goal only to lose it on downs. Nebraska made a poor showing with the forward pass. The winner made one touchdown in the first quarter and one in the second.

The lineup:

Resta Captures Grand American and $15,000 Prize

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—Dario Resta captured the winner's share of the $15,000 Grand American purse, today, and went into the lead in the season competition for the 1916 American championship purse of $15,500 by winning the 350-mile auto race here today.

He failed by a small fraction to equal the new world's record of 104 miles an hour established at the Astor cup race at New York.

Resta's time for the 250 miles was two hours, 24 minutes, 16.68 seconds, a rate of 103.9 miles an hour.

Johnny Aitken finished second, half a lap behind, after giving Resta a hard race in the last 10 miles. Rickenbacker finished third. Ralph Hedlich, mechanician for Wilbur D'Alene, was badly burned when gasoline being poured into D'Alene's car at the pits flashed up as it spilled on the hot exhaust pipe.

Billy Chandler was also burned in extinguishing the blaze. D'Alene reentered the race but quit before the 125th mile.

Wilcox appeared to have won third place when an accident put him out at the 248th mile.

Galvin, Lewis and Henderson finished next in order, while the other eight cars which crossed the finish line were several laps behind the three leaders. Six of the 20 starters were forced by accidents to leave the race.

Brazell's 75-Yard Run Is Feature in Michigan's 26-0 Victory Over Mt. Union

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 14.—Michigan's powerful football machine crushed the Mount Union College football eleven, 26 to 0, in a snappy game here today. The winners scored a touchdown in each period and the visitors were on the defensive most of the time. Mount Union tried to gain on open plays, but seldom were successful.

Capt. Maulbetch, Nieman, Smith and Brazell did the scoring. In the last period Brazell intercepted a forward pass and sprinted 75 yards for a touchdown.

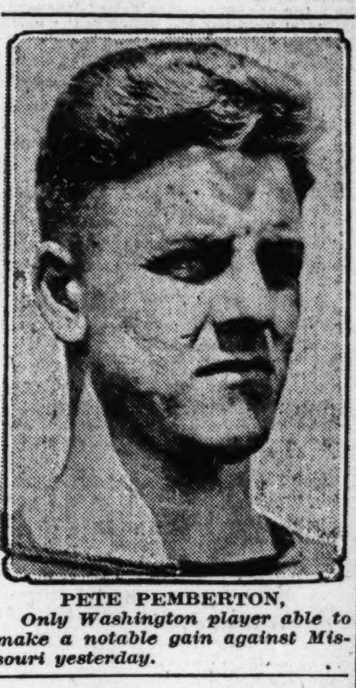
Final Tally of 13--0 Fails to Show True Disparity

Columbians Gain 329 Yards From Scrimmage, While the Pikers Advance Only 28; Penalties Play Havoc With Coach Schulte's Men at Critical Times.

Many Times the Pikers Were Hammered Back Within Their Ten-Yard Lines, but Either Held for Downs or Were Saved by Penalties, in All but Two Cases.



PETE PEMBERTON,
Only Washington player able to make a notable gain against Missouri yesterday.

By James Craig.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 14.

HOPELESSLY outclassed by a team equal in weight and superior in speed, the Washington University Pikers were defeated by the Missouri Tigers by a score of 13 to 0 on Rollins Field this afternoon. Yet the Pikers did not concede the victory without putting up a fight that for gameness and stamina won the applause of their traditional foes.

In some respects it was a most amazing contest. Washington succeeded in making first down only twice, once in the third and once in the fourth period. In the entire game they advanced the ball a total of only 28 yards by rushes as against a total of 329 made by the Tigers. At no time did they seriously threaten to score.

And, in spite of all this, Missouri could put across only two touchdowns. Eight times the enemy had the ball within Washington's 10-yard line. Three times the Myrtle and Maroon line braced and held. Three times Missouri was set back by penalties and twice Stankowski, the Tiger quarterback, staggered across the line scoring by inches.

Penalties Hurt Missouri.

As in last Saturday's game with Central College, the Tigers suffered cruelly from penalties, each of them without doubt deserved. Time after time they would rip their way through the Washington line for consecutive and goodly gains, only to lose the fruits of their success through fines.

They suffered 10 penalties in all, for a total lost yardage of 110 yards, as against Washington's three penalties, and a total loss of 25 yards.

Missouri University is a big school with a whole lot of professors and a catalogue of courses so numerous it almost requires an adding machine to keep count of them, but today's game should have shown the curators that there is vital need of one more. The mathematics department out to install a chair of football statistics to teach the young men how to add and subtract. All last week the ambitious young correspondents of the School of Journalism were sending out tonic about the weights of the Tiger team. They told of a line that averaged under 170 pounds to the man and a backfield that averaged only 144.

Today's back field came about as near averaging 144 pounds as Jim, the lady elephant at Forest Park does. Man for man the Tigers looked every bit as heavy as Washington and no expert would risk his reputation as a guesser of avoirdupois to say they did not weigh more. When Director of Athletics Brewer was asked about this phenomon tonight he smiled a slow, reminiscent smile and turned away.

Sweet Revenge for Schulte.

Taking the game all in all it looked very much as if Coach Schulte had got square for the unkind trick Coach Edmunds played upon him about this time last year. It will be remembered that the Tigers went down to St. Louis full of earnest intentions and high hopes and got the surprise of their lives with a 13-to-10 trimming, in addition.

Yesterday—but the tale is too sad, mates, and is best left untold.

Certainly the Pikers, all innocent and unsuspecting, ran into a young avalanche of gold and black jerseys. On offense the Missouri line tore through the Washington forwards. When Washington had the ball it was usually second down, eight yards to go; third down, six yards to go; punt.

The immediate cause of Washington's downfall was the inferiority of its line. In one procession, in the third period, Missouri took the ball from the center of the field to within two yards of the Pikers' goal by cross-bucks, split plays, straight plunges and short dashes between tackle and end.

Pemberton Makes Brilliant Run.

A great deal had been expected of Pemberton, the slashing Washington half, but Pemberton was unable to deliver because his line couldn't help him. The lunging Tiger forwards would be through and upon him, smashing his interference before he could get away. At that he made one spectacular sprint around right end for 20 yards. The Pikers' only other important gain came through the brilliant eexcution of a fake, when the ball was passed as if for a try at a field goal and then was shot over the line of scrimmage for a successful forward pass.

In these few minutes of play it looked as if Washington was to be overwhelmed. Stankowski received the kick-off on his own 20-yard line and returned it 10. Three vicious assaults on the line made it first down and Collins broke through for a 40-yard gain; but Missouri was penalized 15 yards for holding. The Tigers come right back, 7, 5 and 3 yards at a clip, but another penalty set them back 10 yards and Haines was forced to punt. Washington punted back to Missouri on her own 40-yard line. Rider hit center for nine yards, Haines made it first down and Collins, sweeping around right end with beautiful interference, added 15 more.

Four separate times in this period the Tigers swept to within a few yards of the goal only to fail at the final punch. Three minutes from the close of the period Rider broke away for 20 yards from a fake kick formation and Collins, on the next play, smashed the line for 12 more. Four straight bucks gained 11 and the whistle blew with the ball in Missouri's possession on Washington's two-yard line. Two line plunges at the beginning of the second period put it over for a touchdown. McAnaw failed to kick goal.

Shanley Punches at Groves.

Fullback Shanley's failure to control his temper in the third contributed greatly to Missouri's second tally. After Stankowski had returned a punt 10 yards to Washington's 40-yard line, Pittam skirted left end for 10 yards more and was thrown out of bounds. Shanley was close on top of him and Groves, who was at that time playing fullback for Missouri, bumped Shanley pretty severely. Shanley whirled and aimed a punch which grazed the Tiger star's nose. Groves grinned and motioned to the referee. Shanley was banished from the game, and Washington was penalized half the distance to her goal. The Pikers drew another five-yard fine for offside. Two plunges at the line put the ball on the two-yard line whence Stankowski wriggled across. Muir kicked the goal.

Washington played better football in the fourth period than at any other time in the game, defensively at least. The line held Missouri firmly and the ends had better success in mussing up plays and diagnosing the diversified Missouri attack. Twice in the third period Washington made remarkable rallies when Missouri touchdowns semed to be inevitable. One of the most spectacular plays in the entire game was when Busiek broke through an interference of four players and threw McMillan for a five-yard loss, when it looked as though the Tiger players were about to get away for a certain touchdown.

The Pikers' weakness as a team

Agar, With Two Touchdowns, One After a 65-Yard Run, Is Star for Maroons.

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—The University of Chicago football eleven defeated Indiana University, 22 to 0 in the first game of the "Big nine" season here today. The defeat eliminates Indiana from the championship race.

Chicago played a much improved gave over its exhibition of a week ago and tore ragged holes in Indiana's line, scoring a touchdown in the first ten minutes of play when Agar shot over the visitors' goal from the five-yard line. In the second period Higgins scored a place kick from Indiana's 35-yard line. Agar made a 65-yard run, scoring his second touchdown. He also kicked goal.

Fumble of Punt Loses for Penn

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 14.—The Swarthmore eleven, coached by Bill Roper, former Princeton star, defeated the University of Pennsylvania eleven on Franklin Field today, score 6 to 0.

Pennsylvania's defeat was primarily due to a fumble of a punt by Quarterback Bell, in the second period. Bell let a Swarthmore player get the ball on Pennsylvania's 30-yard line and after working it five yards towards Pennsylvania's goal, Halfback Michael tossed a pretty forward pass to Fullback Bush and the latter dashed over the line for a touchdown.

Offenstein Is Star for Ranken in 0--0 Tie Game With Smith Manual Team

Smith-Manual and Ranken Trades School fought to a 0-0 tie yesterday morning at the Smith-Manual campus. Incidentally, it is the first interscholastic scoreless tie in recent years, at least one score being made in all the games. A great deal of fumbling marred an otherwise good game. Most of these fumbles were committed at a time when they hurt, several times preventing scores. Both teams lacked a punch.

In one instance Ranken brought the ball within two yards of the Green and White goal. Although they had four downs in which to push a man over, they failed miserably and lost the ball on downs. Smith-Manual kicked out from behind its goal line and Ranken was as far from a score as ever. Offenstein, the Ranken quarterback, played an excellent game, his passing and running being the feature of the contest. White and Macbeth played good football for Smith-Manual. The summary:

Ranken.	Positions.	Smith-Manual.
Price	Left end	White
Schneider	Left tackle	Sutherland
Kreyling	Left guard	Stone
Crane	Center	Calep
Clark	Right guard	McLain
Kraft	Right tackle	Nelson

Illinois' Defeat by Colgate, First in Three Seasons

Eastern Eleven Scores 15 Points Against Illini's Lone Field Goal.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Oct. 14.—The University of Illinois lost its first football game since 1913 today, the superior Colgate eleven winning, 15 to 3.

Illinois showed brilliant offense at times and repeatedly gained territory, but too often lost on incomplete forward passes. A place kick and Spencer's touchdown scored Colgate's nine points in the first half.

Capt. Macomber, for Illinois, dropped a placekick in the third quarter, making Illinois' only score. Colgate came back with a touchdown by Hubbell on a forward pass, just as the whistle blew. The lineup:

WISCONSIN WINS EASILY FROM SOUTH DAOKTA, 28-3

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 14.—Wisconsin University had little trouble in defeating South Dakota State College on the gridiron here today; score 28 to 3.

Three of Wisconsin's touchdowns were made by Simpson, left halfback, after a series of line bucks had advanced the ball to within South Dakota's five or three yard line. Berg also scored a touchdown for the victors. South Dakota made its only score in the fourth period on a drop kick by Dunn from the 25-yard line.

MINNESOTA WALKS OVER NORTH DAKOTA 47 TO 7

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 14.—The University of Minnesota overwhelmed North Dakota University, 47 to 7, here today. Minnesota had little difficulty in breaking down their opponents' defense, and the North Dakotans pounded the Minnesota line with little success. North Dakota's only touchdown came in the final period, when McKay, snatching up a fumbled ball, raced 65 yards to the goal. A number of spectacular forward passes were made by the victors.

PRINCETON BARELY NOSES OUT TUFTS ELEVEN, SCORE 3-0

Fumbles at Critical Times Prevent Tigers From Scoring Touchdown — Foes Never Were Threatening.

HARVARD TEAM MAKES AN IMPROVED SHOWING

Crimson Defeats North Carolina Team 21-0 — Yale Wins Hard Game From Lehigh Eleven, 12-0.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 14.—Princeton defeated Tufts (which defeated Harvard a week ago) on the football gridiron here today, by a score of 3 to 0.

Dave Tibbott, playing in his first game of the year, dropped a goal from the field, while standing on the 45-yard line, late in the fourth period, and so gave the Tigers a decision in a struggle which was taking on all the appearances of a scoreless finish on both sides.

The margin of winning was narrow, but broad enough to satisfy the natural craving of Princeton men for a victory over the eleven which beat Harvard by a score of 7 to 3, only seven days ago.

Then, too, all who looked on enjoyed the added feeling of satisfaction that the score did not begin to measure the greater strength and efficiency of the Princeton team.

Loose handling of the ball was costly. The Tigers were checked in what looked like a drive for a sure touchdown early in the first quarter, with a damaging fumble by Allen Brown on Tuft's six-yard line, and they were held up and put on the defensive three or four other times by blunders of the same kind. But even this, combined with the keener alertness of the men from New England and their sharpness in following the ball, was not enough to open the way to any real danger.

Tufts Never Dangerous.

Tufts made a good fight and gave a thoroughly good account of itself; but one long shot at a goal from the field was the nearest the team came to scoring, while a comparison of the two elevens leaned strongly to Princeton.

The Tigers, on the other hand, were ever threatening and carrying the fight into their opponent's territory. They peppered away at the Tufts goal posts, making seven shots in all, and while only one carried true to the mark, the others gave some idea why Princeton deserved to win on the true merits of the play, even considering the fumbling at critical moments.

The lineup:

Princeton.	Positions.	Tufts.
McLean	Left tackle	W. Brown
Nourse	Left guard	Morrison
Gennert	Center	Pryor
Hogg	Right guard	Algar
Latrebe	Right tackle	Beacham
Wilson	Right end	Sanborn
Addy	Quarterback	Drummey
Eberstadt	Left halfback	Mitchell
Brown	Right halfback	Wescott
Driggs	Fullback	Doane

Tufts	0	0	0	0—0

Substitutions—Princeton, Funk for Highley, Ames for Eddy, Eddy for Ames, Winn for Funk, Tibbott for Eberstadt, Ames for Eddy, Eddy for Brown, Highley for Winn, George for Eddy; Tufts, Lincoln for Joachim, Spunt for Morrison, Haggerty for Sanborn, Powers for Spunt, Abbott for Powers, Sanborn for Haggerty, Bratt for Drummey, Hopkins for Sanborn, Jeffrey for Bratt.

Harvard Cripples Find N. Carolina Team Easy

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 14.—Harvard's much-crippled football team succeeded in playing a very fair game against North Carolina today, scoring three touchdowns from which goals were kicked, and netting a total of 21 points, or eight less than the Princeton Tigers were able to score against the same team a week ago.

Harvard was minus six of its regular men, but thanks to the wonderful open field ground-gaining ability of Eddie Casey, the old Exeter star, and the sucess of its forward passing game, the crimson substitutes were able to make things go fast in the first period for 14 points, and later in the third, with plenty of fresh material in the lineup, put over another touchdown by the forward pass route. The North Carolinans, playing football very similar in conception to that which Harvard played, never were dangerous, passing the middle of the field only once, and then because they recovered the ball about 40 yards from Harvard's goal after partially blocking a kick.

Casey Stars for Crimson.

Harvard today showed unmistakably that the drill since the Tufts game has been thorough. The line worked better and although the backs were not of the first string, they ran splendidly. Also, the quarterbacks showed keen sense of shifting the play and with a game in spots more open than Harvard usually elects to use, there were some splendid gains made.

Two of the three touchdowns were made in the first period and the other in the third. All resulted from long-distance gaining, the crimson today covering no less than [illegible] yards with its attack from scrimmage, and the visitors gaining only about 67 yards by rushing, the crimson forward passes, which were beautifully completed by Harte and C. Coolidge, the ends, netted 68 yards of Harvard distance.

Harvard today looked much better than in the earlier game. The line had a good lift and the interference was a lot better. However, that the

RULES FORGOTTEN WHEN 'KID' BANDY WINS FROM REDDY

Referee Randall's Efforts Wasted in Effort to Enforce Observance of Code.

COLONA BEATS JOHNSTON

Former's Superior Cleverness Again Proven in Last Night's S. B. A. C. Mill.

By Harry S. Sharpe,
Referee for the Future City Athletic Club.

After 12 rounds of rough mauling, with neither man making any pretense of observing the rules governing boxing, Referee Eddie Randall declared his belief that "Kid" Bandy of St. Louis had won from "Battling" Reddy of New York, probably because Bandy was the least offender of the two.

The bout was boxed at the South Broadway Athletic Club and was witnessed by about 500 persons. Many of the spectators were wildly excited and their shrieks rose above the general din as they directed their favorite in the ring what to do. The "favorites" were doing all they could, but, as a matter of fact, were doing very little of what boxers are supposed to do.

Both Bandy and Reddy resorted to almost every foul tactic that was possible, and yet be permitted to remain in the ring. In addition to doing everything in violation of the rules that Bandy did, Reddy did one thing more, and that was his refusal to step back from the clinches throughout the bout when called upon to do so by the referee; and it is probable this reluctance on his part had something to do with Referee Randall's conclusion.

Nobody Was Hurt.

Despite the fact that the bout was unpardonably foul and rough, neither of the maulers seemed able to hurt the other, and but little damage was done. This was because they did so much hugging and holding that they were too close to each other to get a free swing with either hand. They thought nothing of holding each other with one hand and trying to inflict punishment with the other, but this was too clumsy and awkward a method to accomplish much.

Once in a while Bandy and Reddy would swing wildly for each other, generally for the body, but this would be followed so quickly by a clinch that the blows hardly had time to land fairly. There was much wrestling of each other to the ropes, but this accomplished nothing in the gathering of points.

All the credit and sympathy that can be given any one in that "main event" must go to Referee Eddie Randall. As was predicted, he had a most miserable evening. He would have been justified a dozen times over had he stepped out of the ring and had no more to do with the exhibition. Neither of the boxers showed a willingness to help him by boxing according to what it was announced earlier in the evening would be the Marquis of Queensberry rules. He tried his best, and in the eleventh round even told the unruly boxers that they would have to stop their rough-and-tumble work or he would stop the bout. "Stop it," he said, "or out you go!"

There was but one more round of the bout to go, but the boxers dug into each other just as they had been doing, with Randall trying to give the spectators a "run for their money" by prolonging the thing until the gong ended it for good.

Willie Colona won the semi-final from "Red" Johnston by his superior cleverness as a boxer. This was an eight-round bout at 116 pounds. Johnston was wild in his delivery and so unsteady on his legs that he slipped and fell to the mat a half dozen times or more. After being badly outpointed for the first four rounds, Johnston threw discretion to the winds and sailed into Colona for the balance of the bout. This furnished much action and excitement, as the bout was no longer so one-sided, but Johnston was unable to overcome the lead Colona had gained earlier in the bout.

Jack Callahan slightly outpointed Pete Macklin in six rounds at 125 pounds.

PATIENCE PAID McGRAW IN CASE OF FRED SCHUPP

John McGraw is a most patient manager. He held on to Rube Marquard for three years before the Clevelander came through for him. He also held on to Freddie Schupp for two years, hoping to make a pitcher out of the southpaw, whose lack of control indicated he never would settle down and be a winner for the Giants. Like Marquard, Schupp has delivered. He ranks second in the National League with a mark of 10 victories and only three defeats.

The lefthander has taken a wonderful part in the Giants' phenomenal record-breaking winning streak of 26 games, he having pitched and won six of the 26 games. In those six games he allowed but 17 hits and three runs, four of them being shut-outs. Chicago gathered six hits and two runs off him, while Brooklyn made two hits and one run. Cincinnati, Pittsburg, St. Louis and Boston were the clubs to be whitewashed.

Pol Perritt is another pitcher who was very effective for the Giants, having won four during the Giants' phenomenal streak, allowing but three runs and 20 hits.

Sidney Hatch Will Try For a New Record for Milwaukee-Chicago Run.

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—Sidney Hatch, veteran distance runner, is to make one more test of his endurance before he lays aside the spiked shoes. It was announced yesterday by Coach Jesse Smith of the Mystic Athletic Club that Hatch will run from Milwaukee to Chicago Oct. 17 in an effort to lower the record of 18 hours 17 minutes for the distance, now held by Al Corey. He will leave Milwaukee at 8 o'clock Tuesday night, finishing at the Mystic Athletic Club at Madison and Dearborn streets shortly after noon the next day. Doctors and members of the Mystic A. C. will follow the veteran by automobile.

Cornell Smothers Williams.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 14.—Cornell's football team defeated Williams today by a score of 42 to 0. The visitors furnished the only real opposition in the first period, when they held Cornell for downs on the Williams 20-yard line. Mueller, Shiverick and Benedict, however, again plugged the Williams line for long gains, and Shiverick went over for the first score.

In the second period, Cross fumbled on his 15-yard line and Capt. Mueller, recovering, went 15 yards for a touchdown. Bretz who went in during the second half, also made a touchdown.

Ohio Runs Up Record Score.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 14.—Breaking four previous records and setting what is claimed as a world's intercollegiate record for football scores, Ohio State University won over Oberlin here this afternoon, 128 to 0. The first mark to go was that of scoring in the first half, 67 points being counted. The second record to be set aside was that of scoring by an Ohio State team when the 85 to 0 score against Miami, in 1908, was raised in the third quarter, and the third was a mark that surpasses all scores in the State and the fourth is the new record against Oberlin, which has always proved a hard team for State to whip.

All Teams in League Have Signed New Kickers for Opening This Afternoon.

With many surprises awaiting the fans in the shape of changed fronts, the Ben Millers, Naval Reserves, St. Leos and Innisfails will open the soccer season at Robison Field this afternoon with a double-header. The changes are not so numerous nor so pronounced as to make any material difference in the appearance of the clubs, but some strengthening has been done in each case.

Most of the stars of last year will appear in their customary places. Harry Ratican, who is in the East with the Bethlehem team, and Matt Diedricksen of the Innisfails, are the only stars who will not be in the game for any great length of time. Bull Brannigan and Jimmy Hagerty have received slight injuries in practice sessions which will hold them out for one week.

Brannigan Out of Opener.

Little can be said of the relative strength of the clubs at present for the infusion of new blood may work wondrous changes here and there.

The schedule calls for Ben Millers vs. Naval Reserves in the first game and Innisfails vs. St. Leos in the second. The opener will start at 2 o'clock. Phil Kavanaugh will referee.

IOWA LINE PROVES TOO MUCH FOR GRINELL

IOWA CITY, Ia., Oct. 14.—A solidly holding Iowa line which prevented Grinnell College from scoring throughout most of the game, spelled defeat for the scarlet and black on the Iowa field today, the State University eleven winning, 17 to 7. Grinnell was outplayed and outgeneraled. Their defense was smashed time after time by terrific rushes of the Iowa backfield in which Mendenhall, Scott and Duncan featured.

Missouri Defeats Washington, 13--0, in One-Sided Game was not reflected by weakness of the individual players. Hackman put up a sterling fight at left tackle and the duel between him and the veteran Van Dyne was a beautiful thing to see. Wetzel stood the gaff for a terrific battering from Hamilton, who was, perhaps, the star of the Tiger line. Captain Busiek was a rampaging lion on defense, his deadly tackling showing up all the brighter because some of his teammates were prone to tackle too high. Caffee at right end and Kling at left both played hard football.

Both Coffee and Kling were handicapped by having to play against Giltner, who will certainly make the all-valley team, if he keeps up his pace of today.

Rider, Collins, McMillan and Stankowski all played super-football for Missouri. Director Brewer, after the game, praised the material of the Washington team and predicted that it will do things, when it gets to working as a smooth machine. He declared the frequent penalties incurred by his own team were due to overeagerness and predicted that this would be overcome when the men have more experience. It will have to be, if the Tigers get anywhere in the conference; for the penalties they suffered today were enough to beat any eleven, in a close contest between equal opponents.

Coach Edmunds said he was not disappointed at the Pikers' showing. Washington teams as a general thing, he said, started the season well and ended poorly. This year he prophesied, it will be found to have ended well, after getting a poor start.

The lineup:

Missouri.	Position.	Washington.
Giltner	Left end	Kling
Muir	Left tackle	Hachman
McAnew	Left guard	Peters
Hamilton	Center	Wetzel
Preston	Right guard	Foelch

Stankowski	Quarterback	Reichard
Collins	Right halfback	Pemberton
Rider	Fullback	Shanley

Oliphant Scores Total of 11 Points for Army Team, Then Retires From Battle

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 14.—The Army won from Holy Cross today, 17 to 0. The Cadets outplayed their opponents from the start, but loose handling of the ball at critical times and penalties for holding occasionally nullified fine work in advancing the ball.

The collegians were weak in overhead plays and their line was no match for the quick Army forwards. Oliphant kicked a placement goal, scored a touchdown and tallied both goals from touchdown for the Army, and then retired from the game. His zig-zag running was spectacular.

HOPPE RUNS OUT 500-POINT GAME IN THREE SHOTS

World's Cue Champion Plays in Great Form, Practicing for Sutton Encounter.

When Willie Hoppe, world's champion at 18.2 balkline, and G. Butler Sutton of Chicago, the challenger, get together in their title match at the Moolah Temple, Oct. 30, 31 and Nov. 1, some new records may be set if the records of the pair in the conditioning games go for anything. Hoppe, according to his manager, R. B. Benjamin, is playing better billiards than ever before, while reports from Chicago show that he is making some great runs.

"This match," said Benjamin yesterday, "is going to be the greatest one with the 18.2 balkline title at stake that ever was played. Hoppe is going better than he ever has, and the records made by Sutton, even if they were set only in practice, are not to be sneezed at."

Hoppe in a practice game of 500 points with Charley Peterson, ran out in three innings for an average of 166 2-3. The champion started with 11, came back with 237 and then went out with an unfinished run of 252. Another time he averaged an even 100 for 1000 points, while on another occasion he had an 82 average for the same number. Since he has been in the city, though, Hoppe has been unable to tear off a run of 300.

The champion in the past has been doing all his practicing mornings and afternoons, but, starting this week, this will be changed, and he will devote mornings and nights to workouts. His program has been changed so as to accustom him to the night light.

Hoppe to Play With Wright.

He will get all the work he is looking for from now on with Chick Wright of San Francisco and Young Jake Schaefer of Chicago on hand. Wright will play with Hoppe each day. The coast player, although he is after no titles, is considered one of the best balkline exponents in the country by Hoppe's manager. Schaefer has gone back to Chicago for a few days, but will be back early in the week.

Sutton, while he is still uncorking great runs, in his last letter to Benjamin stated that he was having a lot of trouble with the break, and that the balls were not running true. Since he has started training, though, he has many runs of 100, 200, and even has gone over the 300 mark several times. If he is able to keep up this pace against Hoppe, the champion will have to hustle.

A new scheme will be tried out when Hoppe and Sutton play their match. Instead of the referee just announcing that the pair will play, he will explain the rules of the game to the fans on hand, while a set of printed rules also will be given to each patron. This is an innovation, which Benjamin thinks will go a long way towards boosting the game.

The matches are scheduled to start at 8 o'clock promptly, and the players and referee will be inclosed within a brass rail, so that none of the spectators will be able to interfere with them. There also will be a special stand for the press, and everyone will be able to watch every move of the cueists.

Ladies Apply for Tickets.

One of the great surprises to date is the fact that women are taking almost as much interest in the coming match as are the men. Many applications for tickets have been received from the feminine followers to date.

Benjamin is a great booster for both Wright and Schaefer. "Wright is one of the greatest, if not the greatest lecturer on billiards in the world. He will explain the different shots and then himself show how an ordinary player would play them. Then Hoppe gets to the table and shows how the different shots should be played correctly. This I think will greatly help popularize the game and make our coming tour a great success.

"If ever there was a player who has a chance to follow in Willie Hoppe's footsteps, he is Young Jake Schaefer, son of the former champion. On our tour he will be playing with Hoppe every day and also will have Wright and Peterson to instruct him. He has a wonderful touch, and if there is anything in him, the coming tour should bring it out. One thing, it will show just where he stands as a balkline player."

WEST LEADS EAST IN MANY LINES OF SPORT

Although neither the West nor the Mid-West figured in the 1916 world's series struggle, the Occident has pried many an athletic wreath off the classic brow of the East of late.

In the whole athletic realm there isn't an event in which Westerners haven't put their intrusive fingers with an air of championship, with the exception of those games which the Westerners cannot reach. Here is a table of championships which may prove interesting:

Heavyweight pugilistic champion, Jess Willard of Kansas.

Featherweight champion, Johnny Kilbane of Ohio.

Bantamweight champion, Young Ertle of Minnesota (claimed).

All-around athletic champion, Fred Kelly of California.

Swimming champion, Ludy Langer of California.

American League batting champion, Tris Speaker of Texas.

National League batting champion, Hal Chase of California.

Amateur and open golf champion, Charles Evans of Illinois.

National League premier pitcher, Alexander of Nebraska.

Wrestling champion, Joe Stecher of Nebraska.

Tennis doubles champion, Johnson and Griffin of California.

Other Cases in Point.

The West didn't get its fingers into the world's series pie, but some of the most prominent members of each of the competing teams are out West when they're at home. Jerome Travers and Francis Ouimet, the East's best two golfers, have not been seen in tournaments this year, and, consequently, were not of any help in saving honors for the East.

The recent A. A. U. field and track meet at Newark brought some crack athletes to the East from the West. Among them were Robert Simpson of Missouri and Fred S. Murray of California, two hurdlers whose equals never have been seen. It also showed Landers, the wonderful schoolboy athlete from Illinois, who came within an inch of tying the A. A. U. record for the pole vault. It also gave the spectators a glimpse of Andy Ward, the Chicago sprinter, and Arlie Mucks, the prodigious Wisconsin weight thrower. These are just a few of the many athletes in the West whose records show they are able to give a good account of themselves in any contests. The athletes who went to the Scandinavian countries a short time ago as representatives of America in games across the seas were all Westerners with the exception of Ted Meredith.

Yale Shows Many Faults in Defeating Lehigh Men

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 14.—Lehigh held Yale to a 12 to 0 score in the old Yale field this afternoon before nearly 10,000 persons.

Many faults of Yale which had not shown in the games against Carnegie Tech and Virginia, were apparent. The need of a better center was one of these. Charley Taft, who had never played the place until Tuesday, did as well as could be expected, but his passing was very poor, and could not even have satisfied his distinguished father, who saw the Yale team in a game for the first time since the fall of 1877.

The Yale line did not charge well until nearly the end of the game. And Eddie Smith, the little quarterback, did not show good judgment throughout his selection of plays, unless he was restricted in his choice of them.

Fumbling was the principal trouble with the Yale team, as in former years; and while not nearly as frequent as in the past, it occurred at very critical times, as when Bingham, who is usually sure, fumbled the ball within Lehigh's five-yard line with a touchdown for Yale almost on ice. Legore's punting, the greater part of which was against the wind, was not nearly as good as usual. Twice he punted very high and, while his end covered the punts well, Lehigh made gains on the exchanges.

The Lehigh team, however, was strong and afforded a good test for Yale as well as showing up its various weaknesses. And Capt. Black's team showed it knew how to break up the deadly forward pass of the Bethlehem school, destroying the effect of all except two.

Lehigh Miss Scoring Chance.

These two, from Purcell to McGuiness, near the end of the second period, brought the ball from the center of the field to the five-yard line, where old fashioned football failed to impress the Yale line, and a final unsuccessful pass across the goal line gave the ball to Yale and lost to Lehigh the only chance to score in the afternoon.

For, while the Yale offense showed that much work must still be done, the defense stood well and time and time again Brunner had to punt and the Yale goal line was but once seriously threatened.

Legore, while he missed a goal from the 35-yard line, and the goal after Bingham's touchdown, had lost none of his skill on his feet. The Lehigh team naturally waited for the famous right halfback, and most of the gains were short; but he kept his feet always and never failed to advance.

The line-up and summary:

Billikens' Lonely Touchdown Gives Narrow Victory

Wynn and Flug, had to do most of their work alone.

Big Bill Joern and a pair of rattling good ends were among the best features shown by the Billikens. With Joern drawn back Painter has worked out several variations from the same formation. A straight plunge off tackle by Joern was the ground gainer which threw the fright into the enemy and made effective the variations.

Joern was a target for several of the enemy's plays and they got some of them over him, but not many. He looks like a real good prospect.

JUMPING JACK OF PUGILISM TO SHOW 'AEROPLANE PUNCH'

Johnny Dundee, Welsh's Most-Feared Rival, Will Show at Future City, Tuesday.

By Harry S. Sharpe.

A meeting with Johnny Dundee, the sensational light-weight boxer, who is here for a bout with Jimmy Hanlon, Tuesday, leaves the unmistakable impression that he is a fighter. He looks it, acts it, and talks it. And it is probable he would fight for first place in anything he undertook and understood, whether selling fish, playing baseball or boxing for a championship.

Asked if he liked to box, his eyes danced and he panted, "Do I? I love it!" The answer came between clenched teeth and lips drawn back in a wolfish curl that indicated well the fighting spirit.

While known as Johnny Dundee, his baptismal name is Joseph Carroro. He was born Nov. 22, 1893, of Italian parents, "somewhere" in Italy. He is without a trade and has had but little schooling. He can't spell the name of the town where he was born, nor can he tell in what part of Italy it is located. He came to America when 2 years old.

Dundee learned to box by watching others and trying it. He started about six years ago, and today is waiting for opportunity to open the door of the lightweight championship to him. Freddy Welsh, who holds the lightweight title, is the one boxer who stands in his way, and Dundee has thrown down the gauntlet to him.

Dundee Missed Title Chance.

"I would have been lightweight champion now if boxing had not been stopped in California, for Tom McCarey had me matched with Welsh, and I am one of the few boxers in his class who can beat him," declared Dundee. "I am willing to concede everything except that he meet me at the lightweight limit. I will not weigh more than 130. He can even have his own referee. All I ask is a chance to fight him—after that I'll be lightweight champion."

Dundee is nothing if not sincere, and when he made the foregoing statement he meant it. It was confidence, not egotism, that gave it birth.

To Dundee's way of thinking there is nothing of greater importance than a match between he and Welsh, and he discusses the subject with great earnestness.

"Freddy Welsh," insisted Dundee, "is one of the greatest boxers we have, and he is a fighter, too. Though growing old, and probably weary of the game, he is still too good for any but the very best in his class. Next to myself, I think Welsh the best lightweight in the world, and then comes Benny Leonard.

"Charlie White of Chicago, who was favored by a match with Welsh at Denver, Colo., on last Labor day, might have been champion now had he been more aggressive, for he had the champion going in the thirteenth round. It was one chance in a thousand and probably will not come to another boxer. White is a slow, flat-footed boxer. He is the hardest hitter of all the lightweights, but hasn't the heart of a fighter. No boxer of that sort can ever hope to beat Welsh.

Dundee Hates Himself—What!

"To beat the Englishman at his best a boxer must be clever, fast, a good ring general and not afraid of him. He must be able to do whatever Welsh can do, and be able to do more of it. That is why I think I can beat him. I can do everything he can. I can keep any pace he can set, and be ready for more when he is ready to quit. I am younger and stronger, and I am still ambitious.

Dundee is the smallest aspirant for the lightweight title in many years. He is 5 feet 3¾ inches tall, with a reach of about 69 inches, which is considered short. At his best he will weigh only 130 pounds. The exercise of boxing and preparing for bouts has made him strong and muscular and wonderfully well proportioned. He claims to be an abstainer from tobacco and alcoholic stimulants.

While Dundee claims never to have been knocked down during a contest, he says Willie Ritchie, ex-lightweight champion, came nearer doing it than anyone else, and it was the hardest punch he ever felt—a right cross to the jaw. That punch drove him against the ropes and, he admits, the ropes saved him from going down.

Dundee's Aeroplane Punch.

Asked where he had acquired the peculiar jumping style for which he is famous in the ring, Dundee explained it as follows: "When 'Scotty' Monteith, my present manager, took charge of me in the beginning of my career I weighed only about 110 pounds and was a little fellow for that because of my short stature and short reach. In order to teach me to reach up and hit higher so that I could reach the faces of my opponents, Monteith strung my punching bag so far above my shoulders that I had to jump for it. This taught me the trick of leaping in the air and landing on my opponents while my feet were off the mat.

"I have never been able to knock a man out with what is now termed my 'aeroplane punch,' but I have developed it to such an extent that I find I can punish with it. I frequently jump five or six feet at a man and usually land on him. If I miss him I may sprawl to the mat, but that doesn't happen very often."

Kirkwood High Has Won Two, Lost One and Tied Another Game This Year

The Kirkwood High School eleven, which this season is being coached by F. P. Tillman, who is serving his first season, has won two, lost one and tied one game to date this season. In its opening contest, Principia was tied, 6—6; then Central High swamped the county eleven, 47—0. The next two battles resulted in victories over Loyola, 14 to 0, and over Ferguson High last Friday, 14 to 3.

Tillman has scheduled six more battles for his aggregation, they coming in the following order: Oct. 21, Ranken at Ranken Field; Oct. 28, St. Charles at St. Charles; Nov. 4, Webster Groves at Francis Field; Nov. 9, Maplewood at Kirkwood; Nov. 18; Edwardsville at Kirkwood; Thanksgiving day, Columbia in Columbia.

Notre Dame Wallops Haskell.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 14.—Although the Indians furnished stubborn resistance, Notre Dame defeated the Haskell eleven today. Score, 26 to 0. Harper's crippled backs plunged through the Haskell lines effectively in the second period, while the Haskell band failed to make lengthy gains at any time.

WRAY'S COLUMN

The All-America Bug Is In Again.

IT'S no use, Bo. Everybody's doing it, and we have to get in line with an All-America baseball team. Picking All-America teams is one of the easiest things in the world, because there's no chance for your selections to crack under the strain of an actual test.

All you have to do is to take your typewriter in hand and, with the records beside you, nail the high averages. In fact, you don't have to go to the records to be able to select a club that could shear through the world's champions like a hot knife through butter.

Here's one that is picked from memory—and it will be just as good as any picked after hours of research:

CATCHER—Ray Schalk, Chicago Americans.
PITCHERS—Grover Alexander, Philadelphia Nationals; Walter Johnson, Washington Americans; Harry Coveleskie, Detroit, and "Babe" Ruth, Boston Americans.
FIRST BASE—Hal Chase, Cincinnati Nationals.
SECOND BASE—Eddie Collins, Chicago Americans.
SHORTSTOP—Jack Barry, Boston Red Sox.
THIRD BASE—Larry Gardner, Boston Red Sox, or "Buck" Herzog, Giants.
OUTFIELDERS—Ty Cobb, Detroit; Tris Speaker, Cleveland; Joe Jackson, Chicago Americans.
UTILITY—George Sisler.

Some Hitting Club, This.

THERE may be some argument over this list. The infield positions would probably be very much disputed. But for attack and defense both, it is hard to imagine a better combination. Eddie Collins did not get his stride until late in the season; but he was going pretty close to his best in August and September, and there is no reason to believe that he will not be himself again, next season.

With Collins right, every member of the infield would hit .300 or better, with the exception of Barry, one of the best pinch batsmen in the game. Chase headed the National League for many weeks, while Collins is a normally .320 hitter.

The outfield seems beyond question. These three men top the American League and their combined average is about .362 for the season. Jackson, the lowest, was .349.

The entire team, with Ruth pitching, would have a batting average of over .300!

Battery Picking Is Easy.

SCHALK is the admitted leader of the catchers, and the southpaw pitchers are, of course, more or less questionable. Alexander and Johnson will probably be unquestioned. Johnson, with a hopeless team, won over 25 games—in itself a titanic feat—while Alexander was the outstanding hurler of the country on his season's work.

Ruth and Covaleskie are at least as good as any southpaws that could be named, unless "Dutch" Leonard is working with Carrigan behind the bat.

George Sisler might be made a regular on first base without doing Chase an injustice. He is a wonderful performer there, though batting a few points under .300. His remarkable versatility, however, marks him for utility man.

Ban Johnson Is Right Again.

BAN B. JOHNSON whanged the old nail right on the beezer in his little interview, yesterday, wherein he stated that world's series prices had advanced to a point where sportsmanship was as prominent as a microbe's eyeball. Ban added that the boost in world's series seat prices had made the event a silk-stocking affair, and had frozen out of the park gates the two-bit boy who had contributed regularly throughout the season.

Ban is going after the high cost of world's series baseball, and after the low ideals now prevailing among club owners.

It's all right, Ban. But if you think you can amputate the mercenary taint from the game at this stage, you will fall heir to some peevish moments and a disagreeable enlightenment. It's no news to the public that club owners are mercenary. Since the game became a big business and not a sport, you couldn't locate sportsmanship in a big league park with a 500-diameter magnifying lens. From players to club owners it's a case of "get the money," and to wipe out that idea, Ban, you must wipe out the game.

You may, Old Top, cut down the price of world's series exhibitions, and reduce the fabulous profits of players and magnates. But you'll have to wield a more powerful influence than we think even you now possess.

We're with you; but we don't think the club owners and players are—not even ONE of them!

The Absurdity of It.

THE receipts from this year's world's series set a record, even over the eight games played in 1912. A total of some $384,000 was contributed by the silk stocking gatherings in five games.

The players, some of them, received more in bonus money than they did in annual salary.

The club owners' share, over $92,000, was almost as large as the club's profits on the regular season.

The profits of the fifth game alone amounted to $37,000 TO EACH CLUB!

Thus, when Bill Carrigan used Carl Mays, in the third game, and lost it, instead of winning it with Leonard, as was the logical move, he made over $75,000 for the club owners, since he made possible the fifth contest.

There is no reason why such unreasonable profits should be reaped at the expense of Mr. Bleacher Fan, who finds himself raised out of a seat at the title games by the greed of the club owners.

As Miss Kaiser Sees It.

MISS LAURIE KAISER, one of the best, if not THE best, woman golfer in St. Louis, has represented Flossmoor, a Chicago club, in her entries to the Western and national golf title tournaments, thereby arousing some curiosity locally as to the reason.

The fault, if there be one, should be charged against local clubs, and not against Miss Kaiser, it would appear. A friend of the city's brightest light of the links explains that Flossmoor Club awards a perpetual membership to any of its players who win either the Western or national championships, and Miss Kaiser has therefore sent in her entries from that club, instead of from a local club.

It certainly appears that the local organization with which Miss Kaiser is affiliated might at least offer as great an inducement as Flossmoor.

PITT BEATS NAVY 20—19—FUMBLES AID MIDDIES

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 14.—Showing surprising strength and taking quick advantage of the errors of the opposing back field, Navy piled up 19 points against Pittsburg University today, while losing the contest by 1 point.

The visiting back field and line proved too much for the middies. However, the fumbling of Meadows and Miller allowed the middies two tallies. Whelchel, who was put in at quarter for the sailers after Orr was hurt, earned the other Navy tally by a beautiful 70-yard run.

ABSENT STARS CAUSE DEFEAT OF OKLAHOMA

NORMAN, Ok., Oct. 14.—For the first time in two years the University of Oklahoma football team went down to defeat today. Henry Kendall College of Tulsa turned the trick in a most thorough manner, outplaying the Sooners at their favorite open game for a 16-to-2 victory. Oklahoma was crippled by the absence of several injured veterans.

As Kendall is not a Southwestern Conference team, the defeat does not affect Oklahoma's chance for the championship, which they won last year with an all-victorious team.

RAILROAD CROSSING'S FATAL FASCINATION

"Always play safe," is the advice of James E. Newell, president of the Newell Motor Car Company, general distributors for Haynes, Sun, and Dort motor cars.

According to Mr. Newell, most accidents result from miscalculation on the driver's part. Obviously dangerous as railroad crossings are, there seems to be a fatal fascination in them for the auto driver.

"Newspaper accounts of motoring accidents on railroad crossings are practically always the same—the occupants killed or seriously injured, because the driver miscalculated.

"If the motorist would bear in mind that a train traveling 60 miles an hour is really moving ninety feet a second, and that in the five seconds it will take him to cross the track, the train will have moved about two city blocks, he would not be so quick to rush his car across, but the average motorist, deceived by the speed of the train, doesn't do this.

"The peculiar part is that it is so frequently the fellow with plenty of time who gets killed in such accidents. It seems that this fascination of beating the train over just 'gets' them."

Mr. Newell's advice of playing safe is worthy of serious inward digestion by all who drive motor cars, and particularly the motorist in his driving infancy.

"If you ever get stalled on a railroad track," said Mr. Newell, "and your motor won't start, you can fall back on your starting system to pull you over.

"Just throw her in high, let the clutch in, step on your starter hard and keep your foot right on it until you are in safety on the other side of the track.

"The thoroughly dependable starting system like the Westinghouse, which is on the Dort, is well worth while having in a pinch like this.

TWIN SIX MOTORS FOR FLYING MACHINES

An interesting visitor in St. Louis last week was William Robert McCulla, connected with the truck department of the Packard Co. and an engineer of recognized ability in America and abroad. At a dinner to him in St. Louis County, given by the officials of the Packard Missouri Motor Co., Thursday, he told of his recent service in the aviation corps of both the French and British armies. The principal joint of his talk was the development anl use in the European flying machines of the twin six motors. These are used in the heaviest aeroplanes to insure both silence and power, the former being an essential of effective service.

MADE RECORD IN TWIN SIX

Iowa automobile dealers and motoring enthusiasts have a pet test of worth for their cars—the run across the State, from Council Bluffs to Davenport. Records have been changing hands from time to time for several years, taken most recently, however, by racing cars.

The Packard Motor Car Co. had as its guest last week the new record holder. He is W. J. Barndollar of the Schee company, Des Moines, and is one of 19 salesmen who attended the truck school being conducted by the sales and technical department of the factory.

Barndollar on Sept. 24 drove a new Packard Twin Six, seven-passenger touring car, with top and windshield up, carrying five passengers, without any preparation, without anything "special" about the car, across the State, a distance of 346 miles, in eight hours and 39 minutes total elapsed time. The average speed was 40 miles an hour. At times the speedometer registered 74 miles an hour.

More than 600 motor cars and horse-drawn vehicles were passed in making the trip. In every city, town or village the car slowed down to meet the legal speed limit. Eighteen minutes were consumed in one stop for gasoline.

VESTIBULE FORD BODY

Under the significant heading, "Keeping abreast with the popular demand," the Commercial Auto Body Co. announces its new 1917 vestibule front body for Ford chassis. Announcement is in the form of folder circular, printed in green and blue, attractively displaying the new style body. The descriptive matter brings out the special features, such as the entirely closed drop sash window, vestibule front, and particularly the 60-inch loading space back of the seat. While no price is shown on folder, it is stated this style will sell for $135. It is also stated that numerous sales have already been made. Among those mentioned are sales to Werner & Werner and Scott Cleaning Co.

The demand for this body is very heavy for winter use, and with proper ventilating features it is satisfactory in summer, and a distinctive style at all times.

NOVEL TOURING SEDAN

The Velie Automobile Co. of St. Louis received the first Velie Touring Sedan yesterday with a Brewster green body and black hood and fenders.

The Touring Sedan takes the place of two cars, having removable plate glass windows which serve alike summer and winter, fair or stormy weather. Five minutes is ample time to make the change. The front seat is divided and the rear seat is amply wide for three.

The trimming is a beautiful whipcord upholstery with deep and luxurious cushions. The chassis is the famous "Biltwel" model 28. The Touring Sedan also does away with the noisy, makeshift, detachable body.

The car is now on exhibition in the showrooms and sells for $1710, delivered in St. Louis. It has been pronounced one of the "classiest" jobs on Automobile Row.

MANY "NEW" FEATURES OLD WITH COLE CAR

Some of the older concerns of widely established reputations are taking a keen sense of satisfaction in the realization that the extensively advertised features of many new models have long been a standard part of their own production. A. F. Knobloch, general manager of the Cole Motor Car Company, of Indianapolis, made this point exceptionally clear in an interview the other day.

"For instance", said Mr. Knobloch, "the manufacturers of one of the country's highest priced cars on the market have specialized in their advertising on the fact that they are incorporating removable cylinder heads in their new models. As far back as when we adopted the V-type eight-cylinder motor, the Cole company saw the advantages in detachable cylinder heads, which could be removed with very little trouble when it was desired to grind the combustion chambers and cylinder bores, and adopted them.

"Other features in construction which have long been used by the Cole company and are now being put into use every day by its competitors include the counter balanced crank shaft on which the counter weights are welded integral with the shaft; the light reciprocating parts which insure perfect balance; the direct drive spring suspension which adds to the driving qualities and road ability of the car; the double universal joint; the ready attached tire pump and hose; the self lubricating springs; the efficient force feed lubrication system, with gear pump; the individual front seats, with roomy aisleway between, and other items almost too numerous to mention.

REPUBLIC DISPATCH REACHES ST. LOUIS

The much heralded "Republic Dispatch," the new baby of the Republic truck line, arrived here Saturday evening, thus completing the first leg of its cross-continent journey from Alma, Mich., to Los Angeles, Cal., by a zigzag route of over 3000 miles. It will be on display at the showroom of the Republic Motor Truck Co., 1600 Chestnut street, until Tuesday noon.

The car is being driven by Lester Poyer, accompanied by H. L. Dewey of the Republic factory, and will be delivered to the father of Mr. Poyer, the Republic dealer at Los Angeles.

This new model is of 1500 pounds capacity, is equipped with full panel or express body with canopy top, electric lights—everything, and will sell for $750. The other Republic models will include a one-ton truck at $1095, a 1½-ton at $1275, a 2-ton at $1675 and a 3-ton at $2550. The Republic factory, after three years, expects to produce in the next year 20,000 trucks.

DIMS WITHOUT DIMMING

There is a really mathematical and scientific way of so diffusing the rays of light as to furnish the motorist plenty of illumination for the road and still remove the danger. It would seem that this has been worked out in the new Prismolite lens. This consists of a clear glass lens that under tremendous pressure has been pressed into exact prisms of small size. This arrangement of prisms is well know in other uses as diffusing the light and still affording the largest amount. The back of the lens is finished with a regular plate glass finish, and it takes the place of the front lens of any lamp.

Since the glass is clear, all of the light passes through, but it is subjected to a breaking up of direct rays by the action of these prisms, and instead of a beam of startling brightness as thrown from the unprotected search light there is a steady glow, into which one may look far ahead on the road, showing every rut or bump, and diffusing to the side so that the ditches are shown, the signs may be read and ample light provided for all purposes. This does away with the necessity of a search light entirely.

MORSE SUCCEEDS SMITH

Announcement of the election of E. C. Morse to the vice presidency of the selling division, Chalmers Motor Co., is made, following a meeting of Chalmers directors. Morse resigns as sales manager of the Hudson Motor Car Co. to take up his new work of directing Chalmers sales. His acquisition by the Chalmers people is regarded as one of the most important trade moves in recent months in the automobile industry. He will step into the position made vacant by the death of Paul Smith last July, and will have direct charge of sales, service and advertising.

ACCESSORY MEN TO MEET

The regular monthly meeting of the Motor Accessory Trade Association of St. Louis will be held Tuesday night at the City Club, 911 Locust street, following the monthly dinner. Judge Granville Hogan of the Municipal Court is to talk on the enforcement of the various automobile ordinances of the city of St. Louis, and Jack Ryan of the Wabash, famous reconteur of as famous stories, will be a feature of the evening. Half a dozen new members are to be elected.

SPALDING ON BOARD.

H. W. Spalding, vice president of the Packard Missouri Motor Co., was elected a member of the board of directors of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers and Dealers' Association at a meeting of the board Friday. Spalding will also be vice chairman of the Show Committee. He succeeds R. R. Doak, who has gone to the Ohio Electric Car Co. at Cleveland. The Show Committee and the board also inspected several buildings Friday in a search for a place for the annual automobile show, Feb. 15-22.

TO SELL TROY TRAILER

Allen Baker, president of the Federal Truck Co. of St. Louis, announced that he has taken the distribution of the Troy Trailer in Eastern Missouri and the adjacent Illinois territory. The enormous amount of goods to be moved and the long hauls makes St. Louis an excellent field for trailers.

It is the claim of the Troy people, who are the world's largest makers of trailers, that they can increase delivery capacity 100 per cent at an additional operating cost of not to exceed 10 per lent. The Troy trailers vary in size from three-quarter to five-ton capacity and are furnished with any style body required.

The big feature of the Troy it its reversibility, either end being attached to the truck. As it steers from either end it can be backed with ease into any position desired for loading or unloading. The chassis is of steel construction throughout.

Ike S. Byrum, special representative from the factory, in speaking of the plant and service station of the local Federal dealers, said it was one of the best equipped to handle truck business in the country. It was these facilities for service and the aggressiveness of the men behind the company that decided Mr. Byrum in favor of Mr. Baker as a St. Louis distributor.

HARD TEST FOR FRANKLIN

Here are the combined results of four individual tests of the new Series 9 Franklin car, embracing runs aggregating 6041 miles:

Average sustained speed over good and bad roads—25 miles an hour.

Average number of miles covered per gallon of gasoline consumed—23.

Average number of miles per gallon of oil used—about 850.

It is well known that 20 miles an hour is the most economical speed at which to run a car. At a faster rate the wind resistance is proportionately greater and the road shocks are more severe. To maintain an average speed of 25 miles an hour for 6041 miles it is necessary to drive with wide-open throttle whenever possible in order to compensate for slow running over bad roads, speed regulations in towns and cities, etc.

This Franklin economy record is particularly remarkable in the fact of the high-speed running conditions. That no tire trouble was experienced over the entire distance shows the value of light weight, especially below the springs—a point which the Franklin engineers have developed with good results.

TO PRODUCE NEW CAR

With the acquisition of the corporation of the Argo Electric Vehicle Co. of Saginaw, Mich., by the Columbia Motors Co. of Detroit, it is made known that the Columbia Motors is to begin at once the production of a new six-cylinder car to retail at approximately $1000. The Columbia Motors is capitalized at $500,000.

The Columbia Motors was started through the merger of two companies in process of formation, in which such prominent motor car men as J. G. Bayerline, president; William E. Metzger, vice president, and A. T. O'Connor, secretary and treasurer of the new company were interested. With the Argo merger everything is in readiness for the manufacture of the Columbia car.

The company will immediately take possession of a factory in Detroit. The first year's production is to be limited to 3500 cars, the output going forth Jan. 1.

The Great Economy of Two Separate Power Ranges

In its "loafing range" the fuel consumption is about half what you would expect of a car of its size and power.

Think of an eighty horsepower eight-cylinder car, with all that power, smoothness and flexibility consuming so little fuel in all ordinary driving as to put many a forty horsepower six or four to shame.

But that's what it means to have two distinct power ranges—a "loafing range" for all ordinary requirements, with all the economy of cars which have no great power—no "sporting" speed—

And in addition, a "sporting range" separate and distinct which you only call upon when you want a brute of a car for a speed brush with a contender of real class or need emergency power for work that few cars can attempt.

That enormous power and great speed you have in the Peerless Eight's "sporting range" of power.

But you hold this tremendous reserve in a dormant state until you want it—it costs you nothing in fuel consumption until you use it.

Although you simply open the throttle wider to call upon its "sporting range" of power, the minute you begin to use it the whole character of the car is instantly changed.

It now responds with a deeper tone—you have opened its double poppets—only cars of the utmost distinction can show such class as you now exhibit.

No other car in the world can exhibit such sporting class coupled with such inexpensive operation in ordinary every-day driving.

Ask us to demonstrate the double power range of the Peerless Eighty Horsepower Eight.

CROW-ELKHART PLANS FOR 30,000 CARS A YEAR

The tremendous advance made by the automobile industry during the past two or three years is almost past belief. Crow-Elkhart Motor Co. is the latest of the sturdy growth of younger concerns to join the ambitious procession toward big production. This company has won its spurs by seven years of success without sensation. Steadily, but quietly, moving up in the ranks, it has reached a point where demand has outstripped the extreme limit of capacity production of its present plant at Elkhart, Ind., now turning out five-passenger touring cars selling at $795, and three-passenger "Clover Leaf" roadsters at $845, at about the rate of 5000 per year.

It is planned to double this output within the next few months, and then as rapidly as possible to reach 30,000 cars per year. When this goal is reached it is estimated that the net profits of the Crow-Elkhart Motor Co. will be between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 per year.

PISTON RING PLANT DOUBLES CAPACITY

L. B. Miller has been selected as general sales manager of the Inland Machine Works, Eighth and Mound streets, St. Louis, who are manufacturers of widely used Inland piston rings. Miller has been connected with the local branch of the United States Tire Co. since 1913 in responsible positions.

The Inland company has just completed the doubling of its production capacity by the addition of a large building adjoining its location. The company manufactures on a large scale its one-piece piston ring. It has sales agencies in all the principal cities. Its rings are standard equipment for Franklin, Apperson, Pathfinder, Kissel and several other well-known automobiles.

GRANT CLIMBS MOUNTAIN

By traveling through almost mountainous country from New York to Boston and back again with first and second speed gears removed to necessitate speeding on "high" all the way, a Grant stock car has set a new mark for hill-climbing efficiency, according to an announcement just made by J. C. Kerrison, of the Bay State Association, to the Weber Implement & Auto Co. of St. Louis, Grant dealers.

Shooting without apparent effort over the steepest hills while other cars on the road seemed to have the greatest difficulty in climbing with the use of all three speeds, the Grant six-cylinder roadster completed the journey of 500 miles in 18 hours and 15 minutes. The average speed was 27.8 miles an hour, while the fuel consumption was remarkably low, being an average of one gallon of gasoline to every 17.7 miles.

SAME TIRES WIN RACE

Goodyear Cord Tires established a new world's speed record at the 250-mile Astor cup race at Sheepshead Bay, Sept. 30, when Johnny Aitken drove his famous Puegot, Goodyear equipped, to victory over a field of 31 starters. Aitken covered the 250 miles at the terrific rate of 104 2-3 miles per hour. This is the fastest time ever made in a 250-mile race and clips 3 minutes from the previous world's record.

Storming along barely a minute behind him, Eddie Rickenbacher, piloting a Maxwell, flashed past the flag, second. His care was also equipped with Goodyear Cord Tires. Neither leader changed a tire during the entire race. Two of the tires on Aitken's Puegot were the ones which helped him to win the 300-mile sweepstakes at Cincinnati, on Labor Day, at the dedication of the Sharonville speedway.

COAST TO COAST TIRES

The use of the United States "Royal Cord" tires—one of the five complete lines of automobile tires made by the United States Tire Co.—was one of the first of the principle factors which enabled the Hudson Supersix to capture the transcontinental record.

The "Royal Cord" tires on which this record was made came through the whole distance of 3459 miles with what experienced road drivers call a perfect record.

The three men who drove the car each made the statement when asked, "no tire trouble whatsoever." During the entire trip there were but three minor punctures, which were easily and quickly repaired and caused no delay.

SHOW MINIATURE GARAGE

The miniature garage, a product of the Manchester Mfg. Co., which has been seen around town this week, mounted on an automobile has been creating talk.

Their exhibit of one of their sectional garages at the Maxwelton Fair also created attention. This garage is so simple that it can be put together without the requirements of a mechanic as it comes in sections. The manufacturer says that all that is necessary to construct this garage is a hammer and a screw driver. They are made in any size to meet the requirements. The company has opened a display room at 213 North Broadway, St. Louis.

BEAT DIXIE FLYER.

From Chattanooga, Tenn., to Macon, Ga., and return, a distance of 441 miles, in 13 hours and 52 minutes is the latest of a long string of road records hung up by the eight-cylinder Cadillac.

This beats the best previous automobile record by four hours and eight minutes, and in doing so the Cadillac incidentally beat the Dixie Flyer, the fast express between the two cities, by six minutes.

The car was a standard type, driven by Ernest Holmes, carrying five persons.

DENMO TRUCK LOCATED

Charles S. Porter, manager of the Denmo-St. Louis Sales Co., dealers in the Denmo truck, has taken permanent quarters at 2638 Locust street. The Denmo truck, which is in one size only, will be on exhibition Monday. It carries electric lights and starter and a 35 horsepower engine, the starter motor being suspended in a special cradle to prevent vibration. Porter has been connected with the truck business exclusively for nine years, being probably the longest serving truck man in St. Louis.

MADE 70 MILES AN HOUR

Bud Armstrong recently broke the record from Seattle to Portland, making 194 miles distance in six hours on a 1917 Excelsior motor cycle. He lost 30 minutes resting. He covered the bad roads at the rate of 50 miles an hour and the good roads at 70 miles an hour.

SYNDICATE BUYS TRACT ADJACENT TO FOREST PARK

Will Open Maffitt Plat at Clayton and Skinker Roads, as New Subdivision—Separate Sections Planned for Apartments, Houses and Bungalows.

BUILDINGS TO COST $3500 TO $15,000

Site Overlooks Hillcrest, Parkview and the Park—Proposed Extension of Hamilton Car Line Would Run Through Property.

By BERRY MOORE.

A syndicate, composed of 11 St. Louis capitalists, has purchased the Maffitt tract at the northwest corner of Clayton and Skinker roads, and has made extensive plans for its upbuilding. The price paid for the tract was approximately $250,000. Another $250,000 was subscribed by the members of the syndicate for the conversion of the tract into a residential park. All money paid in this connection will be deposited with the Title Guaranty Trust Co. as escrow agents.

The deal was promoted by David P. Leahy, president of the David P. Leahy House and Home Co., and W. J. Holbrook, president of the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co., in conjunction with Isaac T. Cook, president of the Frisco Building Co., in whose behalf the sale of the tract was executed. The tract is susceptible of subdivision into 11,300 front feet, the deal contemplating an equal division of the property among the 11 syndicate members. They each will receive a trifle more than 1100 front feet, the price paid in each instance being in accordance with the location.

As soon as the project was disclosed in financial circles there was a widespread desire, according to Leahy, obviously its dominant figure, to get into the syndicate, the required capital being oversubscribed in a comparatively short time.

The tract will be subdivided with certain sections set off exclusively for apartments buildings, bungalows and residences and the upbuilding of the additions will be along harmonious lines.

Building Limit Varies.

A second syndicate is being promoted for the erection of buildings here and there in the subdivisions, which will serve as a standard for builders. The cost of buildings, as prescribed by restrictions, will vary from $3500 to $15,000, according to their character, while on all streets a 35-foot building line will be observed.

The tract lies along the north line of Clayton road and extends from Skinker road on the east to Belle View avenue on the west. It is 1000 feet wide and 6500 feet long. The location, which is opposite the new and imposing entrance at the northeast corner of Forest Park, is one of the most attractive adjacent the park. The site occupies a commanding position, overlooking Hillcrest and Parkview and Forest Park and the city.

The Hamilton avenue car line will bisect this property with its proposed extension south over Delmar, Skinker and De Mun avenues.

The Frisco Building Co. acquired the tract about a year ago from George Warren Brown, the shoe manufacturer, on an attractive basis, in part payment for the 99-year lease of the Frisco Building at the southwest corner of Ninth and Olive streets.

Activity in high-class vacant holdings in the extreme West End has been of more than ordinary proportions, the demand embracing both residence and apartment sites.

Rock Island Tract Deals.

Negotiations are virtually concluded for the sale of a number of lots in the west half of the Rock Island tract to apartment house builders. One thousand feet of the tract extending west from Union boulevard was sold last week to the Sam Koplar Real Estate & Building Co., which forthwith will begin the erection of a series of high-class apartment buildings. There now remain unsold approximately 1800 front feet. The indications are that this tract will be wound up in a short time.

The tract lies along the south line of Berlin avenue, the north boundary of Forest Park, and extends from Union to De Baliviere avenue. As a site for buildings of this character it is excellent. Cornet & Zeibig, in conjunction with the Rosenbaum-Hauschulte Real Estate Co., have the exclusive sale of the tract.

A chain of lots was sold in North Parkview yesterday and plans are being drawn for the erection of apartment buildings. The seller was the Delmar Investment Co., composed of Louis A. and Charles Cella of the Central National Bank Building. North Parkview is rapidly being built up with apartment houses.

REAL ESTATE BOOM AT WOODRIVER, ILL

Sales of sites for homes and for factories at Woodriver, five miles southeast of Alton, are rapidly acquiring the proportions of a boom, according to real estate operators in that section.

The movement began six months ago with the purchase in that locality of a site for the $8,000,000 tannery now being built by the International Shoe Co. Since a chain of subdivisions has been platted and sold, and snug profits have been reaped by lot buyers who took advantage of the original prices. All the plats have been laid out in 25-foot lots, which have been disposed of at prices ranging from $150 to $250. In some instances the lots have been resold at almost double their initial cost.

A new addition, to be known as South Woodriver, has been platted by the McCasland-Harnett Real Estate Co., the leading spirits of the movement in this section. This will be placed on sale in lots to suit forthwith, according to announcement made yesterday by Edward Glik, St. Louis representative of the real estate company, with offices in the Boatmen's Bank Building.

Tract Lies on Auto Highway.

This tract lies along the east line of the Alton and St. Louis road, the main automobile highway between Alton and St. Louis, and adjoins on the west the site of the new tannery. A block at the north end of this tract, embracing approximately 3000 front feet, has been reserved for stores and other business purposes.

The South Woodriver tract already is exciting interest, which foreshadows its rapid sale to speculators or to investors anticipating a demand for the lots for homes by employes of the tannery, which it is calculated will require for its operations no fewer than 5000 hands.

Woodriver was founded eight years ago, when the Standard Oil Co. established large refineries there, and the nucleus of what promises to be one of the most important industrial centers of the United States.

Many substantial homes running in price from $1500 to $8000 have been erected in Woodriver by employes, and those holding important positions at the Standard Oil works. The business section, lying to the north of the refineries, is fast building up on a substantial scale. Corner sites in this section, available for larger mercantile blocks, are commanding from $45 to $50 a front foot. There are several grammar schools and one high school in Woodriver. A second high school is under construction.

Part of Industrial District.

As a matter of fact, Woodriver is virtually an integral part of an industrial district, disbursing in monthly wages approximately $400,000. Other plants in this locality known as the Woodriver and East Alton district, are the Western Cartridge Co., Illinois Glass Works, Laclede Steel Works, Beall's Shovel Works, Federal Lead Works, Box board Works and Illinois Terminal shops.

So closely built up is this area that running through it in an automobile or on an express train, it is hard to distinguish one section from another, each forming links in a chain of vibrating manufacturing centers.

During the week Williams & Bland disposed of three more lots in Buckingham Court. The identity of the purchasers will not be disclosed until their building plans are perfected.

Buckingham Court is an exclusive apartment building addition. It was laid out only six months ago. Now 15 buildings have been erected. The location is just east of the Buckingham Club.

PLANS MADE FOR BUNGALOWS OF THE CALIFORNIA TYPE

They Will Be Erected on Queen's Avenue, Where About 20 Others Are Under Construction.

Plans have been completed for several bungalows of the California type to be erected by recent purchasers of lots on Queen's avenue, at Florissant avenue and King's highway. There are in the addition about 20 bungalows ranging in cost from $3500 to $4500, and several more are under construction. Plans for others will be disclosed in rapid succession.

The last week was marked by the sale of many lots in this tract. This property is owned by clients of the Broadway Savings Trust Co., and is being handled by Charles W. de Largy, real estate officer.

Buyers recently have resold their lots at substantial advances, according to De Largy. The property is located on the Union avenue and Bellefontaine lines.

BUSINESS SITES DOWNTOWN IN GOOD DEMAND

New Olive Street Building Likely to Be Completely Leased Before Completion.

BUILDING FOR CLOTHIERS

Tailor Takes Quarters at Sixth and St. Charles Streets—Electrical Firm Removes.

A significant feature of the realty situation is the revival manifest in the demand by business concerns for quarters in the downtown district.

Although the work of clearing the site was begun only a few days since, the indications are that every foot of available space in the 14-story shop building to be erected at the southwest corner of Eighth and Olive streets by the Finance and Mortgage Co. will have been leased before completion. The Hutchinson Shoe Co., a subsidiary of the Century Shoe Co., yesterday obtained a lease of one of the six Olive street stores provided for in the building plans. Negotiations are progressing for the other Olive street stores, as well as for three stores designed for Eighth street, according to Isaac T. Cook, who is in charge of the enterprise.

Offers also have been forthcoming for the upper floors of the building, which will be suitable for shops and club purposes. While it has not been disclosed officially, it is said that arrangements are about to be concluded by which the City Club will occupy the two topmost floors of the building. Quarters in this building also are being seriously considered by another large organization.

Bank Deal Collapses.

It was said yesterday that negotiations had collapsed whereby the American Trust Co., together with the Title Guaranty Trust Co., was to have been launched on this corner, which is one of the most eligible in downtown St. Louis for a large banking establishment. The Night and Day Bank, which surrendered its quarters in the Holbrook-Blackwelder Building in order that its construction could go forward, is no longer a possible lessee of the new building, having acquired a five-year lease on the ground floor of the Frisco Building at the southwest corner of Ninth and Olive streets, formerly occupied by the ticket office of the Frisco Railroad.

Plans have been completed for the erection of a three-story and basement daylight building, of fireproof construction, for Greenfield Brothers Clothing Co., at the southeast corner of Eighth and Olive streets. Razing of the present three-story building on the site is under way. The clothiers have acquired a 12-year lease of the new building, which was negotiated by the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co., in conjunction with Cornet & Zeibig, agents for the Turner estate, the owner of the property.

King, The Tailor, now located at the southwest corner of Sixth and Olive streets, has leased larger quarters on the east side of Sixth street, just south of St. Charles street, to which the firm will remove soon. The lease, which was executed by A. D. Cunningham, secretary of the Missouri Botanical Association, owner of the property, provides for alterations and improvements on an elaborate scale. King, The Tailor, has occupied the Olive street corner for 20 years, but larger quarters have become imperative.

Restaurant Renews Lease.

The Century Shoe Co. has also acquired a five-year lease of an adjoining store, while the Nagel Restaurant Co. has renewed its lease for the southeast corner of Sixth and St. Charles streets, both in the Missouri Botanical Association Building.

The Brown-Hall Supply Co., manufacturers' agents for electrical supply fixtures, has removed to the five-story building at 1515 Pine street, of which it has taken a five-year lease. This is the third time in the last five years that this company has been forced to obtain larger quarters. It was formerly located at 1124 Pine street. The new building, which has been appointed to meet the lessees' requirements, is in the heart of the district, rapidly growing in importance as a center for electrical and kindred interests.

535 ST. LOUIS CONCERNS FAIL TO MAKE REQUIRED REPORTS

Recorder of Deeds Says Officers of Many Corporations Denied Knowledge of Statute.

Five hundred and thirty-five St. Louis corporations have failed to comply with the statute requiring each incorporated company to report to the Secretary of State before July 1 of each year the amount of its capital, assets and liabilities and to furnish an affidavit that it is not in a trust or combination in restraint of trade.

Recorder of Deeds Joy, who is required to give the corporations notice of their delinquency, said yesterday that officers of many concerns declared that they had never been notified by the Secretary of State that reports were due. The statute is more than 10 years old.

Failure to file a report within 30 days after July 1 makes the corporation liable to the payment of a fee of $5 to the Secretary of State. Further delays increase the penalties, the maximum being ouster from the State.

Those on the list of delinquents in the Recorder's office include the St. Louis Coffin Co., of which Fred D. Gardner is president; the Haller-Lemberg Realty Co., of which Alderman Julius Haller is an officer; the Wertheimer-Schwartz Shoe Co., W. R. Compton Bond and Mortgage Co., Busch-Sulzer Bros., Diesel Engine Co., Love Mortgage and Investment Co. and the Wabash, Frisco and St. Louis & Southwestern railroads, the St. Louis & East St. Louis Electric Railway Co. and the St. Louis Railway and Dock Co.

MUCH INTEREST IN AUCTION OF ALBERS PROPERTY

Choice Parcels of Real Estate to Be Sold Thursday at Real Estate Exchange.

The real estate holdings of C. H. Albers, deceased, will be closed out at auction at the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange Thursday next, beginning at 12 o'clock.

The list includes a wide choice of residence and investment properties, among them being the southwest corner of Fourteenth and Morgan streets, 1509 Chestnut street and 1108-32 North Sixth street. The Morgan, Chestnut and Sixth street holdings are exciting much interest. All have a speculative value which cannot be overlooked.

There have been a hundred inquiries as to the property since the sale was first announced in the advertising columns in the Post-Dispatch. In several instances attempts have been made to purchase certain of the holdings at private sale, the Chestnut and Sixth street holdings in particular. A. R. Schollmeyer, who arranged the sale and who will act as auctioneer, has declined to consider any of them. The indications are that the auction will be well attended and that the bidding will be spirited.

ZIEGLER-FRANKEL LEASES NEW STORE ROOM ON WASHINGTON

This is the second lease that the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co. has made for this company within the last few weeks, having leased to them the fourth floor of the building at the southwest corner of Fourteenth and Locust streets. The Ziegler-Frankel company will use this floor for manufacturing and will use the Washington avenue store room for offices and show rooms. The room is about 25x150. SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKETS

WALL STREET MEN OPPOSED 8-HOUR DAY, REED SAYS

Declares Financiers Kept Railroads From Granting Brotherhoods' Demands.

WILL DEMAND AN INQUIRY

Tells Missouri Crowd He Will Seek Investigation of Activity When Congress Meets.

By GEORGE W. EADS.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Oct. 14.—Senator James A. Reed, speaking in Convention Hall here tonight, declared that upon the reconvening of Congress in December he intended to introduce a resolution in the Senate authorizing an investigation to find out whether the railroad presidents, pending the negotiations at Washington, had not met and voted to yield an eight-hour day to the trainmen and had been forced to recall their action by pressure from Wall street.

Senator Reed said that it was generally believed in Washington that such action had been taken by the railroad presidents. He said that he was not in a position to prove it.

Senator Reed, before an audience that filled the hall, and also at a tent meeting at Monett this afternoon, discussed the Adamson law in detail, denying that the Railroad Brotherhoods resorted to force to procure its enactment, and that it was a wage increase law, instead of an eight-hour law.

Railroad Men for Wilson.

There are many railroad men both in Springfield and Monett, and according to members of the unions here, 90 per cent of them are going to vote for Wilson. Hughes made an effort to win their support by trying to convince them that the eight-hour law would be a bad thing for them, while Senator Reed tried to hold their support for the Democratic ticket by arguing that the eight-hour law was a benefit to them.

Rain at Monett and Springfield interfered with the attendance. There is also a street carnival on at Springfield. About 1500 heard Senator Reed at Monett, and 3000 at Springfield.

"Hughes charges that the administration law was procured by force, that the railroad brotherhoods came down to Washington and held pistols at the heads of Congress until it was passed," Senator Reed said.

"The truth about the matter is the railroad officials and the brotherhoods were fighting among themselves, and being unable to reach an agreement, and the President fearing that a strike would be called that would paralyze the business of the country and do a greater injury than an invasion by a foreign army, sent for both the railroad and brotherhood representatives. He asked them to come to Washington and settle their difficulties. There was no force in that.

Workers Are Satisfied.

"When he was unable to induce the railroad presidents to yield an eight-hour day, the brotherhoods being willing to submit to arbitration, every other proposition involved in the controversy, he appealed to Congress to establish an eight-hour law by legislation. Now Hughes says this is not an eight-hour law. The best evidence that it is an eight-hour law is that the boys who drive the engines think it is and that the men who turn the switches think it is. They are eminently satisfied with the law and so were the railroad brotherhoods.

"I want to give you railroad boys a slogan; the eight-hour day has come to stay. It will stay because it is right. The eight-hour day is a question of humanity on one side and cupidity on the other.

"Eight hours a day is long enough for any man to work on a railroad train because the work is hard.

"Hughes charges that it was cowardly for Congress to yield to force. Now when he make sthat charge he makes it against a majority of the Republicans of Congress, as well as the Democrats. At the head of that cowardly array of Republican Congressmen who surrendered to force was that old poltroon and coward, Uncle Joe Cannon.

"Nobody who knows Uncle Joe would ever question his courage. I have not agreed with much that he had done. But you could take his body and grind it into powder and blow it into space and every atom of it would fight with every other atom in the universe. He iis afraid of nothing in this world.

"The Republican members of the Senate could have defeated the Adamson law by talking it to death. They were asked to offer suggestions for avoiding the railroad strike, but they said they had none.

Republicans Could Have Killed Bill.

"They were perfectly willing for the Democrats to pass the bill. If they believed that it was a force bill, then they failed to do their duty by allowing it to pass. They could have killed it, just as they killed a proposed corrupt practice act, by threatening to talk it to death.

"A railroad strike in 30 days would have cost this country $5,000,000,000 and would have brought untold suffering into every home.

"President Wilson intervened in the interest of 90,000,000 people, who were not directly concerned in the quarrel between the railroads and their employes, but whose prosperity and happiness are dependent upon transportation."

With respect to the important legislation enacted by the present administration, Senator Reed charged that Hughes was an artful dodger, because nobody had ever yet been able to find out how he stood on the Federal Reserve Bank law, the rural credits law, the ship purchase bill, the nitrate bill, the Government railroad in Alaska, the child labor law or the working men's compensation act for Government employes.

He charged that Hughes was nominated by the standpatters of the Penrose-Crane-Smoot type, and that by neither act nor word had he shown any sympathy with any of the great progressive measures enacted.

In his Springfield speech Senator Reed replied to the argument made by Hughes that there would be an industrial disaster in this country at the close of the European war, unless a tariff wall was erected to keep out foreign-made goods.

Senator Reed asserted that the Federal Reserve Bank law had given such stability to the business of the country that it could easily meet any situation that might arise after the war. He told how, under the old financial system, the failure of a single Wall street banking firm precipitated panics, but how under the Federal reserve system a world war could not produce a panic in this country.

If the old system had been in existence when the war broke out there would have been widespread disaster, he said, when cotton values depreciated $500,000,000 in a single day, when England withdrew $48,000,000 of gold within a month, when foreign trade diminished $76,000,000 in 30 days and when America absorbed $3,500,000,000 of foreign-held securities in 21 months. With all this, he said, the new system withstood the great emergency. Sir George Paish, the foremost financial authority of England, declared, Senator Reed said, that the greatest miracle of the war was that the American Government was able to absorb this $3,500,000,000 of securities in 21 months without impairment of its financial system.

German Submarine Activities Cause Lower Range on the Week.

PEACE RUMORS DENIED

London Bankers Place No Credence in Reports of an Early End of War.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"Considering the unanimity of Wall street's assertion barely a week ago that absolutely nothing could be imagined which would stop the rise in prices, the subsequent events are an interesting sidelight on Stock Exchange predictions. It is not only that the occurrences which upset the market came from wholly unsuspected quarters; that is the quite invariable sequel to such prophecies.

"The fact which most impresses the mind on this occasion is the complete confusion into which the week's events have thrown the ideas of the speculators. One basis for the recent cocksureness of the market was its final conviction that no early move for peace was possible.

"The first thing that happened was the positive assurance from high banking quarters that exactly such a move was on the boards. When Wall street adjusted itself to the natural mood of skepticism over this report, and was pointing out the fact, that, at all events, our own relations to the European war favored uninterrupted American prosperity, the German navy took a hand and once more, as on so many previous occasions, created an awkward and perilous diplomatic situation. It was as if malignant chance were determined to upset the speculative arguments which had been classed as incontestable.

The Wall Street View.

"It is highly characteristic of the mental condition which exists in days of speculative extravagance, that the market should be affected only slightly less by apprehensions which were not fulfilled than by apprehensions which were realized. Wall Street has adopted the reasonable conclusion that somebody was badly deceived by a Berlin canard regarding the Kaiser's plan for mediation.

"Further particulars regarding Sunday's submarine exploit, have shown that it was done within the limits, however narrowly, of the German Government's pledges of last May. But all this did not alter the further fact, that the very considerations which jubilant Wall Street had declared were not among the possibilities, have become the talk of the day.

"In an emotional speculation, that is the sort of thing which always breaks the spell. The market of the present week has reflected, not a change in the situation, but the shattering of illusions.

"Review of the week's occurrences, in the light of common sense rather than Wall street psychology, leaves the conviction in most minds that there is nothing to the talk of mediation and that Germany's submarine achievement off Nantucket, represented in incident and not a policy. That the incident itself was of a piece with previous stupidity of that Government, in its judgment of diplomatic situations, is evident on its face. What situation would arise, imagining a fleet of German submarines to blockade the foreign commerce of New York, so far as that trade is carried under the flags of the allies, is doubtless another question.

The Recent Wild Trading.

"It is natural that such a possibility, whether remote or not, should be kept in the back of the financial brain. In so far as this aspect of the situation should have checked the disposition to 'discount,' without reservation or allowance, every favoring element in the American financial outlook, it is not without its value. There were more perils in the recent unbridled stock speculation than the danger of sudden decline in prices.

"By far the most mischievous aspect of it was the mood of reckless overconfidence which it was creating, at a moment when cool judgment of the economic future was the sole guarantee of financial safety.

"Whether the same useful purpose will be served by the attack of political speakers on prosperity; during the three remaining weeks of the presidential contest, is perhaps another matter. There seems to be no doubt that prosperity, as a campaign consideration, will have a troublesome experience. It is beginning to get the same kind of treatment as was allotted to free trade and sixteen-to-one silver in previous electoral years. This is one of the oddities of a very odd campaign.

"It might not have seemed an easy task to inspire hatred of prosperity, yet it is certainly true that one candidate is denouncing prosperity itself as "bloody", and that another is explaining on the stump that adversity will presently be the much more logical condition.

"Probably the financial community makes due allowance for the requirements of politics, especially in view of the old political tradition as to advantages, which a party in power at the moment may enjoy from actual good times. On the other hand, discussion of this sort may have an effect on the speculative mind which it could not have exerted with steel common at 120. If so, even politics may help to the very desirable spirit of financial conservatism."

U. S. TO PROTECT RIGHTS OF RAILWAY BUILDERS IN CHINA

Washington Not Yet Advised of Protests of Japan and Russia Against Contract.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—The Japanese and Russian protest against the Chinese contract with the American International Corporation for railroad building, announced in dispatches today, has not been officially reported to the State Department.

The American International Corporation as a private American firm obtained the contract through a loan to China entirely on its own account. As an American corporation, however, it will be entitled to the good offices of the Government in case it becomes evident that its rights are being actually violated.

The Russian protest alleges that the Chinese Minister in Petrograd promised verbally 18 years ago that Russia should have the privilege of building railways in the vicinity of Mongolia.

Japan protested against an agreement with American contractors for the reconstruction of 200 miles of the Grand Canal in Shanting Province. The Japanese claim, by reason of their conquest of Shantung, all the rights heretofore held by Germany in the development of that Chinese province.

$500 FINE FOR SPEEDING AGAINST BORCHERS UPHELD

Man Arrested 26 Times in Three Years Will Take an Appeal.

A fine of $500 assessed against Ernest Borchers, 23 years old, of 3619 Cass avenue, confirmed automobile speeder, by Police Judge Hogan June 28 last, was affirmed this morning by Judge Clark in the Court of Criminal Correction when a motion for a new trial was overruled. Borchers announced an appeal to the higher court and Judge Clark granted 60 days in which to file a bill of exceptions.

Borchers appealed the Police Court fine after testimony by Assistant Chief of Police Gillaspy, who caused his arrest, showed that on the night of June 27 Borchers had driven an automobile at excessive speed from Eighteenth and Locust streets west to Grand and Lindell avenues. At Grand and Lindell Borchers' car skidded and overturned. Gillaspy found Borchers, two other men and two women pinned underneath. None was badly hurt.

Borchers has been arrested 26 times since Aug. 21, 1913.

LONDON REVIEW.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—Our financial community does not take seriously the suggestion that last Sunday's submarine raid near New York harbor was preliminary to a German blockade of our commerce with you in English bottoms. The political view is merely that we have now had one more example of the crude and primitive character of German diplomacy. The city idea is summoned up in one of our newspaper cartoons, depicting Germany as sinking, but clutching Uncle Sam's hand with the cry, "You've got to pull me out, or I'll pull you in."

We recognize the fact that the approach of your election, with the large German-American population in your country, somewhat complicates the situation. But Mr. Wilson's tactics seem to us to have proved successful in freeing your Government, not only from complication in the war disputes, but from any embarrassment.

The Peace Rumors.

As it is, our people have never believed that Berlin would go to the length of provoking war with you, unless with the deliberate purpose of surrendering to overwhelming odds.

Your "peace rumors" do not incite interest here. The whole financial and military program of the allies is based on the assumption that peace is not even in sight. Duration of the war will be governed by our position that the campaign must be prolonged until the ends of international justice are secured.

The reported desire for peace by Germany's people does not encourage belief in the early end of war; nor does the new chorus of hate to England evoke any response in kind. England's point of view is exactly voiced by Asquith's speech dismissing all idea of vindictiveness, but expressing absolute determination to continue the conflict until it can be ended rightly. Germany's own rehabilitation among other nations depends entirely on herself.

The Control of Wheat.

Our Government's action in assuming control of the wheat trade is clearly designed to prevent the possibility of a shortage here. It is likely to achieve its purpose, but the actual effect on prices will probably be slight.

It is not believed that any fresh collateral loan by our Government in your market is immediately impending, but it will come later. You have abundant power to respond without straining capital resources, because the orders of the Allies in your markets will be enormous in the future, as in the past.

An interesting fact is that your huge gold imports and easy money, along with our own high money rates, have already occasioned considerable transfer of loanable funds from New York to London.

While the old Consols have been falling, the war loan has risen a point or more. Both movements were due to the Chancellor of the Exchequer's statement regarding rights attaching to the war loan, and exercisable when the next long-dated war loan is issued.

COTTON MARKET AGAIN SELLS AT A NEW RECORD LEVEL

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 11 to 15 points today, with January and later months making new high records for the season, on rather aggressive support from recent prominent buyers.

There was heavy realizing around 17.70c for December and 17.65 for January, however, with prices later showing reactions of several points from the best.

The census figures on supply and distribution showing domestic consumption for September of 529,227 bales lint and 61,719 bales linters indicated a slight falling off as compared with August, but seemed to attract no special attention and a good part of the early trading was attributed to evening up for over the week end. Dec. sold off to 17.51c and Jan. to 17.48c before the end of the first hour.

Later fluctuations were irregular, with the close steady, net one point lower to four points higher, December being relatively easy.

Cotton—Spot, quiet; middling upland, 17.55c. No sales.

Missouri Corn Crop Estimated at 146,000,000 Bu.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 14.—The corn yield in Missouri this year will be 146,000,000 bushels, according to the monthly crop report of the State Department of Agriculture, made public here today. The condition of the corn is given at 64.8 per cent, with 88 per cent safe from killing frost. The condition given on Sept. 1, was 53.4, and fears were expressed concerning possible frost damage. Little corn has been cribbed, it was announced. The acreage of wheat for the 1917 harvest was placed at 1,700,000, an increase of about 100,000 over the Sept. 1 indication. This, however, is 12 per cent less than that seeded for the 1916 harvest. The Hessian fly is said to be active in early sown wheat in counties south of the Missouri River while, owing to a lack of rain, the ground is hard and a vast amount of work is necessary to get it in shape for seeding.

Submarine hostilities took first place in the attention of the wheat trade, and caused prices last week to average decidedly lower. However, all but about 1¼c of the severe decline which took place on Monday was wiped out when the market closed yesterday.

Before the U-53 began her exploits on this side of the Atlantic, wheat prices were plainly on the upgrade. Peace rumors had been denied and the Argentine drouth was growing worse and worse from day to day. All this was temporarily forgotten when dealers were suddenly confronted by news of wholesale destruction of shipping, and by the prospect that more work of the same character would follow.

Just 4¾c a bushel was clipped from the value of wheat in the flurry which ensued, but the recovery from the shock of the unprecedented happening off Nantucket, began almost at once and was interrupted to a serious extent only once afterward, when dealers were for a time bewildered by announcement that Great Britain had purchased the huge amount of 18,500,000 bushels of wheat in Australia, and would send steamships to the Antipodes to provide transport for the grain.

The British Purchase.

Misunderstandings of the purpose of the British Government were not well cleared up until Friday, when word came from presumably good authority in Winnipeg that the idea of the immense purchase in Australia was to build up big reserves of wheat in Great Britain, where the Government had taken over the entire business of the importation of wheat, but with no intent of stopping the acquirement of supplies in the United States and Canada.

On the contrary, it was added that current needs of Western Europe would continue to be filled chiefly from North America.

Price changes in coarse grains were relatively small, corn gaining a little and oats falling off. Trade was entirely professional.

At the moment the wheat market has drifted into a waiting position. There is no shortage of supplies in sight in any important country, but the trade figures that the stocks to come forward are materially less than last year, and that the end of the crop year will see reserves reduced to such a material extent that $2 wheat will not be an unreasonably high figure. This, of course, the bulls say, depends on the continuation of the war throughout the winter and spring, and precludes the opening of the Dardanelles to Russian shipments, where the surplus of two crops, and soon the surplus of a third, have been cut off from Europe.

Canadian Supplies Large.

That England will take all her wheat from her own territories before buying regardless of price in American markets, was demonstrated in the action of her Government the past week, when 18,500,000 bushels of Australian wheat was purchased. Canadian supplies still can be taken in the same way, and stocks of old wheat in the Dominion are said to be large.

Should it ultimately be found that the European nations can refrain from buying heavily of American wheat until later in the winter, the trade may find itself facing unusually heavy supplies and no market in sight to work them off, as is expected by all speculators and cash grain dealers.

Last year the old maxim, "never sell the tail end of a big crop," held good; and this spring it will be interesting to observe if the reverse maxim, "never buy the tail end of a small crop" holds good. There may be "many a slip twixt the cup and the lip" for $2 wheat bulls, before England and her allies find they have to pay holdup prices for their supplies of American wheat before the next crop comes in.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

Cash wheat was unchanged to slightly lower.

Cash corn was steady to ½c up and in good demand.

Cash oats steady, with a light local feeding demand.

INCREASED CATTLE RECEIPTS CAUSE LOWER MARKET

Week's Price Range Shows Cheaper Drift; Hog Prices Slightly Higher.

Reported for the Post-Dispatch by the National Live Stock Commission Company, National Stock Yards, Ill.

Comparative Receipts:

	This Wk.	Last Wk.	Last Yr.
Cattle	41,000	31,000	37,000
Hogs	43,100	47,200	39,000
Sheep	12,100	13,500	12,000

An increase of 10,000 head of cattle last week was sufficient reason to eliminate the activity that prevailed in the market the previous week, and the result was a general downward scale of prices on a big share of the receipts, which comprised of stockers, feeders, common to medium beef steers and medium grades of butcher cattle.

The demand, however, showed extremes, but was governed to a large extent by scarcity of an over-abundance of the various gardes. For instance, choice to prime beef steers and fancy butcher cattle were conspicuous by their scarceness, and transactions of these sorts scored a full steady level with the market of a week before. The other extreme was for low-priced killing stuff, such as canners and cutter-cows.

On the other hand, common to medium beef steers, all classes of stocker stuff, killing cows and the medium grades of butcher cattle declined fully 25c per cwt., and as the week drew near to its close the market was particularly slow and offerings hard to move at the prices.

While there is still a fairly good crop of cattle to be marketed from native territory for 30 days at least, there is one factor in the influx of receipts that if totally absent from market conditions; it will at least be partially eliminated from now on, and this is the competition of the Western grass stock, which has been virtually cleaned up for this season.

Western stuff exerts considerable influence upon the native market and since that source of supply will soon be a thing of the past, there will, in all probability, be a much stronger movement for native stuff, and the prospect is more encouraging that the market will, at least, in the course of the next week or two, reflect some improvement in value.

Cattle Quotations.

Choice beef steers, fancy butcher stuff, canners and cutters closed steady for the week. Common to medium beeves, stockers, feeders and medium butcher cattle, 15c to 25 lower. Choice to prime steers, $10 to $11.15; good to choice, $8.75 to $10; medium to good, $7.35 to $8.60; common to medium, $6 to $7.25; off-colored light grass steers, at $5 to $6. Good to choice stockers and feeders, $6.40 to $7; medium to good, $5.90 to $6.40; common to medium, $4.85 to $5.90. Good to choice stock cows, $5 to $5.50; common to fair, $4.75 to $5; good to choice light stock heifers, $6 to $6.50. Choice to prime yearlings, $9 to $10.50; good to choice, $8 to $9; medium to good, $6.50 to $8; common to medium, $5.50 to $6.50. Choice to fancy heavy beef cows, $7 to $7.50; good to choice, $6.25 to $6.75; medium to good, $5.50 to $6.25; light-fleshed, $5 to $5.25; cutters, $4.65 to $5; canners, $4.35 to $4.50. Good fat beef bulls, $6.50 to $7; heavy sausage bulls, $5.50 to $6; light sausage bulls, $4.75 to $5.25.

After the sharp depression in hog values week before last, it was but natural to expect that the country would refrain from liberal liquidation, which proved true, and this change was a godsend to the trade during the past week, the market showing a rapid recovery, reaching a basis of $10.50 on Friday for weighty hogs and others in proportion, a price basis that averaged fully 25c to 40c per hundred higher than the week before. Yesterday's market, however, due more to the influx of a heavy Saturday run rather than a lack of inquiry for product, was the chief factor in breaking the market for good weight hogs fully 25c per hundred, while the pigs and rough hogs slumped 10c to 15c per hundred. At the close of the week there was recorded a 10c advance during the entire period.

Quality and fat, plus weight, especially the latter, are the essential factors in this trade. But the large end of the receipts are running to lights and mixed hogs, and that they have been at a premium is not the least surprising under the circumstances.

It looks more logical to expect a weakness in the hog trade than otherwise, for with the killers in the packing season, it is a matter of record, as former years will show, that for the time being hog values always settle.

Yesterday's top market was $10.20; choice hogs weighing 180 lbs. upward selling at $9.90 to $10.20; mixed hogs 150 to 190 lbs., $9.40 to $9.75; 120 to 140 lbs., $8.75 to $9.25; light pigs, $7 to $8.75; best rough hogs, $9 to $9.25; half-fat rough hogs, $7.50 to $8.50.

A generous inquiry for fat sheep and lambs and their relative scarcity toned the trade up to considerable extent during the past week. Fat sheep and lambs made a general average advance of 25c to 50c per cwt. In-between sheep and lambs, however, did not show any great improvement, although they did sell some better. A large share of the receipts mentioned were goats, and in these classes the worse feature of the market developed. Prices for all kinds averaged 50c to 75c lower during the seven-day interval.

Choice lambs were quoted at $10.25 to $10.50; medium and half-fat lambs, $8.50 to $10; best culls, $7.50 to $8; skippy culls, $5.50 to $7; fat sheep, $7 to $7.55; choppers and bucks $5.50; canners $3 to $4. Choice Angora goats $4.50 to $5.50; choice Angora kids, $5.50 to $6.50; fat straight haired goats, $4 to $4.50; fat straight haired kids, $4.50 to $5; canners, $2.50 to $3.50.

Two Triumphs Told Tersely

On Thursday, of last week, the Post-Dispatch alone, carried more local merchants' advertising than the Globe-Democrat, Republic, Times and Star all added together.

On the very next day, Friday, the Post-Dispatch again carried more local merchants' advertising than all 4 of its competitors, the Globe-Democrat, Republic, Times and Star, added together. And we were obliged to omit OVER 5 COLUMNS of business for want of room to carry it.

HERE ARE THE TABLES:

Thursday, Oct. 12

POST-DISPATCH, alone..........116 Cols.
Globe-Democrat, Republic, Times and Star, all 4 combined..........99 Cols.
The Post-Dispatch alone exceeded all 4 (its entire competition) added together..........17 Cols.

Friday, Oct. 13

POST-DISPATCH, alone..........111 Cols.
Globe-Democrat, Republic, Times and Star, all 4 combined..........109 Cols.
The Post-Dispatch alone, exceeded all 4..........2 Cols.

☛ There is, and can be but one reason WHY the St. Louis merchants buy more space in the Post-Dispatch alone than all 4 of the other papers combined—and that reason is the big ☚

Huge Dividends Paid by Tire Manufacturers

Tire Manufacturers Are Making Tremendous Profits for Investors. To-day the Tire Manufacturing Industry is Established on Permanent Lines and is Paying Bigger Profits Than Ever Before.

$100 Grows to $12,900!

It is true that some large profits have been made on the stock exchange during the past few months, but much larger profits have been made by those who had the foresight and courage to get in on the ground floor with some newly organized company and purchase the stock when it was first put out and the company being established.

In a recent publication National Rubber stated that $100 invested in the original stock of the Goodyear Company has grown to $12,900. This is but one instance of vast profits from tires as you will see by the next column!

Millions upon millions have been made in the rubber tire industry and yet it is believed it is still in its infancy. Practically all of the motor tire companies are building additions to their plants, installing more machinery and enlarging their existing facilities in an endeavor to keep pace with the enormously increasing demand for tires and still more tires!

Motor tires are like shoes, they are continually wearing out. It has been estimated that the manufacture of tires and tubes provides an annual profit to tire company shareholders of approximately $200,000,000. Fifteen years ago the motor tire industry was almost unknown. To-day there are single factories turning out tires at the rate of 4,200,000 per year.

The names of Goodyear, Firestone, Fisk, Goodrich and others stand out as kings of the rubber tire industry. What these men have done for their original stockholders I believe Mr. Milton Bejach, President of the Alliance Tire & Rubber Company, Inc., can do for those who join him now and co-operate with him to make the Alliance Tire & Rubber Company, Inc., one of the big motor tire companies of America.

Automobiles and motor trucks cannot be operated without tires. For every automobile four tires are required to equip it before it leaves the factory and it will use from six to ten tires every year it runs. Millions of automobiles mean still more millions of tires. I believe the motor tire industry has been overlooked by the investing public of America. Opportunities to participate in big rubber tire dividends are very few and far between. Alliance Tire & Rubber offers you such an opportunity.

I specialize in the securities of motor and accessory companies. Regardless of the merit of other motor accessory securities, I recommend the purchase of Alliance Rubber & Tire securities to-day.

My statistical department has prepared some interesting facts and figures regarding the rubber tire industry in general. In addition, every week I publish a market letter dealing with motor securities and rubber tire investments. Every week you will find data of great interest.

I urge immediate purchase of Alliance common stock at $5.00 per share, before trading begins on New York curb, when I expect prices to advance, and advance rapidly!

Sign and mail the coupon below today and this market letter, together with other information will be forwarded to you at once.

Plain Facts—Simply Stated!

1. The Alliance is a going, profitable, operating company.
2. The same management that has made it successful and profitable continues its money-making policies.
3. The Alliance owns its own fine factory and ample acreage for future expansion.
4. The rate of profit on sales has been about 40%.
5. The rate of profit on outstanding capitalization has reached the remarkable figure of 68%.
6. President Bejach's estimate of $1,875,000 gross business per year should be largely increased with the new capital and added facilities at the company's disposal.
7. Increased business means decreased cost of production with consequent increase in percentage of profits.
8. The company already has its product distributed through accredited wholesale dealers covering the country from coast to coast, supplying hundreds of retailers.
9. President Bejach reports $500,000 of business refused in six months this year because his factory was already crowded to capacity.
10. The Alliance factory has been working 22 hours a day to try to catch up with its orders.
11. Banks and business men of Ohio unanimously recommend Mr. Bejach and his associates for business ability and absolute integrity.

Mr. Carl A. Ewald, Assistant Superintendent; formerly with Lee, Goodrich, Miller, and other rubber tire manufacturers.

The books of The Alliance Tire & Rubber Co., Inc., will be audited regularly by a Certified Public Accountant.

The Alliance Tire & Rubber Company, Inc., has acquired the entire undertaking of the Alliance Rubber Company of Alliance, Ohio, a company organized in 1913 for the manufacture of automobile tires and rubber goods.

Alliance Rubber Company has been operating at a substantial profit, as shown by a statement audited by Frederick W. Throssell, Certified Public Accountant of Cleveland, Ohio, whereby a net profit was made slightly in excess of 40%. This profit was arrived at after full allowance had been made for administration and overhead charges and for reasonable depreciation.

This success has been largely due to the management of Mr. Milton Bejach, now president and general manager, who during a long experience in management and selling, perfected many important and valuable short-cuts in manufacturing and salesmanship. The cashier of the Alliance Bank Co. speaks of Mr. Bejach as follows:

Alliance, Ohio, July 24, 1916.

Mr. Warren C. Daniel,
220 West 42nd Street, New York.

Dear Sir:—

With reference to the Alliance Rubber Company, of this city, this bank has handled the banking account of the company mentioned since its inception and has found it satisfactory.

We have made loans to the Alliance Rubber Company from time to time as their business needs required, having had faith in the business and the directors of the company, all of whom have been successful men and well known in the community for their integrity.

We have known Mr. Bejach, Vice-President and General Manager of the company, ever since his connection in an official capacity with the McCaskey Register Company of this city and through his connection with this company. He is in our opinion thoroughly capable, honest, and endowed with excellent business qualifications. It is generally conceded that Mr. Bejach is exceptionally strong in salesmanship ability. We heartily commend him to you.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) H. F. BORRECKER, Cashier.

One of the best things Mr. Bejach ever did for Alliance was when he secured the services and marvelous ingenuity of the famous chemist and world-renowned wizard of the rubber industry, Dr. Louis de Holczer, chief chemist of the Alliance Tire & Rubber Co. Dr. De Holczer has spent a lifetime studying the rubber industry. Much of the credit for the enormous success of the Polak Rubber Company of Austria and Germany was due to Dr. De Holczer's brain work. From Europe he came to America to help develop the technical and chemical end of the Firestone Rubber Company, producing an excellent product which made possible their enormous profits. Mr. Bejach, realizing that much of the success of the Firestone Co. was a direct result of Dr. De Holczer's unusual ability, immediately set out to secure Dr. De Holczer's services. The result speaks for Mr. Bejach's extraordinary judgment. Dr. De Holczer, during his association with Alliance, has originated and perfected over 200 private trade formulae and processes, increasing the quality of Alliance tires to the highest point known to the industry, and reducing costs so as to make possible the remarkable profit of 40% on sales. The value of these private processes should easily run into the millions.

A careful analysis of cost and selling prices of Alliance tires, allowing for all overhead charges and depreciation, shows, as Mr. Bejach states, a profit of $562,500 on annual sales of $1,875,000—this is a conservative figure based on 30% net profit; and with the new capitalization and factory facilities this volume of business can be very greatly increased. Says Mr. Bejach: "My purpose in coming to New York is to arrange for financing in sufficient volume to take care of such business as comes to us in excess of our ability to handle it under our present capitalization. Since Jan. 1, 1916, it has been my painful duty to decline business amounting to approximately $500,000. This business was declined because we were unable to finance it. We are manufacturing a high-grade pneumatic automobile tire, one which meets with favor wherever it is introduced, and our distribution covers the country fairly well. We have distributing centres in Boston, Mass., Providence, R. I., Mineola, L. I., for New York City, Ithaca, N. Y., Cleveland, Ohio, Cincinnati, Ohio, Louisville, Ky., Chicago, Ill., Atlanta, Ga., Baltimore, Md., Wichita, Kans., Omaha, Neb., Seattle, Wash., San Francisco, Cal., and Los Angeles, Cal. From these distributing centres we serve dealers in hundreds of smaller communities.

"Basing anticipated profits on the result shown from April 31st, 1915, to May 31st, 1916, Alliance Tire and Rubber Company's profits on $1,875,000 worth of business per year should be $562,500 per year after making every possible allowance for all charges, including depreciation.

"This would take care of the 7% dividend on $1,000,000 of preferred stock, requiring $70,000, leaving $492,500. Distributed as follows, this would provide for a participation in surplus profits to the extent of 20% for the preferred stockholders, requiring $[illegible], and a 30% dividend to common stockholders, of $[illegible]. This would permit of retiring for surplus the sum of $94,000 annually."

The enormous profits in the tire business, while recognized in some circles, seem to have escaped the notice of the general investing public. Take, for instance, the remarkable record of one of the smaller companies. The McGraw Rubber Company, organized in 1909, made a profit in 1911 of $49,000. Three years later this had increased to the enormous total of $594,000. An increase in profit of 1,100% in three short years. There is no reason in the world why the Alliance Company cannot do just as well as this, and possibly better. Every feature that bids for success is present in the Alliance Tire & Rubber proposition. Every one whom I have talked with is enthusiastic over it.

Mr. Milton Bejach's estimate of 20% dividend for the common stock should make that stock worth $25.00 a share before very long. I predict an extraordinarily active market for this stock and a big rush to secure it. I want to impress upon you with all the power at my command to buy Alliance common stock to-day. Buy all you can. Buy a hundred shares if you can, or a thousand shares. If you cannot finance that, buy five shares. I will accept your order for any amount that you want, but don't delay.

If you require further information, fill out the coupon on the left. I will then mail you an illustrated folder, prepared by my statistical department, giving interesting facts and figures regarding the rubber tire industry, together with facts and figures regarding the past, present, and estimated future operation of the company. The folder is fully illustrated, giving the exterior and interior of the factory, photographs of the executive officers, and reproduction of letters from leading financial institutions.

I own and offer for sale only a very limited block of the pre-organization promotion common stock at $5.00 per share. The par value is $10.00 per share, and the stock is fully paid and non-assessable. If you will mail me your remittance promptly you can buy any number of shares from 3 to 1,000 at $5.00 per share. Just fill out the coupon below and attach your check, bank draft or money order for the number of shares you want. If you send currency be sure to register the letter. Certificate of stock in your name will go forward to you by registered mail just as quickly as possible. I believe that within the next few weeks you will see this stock selling at twice the present price. Immediate action is necessary, however, if you desire to obtain any of the stock at this very low figure. I cannot guarantee to fill your order at this $5.00 price unless I hear from you immediately.

Fill Out and Mail To-day.

2509 Candler Building,

NEWS AND FEATURES OF THE POULTRY WORLD

HEAVY POULTRY LOSSES IN UNWISE MARKETING

Authority Points Out Why Broilers Should Be Put on Market in May and June.

Millions of dollars are lost annually on farms throughout the West because farmers do not realize the necessity for selling their fat young birds at a time when they bring 30 to 35 cents a pound. This statement is made by G. C Bowman, president of the Seymour Packing Co. of Topeka, Kan., which fattens and slaughters annually more than 3,000,000 chickens.

Instead of marketing broilers in May and June, when the highest prices prevail, the average farmer holds his birds till late fall, trying to make them weigh four or five pounds, said Bowman. They do not realize that these two or three additional pounds are usually made at a loss, since in late fall birds rarely command more than 10 to 15 cents a pound. The average farmer scatters grain lavishly as long as he has it, and the birds "eat their heads off." This is not a scientific poultry production, neither is it common business sense.

Another of the mistakes made by farmers in general is to raise a mixed lot of chickens in which nondescripts predominate, and turn them loose on the market at a time when every other farmer is sending his to market. This is one of the chief reasons why the price drops so badly in the fall. The market wants birds with white or light plumage. Black-feathered chickens or birds with feathers on their legs and feet are undesirable Birds of black or dark plumage have dark-colored pin feathers which give the bird a bluish appearance of skin and lower prices. The same objection is voiced against birds with black or bluish feet, as they do not dress so attractively. However, there is no prejudice against White or Buff Orpingtons as far as the Seymour Packing Co. is concerned, in spite of their pinkish white legs.

The poorest price is always paid for the mixed lots of chickens containing birds of every breed, age and color. The highest prices are paid for birds of one breed and of uniform size, age and weight. The attractiveness of the consignment has much to do with the sale price. There is likely to be as much as 10 or 12 cents a pound difference at the time of highest market value for different shipments. The chief varieties for which the market always pays the highest prices are White and Barred Plymouth Rocks, White and Buff Wyandottes, and White and Buff Orpingtons.

Small birds, such as the Leghorns and Minorcas, no matter what their egg-production, cannot be marketed as profitably since they lack weight, which is the basis of reckoning in the dressed poultry industry.

Matured birds are sold for roasters. They must weigh an average of 42 pounds and upwards to the dozen, dressed. There are three sizes in this class, differing slightly in different sections.

Fryers should weigh from 30 to 42 pounds a dozen, dressed, two sizes being generally considered. This is the great export bird, of which millions of pounds have been shipped abroad annually.

Broilers, to command highest prices, should weigh about two pounds live weight. In May and June, 30 to 35 cents a pound is an average price for this class of birds. In July, the price usually drops to 20 cents, showing the necessity for putting the finished broiler on the market at the proper time or lose the profit.

Mature fowls, to command highest prices, should weigh about five pounds. They are usually marketed after they have finished laying in the fall. Fowls of five pounds usually command at least 2 to 4 cents a pound more than a bird weighing only three pounds. The fat, plump, white-skinned and yellow-legged bird commands the highest prices.

The hen that is warm and busy is in the best laying trim in cold weather.

Cock of Grand Champion Pen at Tri-State Fair Is From Missouri Flock

Adding to his triumph at the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, Dr. L. D. Le Gear of Kirkwood, St. Louis County, made an almost clean sweep of the distinctions offered for White Plymouth Rocks at the Tri-State Fair at Memphis, Tenn., during the week of Sept. 25 to 30. His exhibit won nearly all the grand champion sweepstakes prizes, also nearly all the prizes, ribbons, medals, honors, diplomas and silver cups in the White Plymouth Rock class.

There were 250 White Plymouth Rocks in the show, and 3000 birds altogether. Dr. Le Gear's birds won, in the White Plymouth Rock class: First, second and third cock; first and second old pen, second young pen, and the silver cup offered by the president of the show for the best Plymouth Rock pen. In the general sweepstakes competion, all breeds and varieties competing, the Le Gear exhibit won the grand champion pen, grand champion cock, grand champion pullet and the grand prize of the whole show, the beautiful silver cup offered by the officers and directors for the best shaped individual bird on exhibition. The latter distinction was captured by his first prize hen.

Why hens never lay half an egg!

The usual method of feeding mostly grain, makes yolks but not enough whites to complete the eggs. As the hen cannot lay these half-made eggs, she absorbs them back into her system. Missouri Experiment Station tests showed that 100 lbs. of wheat, corn, oats, barley and kaffir corn make (above bodily maintenance) an average of 224 yolks but only 154 whites. Based on data from the same experiments, Purina formulas produce, (above bodily maintenance) as follows:

Purina Scratch Feed 247.49 yolks 142.11 whites
Purina Chicken Chowder 182.05 " 282.55 "
Combined Ration 429.54 yolks 424.66 whites

Note the perfect balance of yolks and whites and the large number of each. This combination of Purina Feeds makes the maximum number of complete eggs, eggs a hen will lay. That's why we can absolutely guarantee

PARKER APPEALS TO PROGRESSIVES TO AID WILSON

Moose Candidate for Vice President Tells New Yorkers Why He Supports President.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—With a plea for the re-election of President Wilson, John M. Parker, Progressive candidate for Vice President, delivered an address here today at a reception given him by members of the National Progressive party, in which he dwelt somewhat at length on the part taken by Theodore Roosevelt and George W. Perkins, in the efforts to get the Progressive and Republican conventions in Chicago last June to unite on a presidential candidate.

Parker quoted Col. Roosevelt as saying in 1912 that "I am for this cause to fight to the end * * * while life lasts," and that "I will never abandon the principles to which we Progressives have pledged ourselves, and I will never abandon the men and women who drew around me to battle for these principles."

He also quoted George W. Perkins as stating he was opposed to returning to the Republican party because it had been "more reactionary than ever."

"The statement of our leader," Parker continued, "and the concurrence of the chairman of our Executive Committee were accepted at par by a trusting body of men and women, who implicitly believed in our leaders. The tragedy of the great gathering at Chicago from June 7 to June 10, inclusive, is a matter of history."

"I am not a Democrat," Parker said, "but I believe the thanks of this nation are due to Woodrow Wilson for what he has accomplished in the shape of progressive legislation that has brought untold millions, happiness and prosperity to our people."

He urged every Progressive to vote their ticket in states where they had one.

"And in those states where we have been betrayed by former leaders and by those who weakly carry out their orders," he said, "I appeal to every thinking man and woman interested in the material welfare of our country, devoted to their family and their future, to vote their honest convictions and support Woodrow Wilson for President of the United States."

HARVARD MAN, SERGEANT IN ALLIED AERO CORPS, IS WOUNDED

Norman Prince, Who Gave Up Law Practice to Enlist, Suffers Fracture of Both Legs.

PARIS, Oct. 13.—Norman Prince of Boston, Sergeant-Major in the Franco-American Aviation Corps, who was decorated for distinguished service last week, has been wounded. Both Prince's legs are broken, but he is reported to be in no danger of death.

Norman Prince is a Harvard graduate who gave up a law practice in Chicago to volunteer for service with the allies. He was decorated in October, 1915, for destroying a German warplane. His machine was shot down in an aerial battle over Verdun last June, but he escaped without injury and was reported recently to have brought down two aeroplanes in Alsace.

Two Americans in the Franco-American flying corps have been killed recently. Corporal Victor Chapman of New York met death in an air fight with a German on the Verdun front June 24, and three months later Kiffin Yates Rockwell of North Carolina also was killed while fighting a German aircraft on the western front.

Asks Police to Find Husband.

Mrs. Lena Shomaker of 5807 Cote Brilliante avenue has asked the police to look for her husband, John Shomaker, who has been missing since Sept. 24. She says that possession of the flat has been demanded and that unless her husband is found her three children will have to be placed in an orphan home. The children, she says, plead not to be separated from her.

TROOPS IN MEXICO KEPT BUSY BY 'FIRE CONTROL' DRILLS

Particular Attention Given to the Cavalry Regiments in Expedition.

FIELD HEADQUARTERS, American Expedition in Mexico, Oct. 14.—"Fire control" drills, which, in a month's time have increased the effectiveness of cavalry regiments' fire 100 per cent, are important factors in the field maneuvers being held by the American expedition.

Far from being a period of stagnation for the expeditionary troops, the hiatus during the last few months in the pursuit of Villa has been of almost inestimable benefit to them, particularly to the mounted arm. It has given commanding officers opportunities to handle larger bodies of men under conditions more nearly akin to those of war than have obtained at any time since in the past 50 years.

The maneuvers, which are varied, progressive and in accordance with well-defined plans, include such simple exercises as horse training, and ascend to solving of warfare problems that involve the handling of brigades. Fire control, although classed among the elementary exercises, is virtually new to the cavalry, although the infantry has been working on it for several years.

Officers Study Pamphlets.

Pamphlets issued by the School of Musketry Fire at Ft. Sill, Ok., have been furnished commanding officers, and problems they contain in skeleton form are amplified and worked out. Exercises suggested in these pamphlets also are being tried out and suggestions for improvement, resulting from actual practice, are being noted.

Recommendations by regimental officers are being studied by Gen. J. J. Pershing and his Chief of Staff, Col. De R. C. Cabell, and those considered worth while are being incorporated in tentative manuals.

Studying developments of the European war, and realizing that, under modern conditions of warfare, cavalry does most of its fighting on foot, commanders of that arm of the service are giving their troops a great deal of dismounted work, paying particular attention to attack.

In this connection it is noticeable that the ringing bugle no longer sounds the charge, for every maneuver is made by signal. Save for the tramp of hoofs and the leather-softened rattle of equipment, troop movements are made silently, not a voice being raised in command.

When a problem, prepared by the commanding General or his staff, is given out, an observer accompanies each of the opposing leaders and an umpire watches the operations. After each mimic combat, a critique is held. Tactical errors observed are pointed out and suggestions made relative to better maneuvers that might have been employed.

Four Cavalry Regiments.

Full advantage is being taken of the fact that there are four regiments of cavalry at headquarters camp, a circumstance without parallel in army annals for years. All the regiments being used, it also is observed, are being maneuvered at full war strength, as provided under the new army reorganization bill. This affords the first opportunity American commanders have had of handling troops of this size in maneuver.

The war game will reach a climax when the maneuvers progress to the point where every fighting man available will be marched against an imaginary enemy under conditions that almost approximate real war.

Drilled from six to eight hours a day and performing duties which, if not carried out, might turn a healthy camp into a dangerous one, the expedition, thus far has not stagnated.

195 Deaths Last Week.

Three deaths from diphtheria and one from scarlatina were in the total of 195 reported for the week ending yesterday. Pneumonia was responsible for nine per cent of the mortality. Twenty persons died of nephritis, 13 of heart disease and 10 of stomach disorders. There were four suicides and two homicides. Births for the week were 291.

LABORER ENDS LIFE IN PARK

Acid Bottle Found by Side of August Feibig.

A man who ended his life in O'Fallon Park about 10 o'clock yesterday morning by swallowing carbolic acid was identified by relatives at the morgue later in the day as August Fletig, a laborer, of 2231 North Market street.

Fiebig was seen to fall near the boathouse on the north side of the lake in the park by Parkkeeper Henry R. Stocke and when the latter reached his side he was unconscious. He died before an ambulance could be summoned. Near him lay a bottle which had contained acid.

In Memoriam.

In memory of my dear brother, John Frost, who died Oct. 13, 1915.

Just one year ago you left us,
How we miss you, Johnnie dear,
You are gone, but not forgotten,
By those who loved you dear.

Sadly missed by
SISTER, BROTHER-IN-LAW AND COUSINS.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of George L. Sheridan, beloved son and brother, who died Oct. 16, 1914.

The evening shades have vanished
And the night was still;
God sent His blessed angels
To do His holy will.

Rest in peace, dear George. Sadly missed by his MOTHER, SISTERS AND LITTLE NEPHEW.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of dear wife and mother, Carolina Berlemann, who passed away one year ago, Oct. 15, 1915.

The month of October again is here,
To us the saddest of all the year;
It took upon the fifteenth day
Our darling mother from us away.

A precious one from us has gone,
The voice we loved is still,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.

Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND CHILDREN. (c)

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear father, father-in-law and grandfather, Frank Sicking, who departed from us Oct. 14, 1915.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our house
Which never can be filled.

You are gone, but not forgotten,
Your memory shall never fade,
Our lonely hearts shall always linger
Where our dear good father's laid.

Sadly missed by his daughter.
MRS. A. DIEBLING AND HUSBAND. (c)

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of my dear wife and our dear mother, Bernhardine Hamburger, who was called away one year ago, Oct. 12, 1915.

Just one year ago today
Since my dear wife and our mother passed away.
We saw her suffer, heard her sighs,
With aching hearts and weeping eyes;
We saw her sinking, hour by hour,
Yet could not stay death's awful power.
But now she calmly sleeps at last,
All pains, all aches, all suffering past.

Sadly missed by
HUSBAND, DAUGHTER AND SONS.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our beloved father, Ernest A. Lindemann, who was suddenly called away seven months ago today, March 17, 1916.

The depths of our sorrow we cannot tell
At the loss of our father, we loved
so well;
And while he sleeps in peaceful sleep
His memory we shall always keep.

Day by day we sadly miss him,
You may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the grief
That's within our hearts concealed.

He shall never be forgotten,
Never from our memory fade,
Loving hearts will always linger
Around the grave where he is laid.

Sadly missed by
WIFE, DAUGHTER AND SONS. (c)

FIVE SALESMEN.

Only men under 30 who can recognize the possibilities of a successful future when presented to them and are not working for a "proposition," but realize that if they want a good position they have to earn one.

This opportunity will not appeal to the man that talks "big money," who is always broke and looking for some new line.

It will only appeal to the man who realizes the time has come whereby he must get settled in business and is willing to work for a permanent future.

The men we want need have no experience in selling. We take care of that by personal instructions. We will place at their command a practical, tested and successful plan of salesmanship which will enable them to win success from the first.

This is the early stage of our sales organization and a big life-size, man-size chance to affiliate with one of the country's greatest business institutions.

A NEW CITY!!

SOUTH-WOODRIVER

BY THE BIG NEW $5,000,000.00 TANNERY

The big sale of business and residence lots is now on. Make your reservations at once. You have never had such a chance before. Don't miss it.

South Woodriver Townsite comprises a charming green meadow lying directly across the Electric Car Line in front of the Big Tannery. It fronts half a mile on the car line and half a mile on the main auto road from St. Louis to Alton. South Woodriver Townsite includes all the available business or residence lots near the new Tannery and has 5-cent car fare to all the other big factories in the Woodriver District. It is two blocks from deep water in the Mississippi River, which gives perfect outlet for sewerage, and yet all lots are far above danger of overflow from the highest water ever known.

South Woodriver is four blocks from the gate of the great Standard Oil Refinery, which has six pipe lines from Oklahoma, and is now connecting more lines under the Mississippi. It is a mile and half from the Western Cartridge Works, where 4000 people work.

THE WONDERFUL WOODRIVER DISTRICT

IS BECOMING WORLD-FAMOUS AS AN INDUSTRIAL CENTER

THE BIG TANNERY AT SOUTH-WOODRIVER

now rapidly building, will be one of the biggest plants in the district. Negotiations are now pending for other big plants, and it is only a matter of weeks until we will get other plants, but it will be months before houses can be built to provide for the employes now in sight.

THESE LOTS WILL DOUBLE UP IN VALUE

The Tannery officials are begging for places for their men to live or to board. You can make big money providing these houses. Hundreds of houses can be sold or rented as fast as they can be built. Many stores will be needed at once. Secure some of these lots. It only takes a small payment down and easy terms on the balance.

Waiting will get you nothing. Act. Get on the electric car today at Eads Bridge (a local, not a limited), 30 minutes after every hour, and get off at South Woodriver Station (formerly known as Hartford). We have an office on the subdivision right by the station, open every day. Car fares will be returned to all buyers.

THE SPIRIT OF THE WIND

Critics have pronounced this one of the most beautiful of the past year's output of photographs. It was one of a series posed in the Rocky Mountains National Park by the Wiswall Brothers of Denver. For harmony of composition, for natural gracefulness of the central figure and for artistry of conception it has had few recent equals.

FLOWERS AND PICTURES SOOTHE FRANCE'S WOUNDED

MRS. GERTRUDE ATHERTON, the famous American novelist, tells Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine readers in the following article of her visit to the French military hospitals, where, largely through the labors of American women and donations from American wealth, the wounded of the sister republic are tenderly guided on the way to recovery or solaced upon the dark road to death. It is a vivid story of practical American sympathy and of loving French care for Joffre's heroes.

Injured Poilu craves beauty for his eyes as well as sweets and preserves for his palate—White, crisp counterpanes in military hospital barracks, and bathtubs into which men are lowered on stretchers—Gratitude for America's "enormous generosity."

By Gertrude Atherton

MRS. GERTRUDE ATHERTON.

NOT long ago I visited the beautiful hospital, Savonieres, near Bar-le-Duc, and it had just received a consignment from Le Bienetre du Blesse. Mme. Faure, the Infirmiere Major, told me that nothing had ever been more welcome, and that the spirits of the men had gone up with a rush. Above all things the French convalescent craves preserves, under the impression, no doubt, that it is his weary palate alone that longs to be tickled, but as a matter of fact his system craves the stimulation and energizing qualities of the sugar.

This hospital is on a splendid estate leased by the Government shortly after the beginning of the war. More or less sheltered by trees from the indefatigable Taube, eight or nine "barracks" have been erected, and down their long sides are rows of cots that look as comfortable as they are neat. As many of the patients as could be moved were lying on long chairs under the great oaks and lime trees. At the entrance to the park was a row of low buildings built for the ever-necessary "bureau," chemist shop, surgical dressings stores, etc.; all run with the method and precision characteristic of the French.

It was a quiet and sylvan scene when I saw it, but when guns at the front are thundering, reminding these men that their comrades in arms are falling momentarily, or Taubes are drumming overhead searching out the barracks, it seems to me that sustained optimism must be a difficult feat. If the delicacies always craved by the sick will raise the spirits of men who have been wounded and perhaps mutilated in the service of their country, and break the sad monotony of their lives, those in the enjoyment of health and freedom cannot work too hard to raise the necessary money.

I saw nothing more interesting at these hospitals than the bath tubs for the wounded brought straight from the front. Even officers who have been in the trenches for several days are not clean to say the least of it, and the first thing to do before the operation is to give them a bath. If they are grand blesses they must receive as little handling as possible. Consequently they are transferred from their own stretcher to one that covers the top of a very large bath tub full of warm water. This stretcher is lowered mechanically from the head down without jarring the wounded man. As soon as he is both clean and refreshed the stretcher is elevated and he is transferred to still another and wrapped in a sheet; then when dry he is carried to the operating table.

The Hospital Central is beautifully located in a high valley just outside of Bar-le-Duc and looks like a new mining town. It is laid out in streets and there must be 30 of the wooden barracks besides two pavillions—long structures of stucco painted white. They are fine targets for Taubes and I can't think why they are not painted brown. All of these buildings but one are in charge of Mme. d'Haussaville's division of the Red Cross; Societe Francaise de Secours aux Blesses Militaires; the exception is run by the second division, Societe des Dames Francaises. These women, both of the noblesse and the haute bourgeoisie, give their services and work like slaves.

The Infirmiere Major, Mlle. de Sezilles, and the Medicin Major, walked me through every one of those buildings except those devoted to infectious cases. The day was hot and I had walked miles already, but the doctor was inexorable. He had not wanted to show me the hospital, even although I had brought a personal letter to Mlle. de Sezilles, but had surrendered when I produced my letter from the Ministere de la Guerre in which the privilege of visiting the hospitals in the war zone was extended to me. So he determined I should have my fill.

However, every foot of the way was interesting. Here men were brought to remain until they were well enough to return to the front or be transferred to Paris, the blind until their bodies were strong enough to give them courage for delicate operations or to face life once more. The men in bed were protected by netting from the loathsome flies which swarm in this district, and every counterpane was as white as the crisp gowns of the infirmieres. The convalescents in the pavillions were sitting in the corridors that traverse the front, reading or gazing at the charming scenery; if blind merely sunning themselves. They alone, of all the maimed, look sad.

Mlle. de Sezilles showed me her barrack with great pride, and it certainly was an unexpected sight in a base hospital. Its corridors were set with palms and flowering shrubs, every window had its boxes, and there were pictures above the beds. Every ward, in fact, was a revelation of the taste or purse of its infirmiere major. Some were austere, but in many an attempt had been made to relieve the barrenness of a military hospital ward, where the men must lie for weeks, or months, with little to do but stare at a glimpse of the hills, and during long silences unbroken by any sound but the raucous voice of war. There is no question that the wounded in the decorated wards looked more than commonly cheerful, for not only has the Frenchman a passion for beauty but he is the most grateful of all the wounded soldiers. And he would answer politely the most inane question if he were being disembowelled at the moment.

Mlle. de Sezilles showed me a cupboard stocked with the first consignment from Le Bienetre du Blessee we had been able to send, and once more I heard how welcome it was. "It is good for the morale of the men, also," she added. "The poor fellows, courageous as they are, and gay by temperament, are often depressed. There is nothing like appetizing food, both immediate and prospective, to raise the spirits of a convalescent. No medicine so hastens recovery, and they never looked forward to the pleasures of health as they do to a cup of broth or cocoa, or a slice of ham and a dish of preserves." Then, like everybody else I met in France engaged in any sort of relief work, she spoke with the deepest gratitude of the practical sympathy of the Americans, of their enormous generosity. I told her that the Eastern States had born the brunt so far, and that California had done well, but that I was waiting for the West to wake up.

Several Americans have asked me why the rich people of France do not run this oeuvre themselves. The answer is simple enough. There are no rich people left in France, not as we estimate riches, at all events. Between the moratorium, which has cut off their rents, the mobilization of their farm hands or workmen, taxes, the increased cost of living and the constant demands to which they have responded since the first day of the war, (I know one woman who runs three hospitals in the South of France out of her own pocket), they find themselves at the beginning of the third year with little to spare. Some have shut up the greater part of their beautiful apartments or hotels, and live in the fewest possible rooms, on the smallest possible sum, giving away every penny they can squeeze out of their depleted incomes.

Take the case of one Frenchman, of the old noblesse, married to an American girl. She brought him a large dower, but he was wealthy and it was a love match. The French trenches run through his northern estate, and he will not be permitted to set foot on it before the end of the war. It is ruined in any case unless his regiment happens to be ordered there. His southern estate is intact, but he receives no rent from his tenants, and all his able-bodied men are at the front—or dead. To be sure the women and boys work in the fields, but so they did before the war, and there is no one to take the place of the absent men. Out of his invested capital he must pay high and ever higher taxes, he is asked every day in the week for a subscription, and I believe he runs a hospital. He would smile at hearing himself called a rich man today.

It was during the latter part of May that a number of ladies met at the house of the Marquise de Talleyrand in Paris to found an oeuvre on the grand scale for the greater comfort of convalescent officers and soldiers in the war zone. Countess d'Haussanville, President of the first division of the Red Cross, presided, and of that original group those who accepted official positions were the Marquise d'Andigne (Madeline Goddard of Providence); Mme. de Talleyrand (Elizabeth Curtis of New York); Countess de Roussy de Sales (American); Princess Poniatowska (Elizabeth Sperry of California); Mme. Ernest Mallet, wife of the President of the Bank of France; Mme. le General Pau, and Mme. Waddington, who, as all the world knows, was Mary King of New York.

Mme. d'Andigne, who has established a reputation for executive ability and conscientious application to whatever she undertakes, was elected President, and Mme. Poincare became honorary President.

On the Council are 39 names, French, French-American and American. Among the last are Mrs. Bliss of the American Embassy, Mrs. Ridgley Carter, Mrs. Herman Harges, Mrs. Lawrence Slade, Mrs. Bell, Mrs. Lee Childe, Mrs. Potter, Mrs. Harper and Mrs. Samuel Watson, wife of an American clergyman in Paris. The French names are among the most distinguished in France, and no list of any oeuvre was ever more carefully chosen both for its effect on the public and for usefulness; coming as it did late in the day it was felt to be under a certain handicap.

It was christened "Le Bienetre du Blesse, Societe Franco-Americaine pour nos Combattants" (The Comfort, or Well-Being, of the Wounded, French-American Society for Our Soldiers). Men in high places, according to custom, became its sponsors, the War Office gave it a "barrack" out at the Entrepot des Dons, where all the big oeuvres have their storehouses and a central bureau; and the great Paris banking house of Munroe & Co. accepted the office of Treasurer and receives all donations. The address of this firm in New York is 30 Pine street.

The Committee of Mercy has taken the oeuvre under its wing, a strong New York committee is in process of formation, and it is expected that a committee will be formed in all of the principal states before the year is out.

I will confess that I wandered in upon that preliminary meeting quite by mistake, being under the impression that I had been invited merely to have a cup of tea and some lively conversation, and that when I found a committee was in process of formation I would have escaped if I could. I had gone to France to write about the work of its women in the war and in the hope of doing something for that great country in my own way, but with the firm intention of not being drawn into any organization. Possibly no one ever lived who hates sitting at a committee table as I do. However, escape was impossible then or later; and, by degrees, I became infested with their own enthusiasm. After my visits to military hospitals in the war zone I promised Mme. d'Andigne willingly enough that I would do what I could to put the thing through in this country.

No oeuvre since the beginning of the war has been more important than this. When a man has lost a quart or so of blood, after an exhausting period in the trenches, or has undergone a severe operation, the nerves of his stomach are in a supersensitive condition. But in military hospitals the dietary kitchen contains nothing but milk and eggs.

Our oeuvre supplies delicacies like concentrated beef juice, canned fruits, rice, cocoa, sugar, jellies, preserves, oranges and ham. In many places a million francs could not buy one of these.

> And treat those two imposters just the same;
> If you can bear * * *
> To watch the things you gave your life to, broken,
> And stoop and build 'em up with worn-out tools——

"IT pulled me through the bad times,' says Lieutenant-Colonel John Ford Elkington of the Royal Warwickshire Regiment, his face lighting up at the reference to Kipling's manly poem, "If." And these bad times were as black as any individual has faced during the war, for at its beginning this British officer suffered the supreme disgrace of being courtmartialed and cashiered from the army. Now he has been reinstated in his rank, by order of the King, and thereby hangs one of the most romantic episodes coming out of the conflict. But first let him tell what part of his redemption he owes to Kipling:

"A friend of mine sent me a copy of Kipling's 'If.' I carried it in my pack on many a long march through France, and it was with me in every attack. I read it in bivouac and in the trenches."

When the conflict exploded beneath Europe in August, 1914, Elkington had seen 28 years' military service in the British army, and wore the Queen's medal with four clasps for distinguished gallantry in the Boer War. With his regiment, the Royal Warwickshires, he was sent to France in the original expeditionary force. He fought at Mons and took part in the thrilling retreat wherein the British, breasting the torrent of the German invasion, were swept almost out of existence. Somewhere, under that terrific strain, the fibers disciplined by more than a quarter-century of military training gave way, and Lieutenant-Colonel Elkington was guilty of what his friends term "a mistake" or "an error of discretion." Whatever it was—and the definite offense has not been made public—he was tried by a courtmartial, cashiered and dismissed from the service for conduct which, in the judgment of the court, rendered him unfit and incapable of serving his sovereign in any military capacity whatever in the future. He vanished—to his home at Pangbourne—and the London Gazette, Oct. 14, 1914, contained this item:

> Royal Warwickshire Regiment.—Lieutenant-Colonel John F. Elkington is cashiered by sentence of a general courtmartial. Dated Sept. 14, 1915.

In many armies such a sentence would have been the signal for the disgraced officer to kill himself with his own hand. No doubt this temptation came to Elkington, as the easiest way out. He was a ruined man; his long and conspicuous career in the army lay in fragments. He was nearly 50 years old, a late date at which one might hope to begin building a reputation anew. A friend who visited him at this midnight hour of his life, says that Elkington bore himself like a gallant gentleman. After smoking for a long time, grimly and in silence, the ex-officer snapped out:

"Well, there's still the French Foreign Legion!"

> If you can make a heap of all your winnings
> And risk it on one turn of pitch-and-toss,
> And lose, and start again at your beginnings
> And never breathe a word about your loss——

As is well known, the famous Foreign Legion of the French army is a refuge for the flotsam of all nations. Its characteristic rule is that no questions shall be asked of applicants for membership. Thither flock the broken and desperate men of all races, reckless, devil-may-care adventurers who have tried everything and lost and care not whether in addition they lose their lives. There are men of education and culture who are also blackguards and scoundrels; there are Americans, Russians, Englishmen and Italians who would find it hazardous to return to their own countries. With such men as these, the discipline is especially severe; and also, the men being what they are, the Foreign Legion is a favorite "food for cannon" among the French Generals, and is certain to be flung into forlorn hopes.

"As I could not serve England again," Col. Elkington has since said, "there was nothing for me but the Foreign Legion—that home for the fallen name. In this strange collection of men there is no rank, no past. The Foreign Legion ignores the past, regards with contempt the future, and laughs at the present. There every man is a man, and every man a hero. Many there were who had become legionaires because they, too, had failed elsewhere. 'Lost dogs like myself,' I used to call them. I do not think that the men in the Legion fear anything; I have never seen such men. They are a grim lot of jolly men; a desperate lot of cool and courageous heroes."

Lieutenant-Colonel John Ford Elkington.

To this aggregation of the world's down-and-outers, plain "John Elkington" joined himself. No questions were asked him, according to the etiquette of the Legion, and he vouchsafed no information. No one questioned him as to what he had been, and he told no one. The former Lieutenant-Colonel John Ford Elkington of His Majesty's Warwickshires had become another identity; he was Private John Elkington of the French Foreign Legion.

For a man of his age to set out on the bottom rung of the ladder as a ranker in a strange army, among strangers, was in itself an act of moral heroism. Elkington had determined that he must expiate his error, either by death on the field of honor, or by such brilliant courage as would forever remove the blot from his name.

> If you can force your heart and nerve and sinew
> To serve your turn long after they are gone,
> And so hold on when there is nothing in you
> Except the Will which says to them: "Hold on!"——

To gain unusual distinction for gallantry is harder in the Foreign Legion than in any other corps in the world, for there the men feel that they have nothing to gain from life and perhaps much—rest and peace, at least—from death. The Foreign Legion was heard from in Alsace and then the Vosges; and finally, with its part in the great French offensive at Champagne, in September, 1915, Private Elkington found his opportunity.

On the first day of the battle, when the soldiers of France were hurling themselves in waves on the foe and the Foreign Legion was more lavish than ever in its sacrifice of life, the ex-Warwickshire officer distinguished himself on a field where valor was universal. A mere handful of men, of whom he was one, attacked, took and held a point that was of the highest importance. There they hung on for four days, and the spirit of the Englishman, resolved to do or die in his task of expiation, was an essential factor of the achievement.

On the fourth day, Sept. 28, the Foreign Legion charged again with unsurpassed intrepidity. They swept over the first German trench and charged the second, through a zone of hailing machine-gun fire. Elkington was leading them all through the storm of lead, when a shot caught him below the knee, destroying part of the bone. But his daring deeds in the two charges were to be brought to the attention of Gen. Joffre himself, and at his command one of the French Generals decorated the Briton with two medals—the Medaille Militaire, the French equivalent of the Victoria Cross, and the Croix de Guerre, with the little bronze palm which doubles its worth.

> If you can fill the unforgiving minute
> With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
> Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
> And—which is more—you'll be a Man, my son!

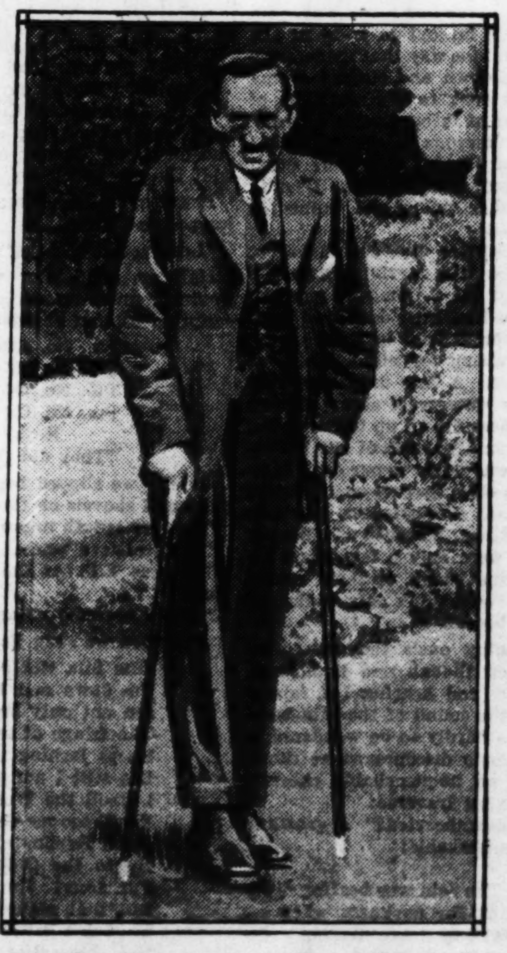
Elkington fell 100 yards short of the German second trench, and beside him dropped his chum, an American surgeon named Wheeler. Before fainting from his own wound, Wheeler administered first aid to his comrade and thus saved his life, besides giving him a stiff dose of laudanum to ease the pain. They lay for 13 hours in the valley of death before stretcher-bearers could rescue them, and by that time Elkington's wound became septic. Wheeler recovered, but was so lame that he was invalided.

Elkington was taken to the Hopital Civil at Grenoble, where he was confined 10 months, eight of them in bed. It was at first thought he would die from blood poisoning, but the American surgeon's work had given him a chance for life. The turning point came on Christmas day, when a French General went to the hospital and pinned on Elkington's coat the two medals he had won. They were to him the sign of his rehabilitation as a soldier. Then the fight to save his leg from amputation was won, and in July he was discharged, with one leg an inch and a half shorter than the other.

Finally, in the London Gazette of Sept. 6, 1916—the same official journal which two years before, lacking eight days, had recorded his disgrace—appeared this notice a man's redemption of a shattered past:

> The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the reinstatement of John Ford Elkington in the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, with his previous seniority, a consequence of his gallant conduct while serving in the ranks of the Foreign Legion of the French army. He is accordingly reappointed Lieutenant-Colonel in the Royal Warwickshire Regiment.

Col. Elkington is now at his home with his wife, whose faith in him never swerved, and their two children, a boy and a girl. Because of his wound he is not likely to be called upon for further active service, but he is, as he says, "the happiest man in England." All England has rejoiced with him in his triumph over his one mistake, and it is no exaggeration to say that he has become a national hero.



Col. Elkington's limping gait on sticks is the badge of his redeemed name.

Col. Elkington does not understand what he calls the "fuss" that is being made of him. "What else could a man do?" he says. "I was cashiered, and about a fortnight after the notice appeared in the papers I was in the ranks of the Foreign Legion.

"It was hard work, and we were nearly always in the the thick of it. I had to take things as they came, and three weeks after I enlisted I was at the front. It was not new to me, and I did not need training. Many of the men of the Legion wore medals—medals of all the wars for the last 20 years. I could not wear mine even if I had wanted to—I was cashiered, and had no right to them any longer."

"Were you ever recognized?" he was asked.

"Once only," he said; "we were marching in the Champagne country, and had just stopped to drink at a stream when a military motor went by. Someone in the car called out, 'Hullo, Elkington,' and I was afraid that I would be given away."

"Complaint!" he exclaimed in answer to a question. "Good Lord, no! The whole thing was my own fault. I got what I deserved, and I had no kick against anyone. It was just 'Carry on!'"

The most vivid first-person, actual-fact, narrative yet written about the war.

THE worst of it was that we could not get away from the sight of the mangled bodies of our comrades. Arms and legs stuck out of the wreckage, and on every side we saw distorted human faces, the faces of men we had known, with whom we had lived and shared hardships and dangers for months past. Those who have never lived through experiences of this sort cannot possibly know the horror of them. It is not in the heat of battle that men lose their reason. Battle frenzy is, perhaps, a temporary madness. The real danger comes when the strain is relaxed. Men look about them and see the bodies of their comrades torn to pieces as though they had been hacked and butchered by fiends. One thinks of the human body as inviolable, a beautiful and sacred thing. The sight of it dismembered or disemboweled trampled in the bottom of a trench, smeared with blood and filth, is so revolting as to be hardly endurable.

And yet, we had to endure it. We could not escape it. Whichever way we looked, there were the dead. Worse than the sight of dead men were the groans and entreaties of those lying wounded in the trenches waiting to be taken back to the dressing stations.

"I'm shot through the stomach, matey! Can't you get me back to the ambulance. Ain't they some way you can get me back out o' this?"

"Stick it, old lad! You won't have long to wite. They'll be some of the Red Cross along 'ere in a jiffy now."

"Give me a lift, boys, can't you? Look at my leg! Do you think it'll 'ave to come off? Maybe they could save it if I could get to 'ospital in time! Won't some of you give me a lift? I can 'obble along with a little 'elp."

"Don't you fret, sonny! You're a-goin' to ride back in a stretcher presently. Keep yer courage up a little w'ile longer."

Some of the men, in their suffering, forgot everyone but themselves, and it was not strange that they should. Others, with more iron in their natures, endured fearful agony in silence. During memorable half-hours, filled with danger and death, many of my gross misjudgments of character were made clear to me. Men whom no one had credited with heroic qualities revealed them. Others failed rather pitiably to live up to one's expectations. It seemed to me that there was strength or weakness in men quite apart from their real selves, for which they were in no way responsible; but doubtless it had always been there, waiting to be called forth at just such crucial times.

During the afternoon I heard for the first time the hysterical cry of a man whose nerve had given way. He picked up an arm and threw it far out in front of the trenches, shouting as he did so in a way that made one's blood run cold. Then he sat down and started crying and moaning. He was taken back to the rear, one of the saddest casualties in a war of inconceivable horrors. I heard of many instances of nervous breakdown, but I witnessed surprisingly few of them. Men were often badly shaken and trembled from head to foot. Usually they pulled themselves together under the taunts of their less susceptible comrades.

At the close of a gloomy October day, six unshaven, mud-encrusted machine gunners, the surviving members of two teams, were gathered at the C Company gun emplacement. D Company's gun had been destroyed by a shell, and so we had joined forces here in front of the wrecked dugout, and were waiting for night, when we could bury our dead comrades. A fine drenching rain was falling. We sat with our waterproof sheets thrown over our shoulders and our knees drawn up to our chins, that we might conserve the damp warmth of our bodies. No one spoke. No reference was made to our dead comrades who were lying there so close that we could almost touch them from where we sat. Nevertheless, I believe that we were all thinking of them, however unwillingly. I tried to see them as they were only a few hours before. I tried to remember the sound of their voices, how they had laughed; but I could think only of the appearance of their mutilated bodies.

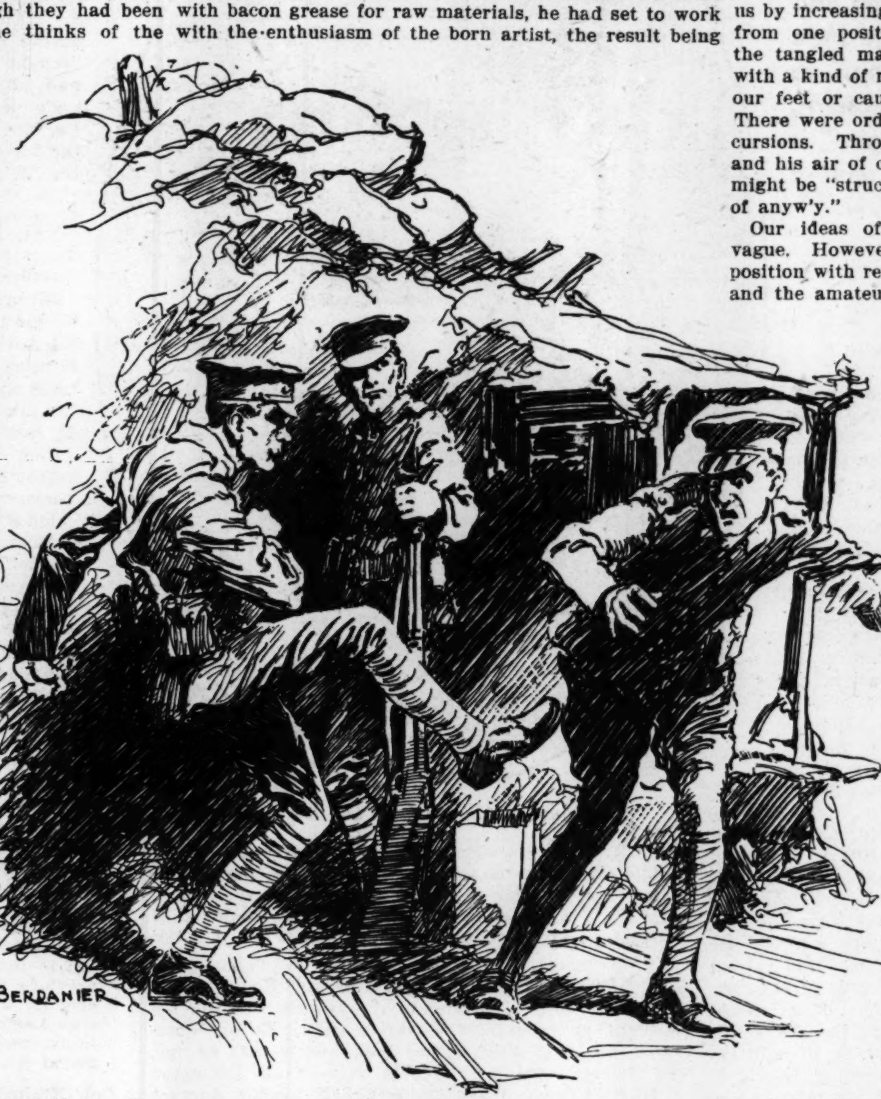
On a dreary autumn evening one's thoughts often take a melancholy turn, even though one is indoors, sitting before a pleasant fire, and hearing but faintly the sighing of the wind and the sound of the rain beating against the window. It is hardly to be wondered at that soldiers in trenches become discouraged at times, and on this occasion, when an unquenchably cheerful voice shouted over an adjoining traverse:

"Wot che'r, lads! Are we downhearted?" A growling chorus answered with an unmistakable:

"YES!"

We were in an open ditch. The rain was beating down on our faces. We are waiting for darkness when we could go to our unpleasant work of grave digging. To-morrow there would be more dead bodies and more graves to dig, and the day after, the same duty, and the day after that, the same. Week after week we should be living like this, killing and being killed, binding up terrible wounds, digging graves, always doing the same work with not one bright or pleasant thing to look forward to.

These were my thoughts as I sat on the firing bench with my head drawn down between my knees, watching the water dripping from the edges of my puttees. But I had forgotten one important item in the daily routine—supper. And I had forgotten Private Lemley, our cook, or, to give him his due, our chef. He was not the man to waste his time in gloomy reflection. With a dozen moldy potatoes which he had procured heaven knows where, four tins of corned beef and a canteen lid filled with bacon grease for raw materials, he had set to work with the enthusiasm of the born artist, the result being rissoles, brown and crisp, and piping hot. It is a pleasure to think of that meal. Private Lemley was one of the rare souls on earth, one of the Mark Tapleys who never lost his courage or his good spirits. I remember how our spirits rose at the sound of his voice, and how gladly and quickly we responded to his summons.



"Go 'ide yerself, you bloody little coward!"

"'Ere you are, me lads! Bully beef rissoles an' 'ot tea, an' it ain't 'arf bad fer the trenches, if I do s'y it."

I can only wonder now at the keenness of our appetites in the midst of the most grewsome surroundings. Dead men were lying about us, both in the trenches and outside of them. And yet our rissoles were not a whit the less enjoyable on that account.

It was quite dark when we had finished. The Sergeant jumped to his feet.

"Let's get at it, boys," he said.

Half an hour later we erected a wooden cross in Tommy's grave-strewn garden. It bore the following inscription written in pencil:

Pte. No. 4326 MacDonald.
Pte. No. 7864 Gardner.
Pte. No. 9851 Preston.
Pte. No. 6940 Allen.
Royal Fusiliers.
"They did their bit."

Quietly we slipped back into the trench and piled our picks and shovels on the parados.

"Got yer mouth organ 'andy, Nobby?" someone asked.

"She's always 'andy. Wot'll you 'ave, lads?"

"Give us 'Silk 'At Nat Tony.' That's a proper funeral 'ymn."

"Right you are! Sing up, now!"

And then we sang Tommy's favorite kind of requiem.

"I'm Silk Hat Nat Tony,
I'm down and I'm stony;
I'm not only broke, but I'm bent.
The fringe of my trousers
Keeps lashing the houses,
But still I am gay and content.
I stroll the West gayly,
You'll see me there daily,
From Burlington Arcade
Up to the Old Bailey.
I'm stony! I'm Tony!
But that makes no diff'rence, you see.
Though I haven't a fraction,
I've this satisfaction,
They built Piccadilly for me."

CHAPTER XI.

"Sitting Tight."

THROUGHOUT October we fulfilled the prophecy of our officer who told us that "sitting tight" in the German trenches was to be our function. There were night counter attacks preceded by heavy artillery fire, when the enemy made determined efforts to retake the lost territory. There were needless alarms when nervous sentries "got the wind up," to use the authentic trench expression, and contagious excitement set men to firing like mad into blank darkness. In the daytime there were moments of calm which we could not savor owing to that other warfare waged upon us by increasing hordes of parasitic enemies. We moved from one position to another through trenches where the tangled mass of telephone wires, seemingly gifted with a kind of malignant humor, coiled themselves about our feet or caught in the piling swivels of our rifles. There were orders and counter orders, alarums and excursions. Through them all Tommy kept his balance and his air of cheery unconcern, but he wished that he might be "struck pink" if he knew "wot we was a'doin' of anyw'y."

Our ideas of the tactical situation were decidedly vague. However, we did know, in a general way, our position with reference to important military landmarks, and the amateur strategists were busy at all times explaining the situation to frankly ignorant comrades, and outlining plans for definite action.

"Now, if I was Gen. French, I'd make 'Ulluch me main objective. They ain't no use tryin' to get by at this part o' the line till you got that village."

"Don't talk so bloomin' ignorant! Ain't that just what they been a-tryin? Wot we got to do is go 'round 'Ulluch. Tyke 'em in the rear an' from both sides."

"W'y don't they get on with it? Wot to blazes are we a-doin' of, givin' 'em a chanct to get dug in again? 'Ere we all but got 'em on the run an' the 'ole show stops!"

The continuation of the offensive was the chief topic of conversation. The men dreaded it, but they were anxious to go through with the business. They believed that now if ever there was the chance to push the Germans out of France.

In the meantime the day's work was still the day's work. There were nightly bombing affairs, some of them most desperate hand-to-hand contests for the possession of small sectors of trench. One of these I witnessed from a trench 60 yards away. The advantage lay with us. The enemy held only the center of the line and were forced to meet attacks from either end. However, they had a communication trench connecting with their second line, through which carrying parties brought them a limitless supply of bombs.

The game of pitch and toss over the barricades had continued for several days without a decision. Then came orders for more decisive action. The barricades were to be destroyed and the enemy bombed out. In underground fighting of this kind the element of surprise is possible. If one opponent can be suddenly overwhelmed with a heavy rain of bombs, the chances of success for the attacking party are quite favorable.

The action took place at dusk. Shortly before the hour set, the bombers, all of them boys in their early 20's, filed slowly along the trench, the pockets of their grenade waistcoats bulging with "lemons" and "cricket balls," as the two most effective kinds of bombs are called. They went to their places with that spirit of stolid cheeriness which is the wonder and admiration of everyone who knows Tommy Atkins intimately. Formerly, when I saw him in this mood, I would think, "He doesn't realize. Men don't go out to meet death like this." But long association with him had convinced me of the error of this opinion. These men knew that death or terrible injury was in store for them; yet they were talking in excited and gleeful undertones, as they might have passed through the gates at a football match.

"Are we downhearted? Not likely, old son!"

"Tyke a feel o' this little puffball! Smack on old Fritzie's napper she goes!"

"I'm a-goin' to arsk fer a nice Blightey one! Four months in Brentford 'ospital an' me Christmas puddin' at 'ome!"

"Now, don't ferget, you blokes! County o' London War 'Ospital fer me if I gets a knock! Write it on a piece o' pyper an' pin it to me tunic w'en you sends me back to the ambulance."

The barricades were blown up and the fight was on. A 200-piece orchestra of blacksmiths, with sledgehammers, beating kettle drums the size of brewery vats, might have approximated, in quality and volume, the sound of the battle. The spectacular effect was quite different from that of a counter attack across the open. Lurid flashes of light issued from the ground as though a door to the infernal regions had been thrown jarringly open. The cloud of thick smoke was shot through with red gleams. Men ran along the parapet hurling bombs down into the trench. Now they were hidden

DID GUIDO RENI FAKE HIS FAMOUS PORTRAIT OF BEATRICE CENCI?

"In fact, the picture of Beatrice Cenci is the very saddest picture ever painted or conceived. It involves an unfathomable depth of sorrow, the sense of which comes to the observer by a sort of intuition."
Nathaniel Hawthorne

GUIDO RENI

The picture in a Roman gallery.

How a connoisseur, prowling around the Americo-Mexican border, found an ancient picture that seems to upset one of the world's century-old art traditions—Accumulative evidence casts doubt on the accepted authorship of the celebrated masterpiece — Reasons why modern critics think Reni could not have been its creator and why Giovanni Mazzoline could have been

IT is to the poet Shelley that the world owes most of what it knows about Beatrice Cenci. Probably inspired by the famous painting, attributed to Reni, Shelley collected the local traditions about her and made them the basis of his tragedy, "The Cenci." According to this story, she was the daughter of a debauched and cruel old man, who was seized with a mania of hatred against his children. His attitude towards Beatrice took an unspeakable form. Learning that she was in love with a young man, he locked her up in a castle. At last, unable to endure her situation longer, Beatrice conspired with her mother and brother and bravos were hired to murder the father. The crime was discovered and all the participants were put to death, although some of the highest personages of Rome interceded on behalf of the girl.

Bertolotti's version is entirely different. According to him, Beatrice was a wayward girl whose father locked her up to put an end to her profligacy. She conspired with her most favored admirer, her mother and her brother to put the father to death, the family hoping to divide his estate and live afterwards as its members saw fit. The father was beaten to death and his body was thrown from a castle wall to make it appear accidental. This explanation was accepted at first, but later the two hired assassins were arrested for another offense and one of them made indiscreet statements. On being put to the torture, he confessed the whole affair. Beatrice never admitted her guilt and died insisting that she was innocent. She was only 22 years old when she was beheaded.

THAT a prowler about the Elephant Butte in the Rio Grande valley should find evidence to establish that Guido Reni was a faker or a copyist seems fantastic, but it happened. Guido painted "La Cenci," and the picture has been declared one of the 12 greatest in the world. For centuries it has been accepted as a portrait of Beatrice Cenci, painted or sketched in her cell after she had been condemned to death.

Art critics and experts have contended that so accurately and faithfully did the painting show the emotions that must have filled Beatrice's soul, that the picture could not have been created out of the artist's mind, but must have been a true presentation of what he saw at the close of one of the great tragedies of history.

But Guido never saw Beatrice.

The haunting beauty of this face has been sung by Keats and Shelley and many another. Shelley's poem, "La Cenci," was proclaimed the greatest tragedy of modern times. He pretended to have found an old manuscript which gave him the story. Church apologists and church critics have quarreled for 300 years over the question of the radiantly beautiful girl's guilt.

The Guido Reni portrait, however it was achieved, was the production of a great genius, and if he faked, as artists employ the term, he was a glorious faker. Here is the evidence:

Dr. Nathan Boyd of London, a patron of the arts, among other callings, was in Mesilla, N. M., about 20 years ago. He was engaged in buying lands which would be irrigable when a dam should be built across the Rio Grande above. In the old adobe house of Don Demetrio Chavez near the plaza, he observed two dim pictures on the wall. When the heavy wooden shutters at the front windows were removed, he recognized both pictures. They were copies, as he presumed, of Reni's Cenci and Titian's portrait of his daughter, Lavinia. Both pictures were very old and very beautiful.

Boyd finally bought both pictures. The Senor Chavez knew nothing of their history. He had taken them in part payment of a debt many years before. The former owner, also a Mexican, was dead and his family scattered.

Dr. Boyd, in a letter to Richard Rathbun, secretary of the National Gallery of Art in Washington, when the pictures were exhibited there in 1914, said:

"When I sent the pictures to London, I instructed the expert to whom I consigned them that the frames were to be mended and regilded, the canvasses relined and mounted on new stretchers, the colors restored where the margins were destroyed, and that the pictures be revarnished, after removal of the old, time-discolored varnish.

"After my return to London in 1894, I found that the removal of the old varnish had revealed flesh tones of wonderful purity and transparency, especially in the portrait of Beatrice, which was found to bear the signature of Giovanni Mazzolini."

The Titian copy, on which no signature was found, has no part in this story. Continuing his narrative, Dr. Boyd says:

"Probably more than aught else, Shelley's great tragedy has given world-wide currency to the story of La Cenci, and doubtless has been largely responsible for the universal interest in Guido Reni's portrait of Beatrice, and for the present day popular legend that the one in the Barberina Palace was painted from life or from a life study, made just before her execution. But, while Guido's three portraits of Beatrice are unquestionably most meritorious examples of the perfection of his art, it was generally conceded by authorities during the last century that all three were copies of an original painting which had long since disappeared—that the one in Barberina Palace no less than the other two, bears unmistakable evidence of that peculiar quality, that absence of free brushwork, which is supposed to be inherently characteristic of all copies."

Giovanni Mazzolini was born in Naples in the year 1550. Guido Reni was born in 1575. Beatrice was put to death in a singularly atrocious manner on Sept. 11, 1599. Mazzolini was, therefore, 49 and Reni 24.

Mazzolini was considered one of the foremost artists of his time, and was famous as a painter of altar pieces. He was what would be considered now a fashionable artist. It would be highly probable that a friend of the great and rich Cenci family would commission him to paint a portrait of the beautiful girl about to be killed.

Guido Reni was a profligate, a spendthrift and a gambler. Far be it from me, in the safety brought by 300 years, to slander him, but he was a bad lot, and a disreputable. In spite of all his great genius, he died in poverty and alone. He was not the one a friend would choose for the difficult assignment of committing Beatrice's great sorrow to canvas.

After Dr. Boyd's discovery was shown in London, the old question of whether Reni's picture was a copy was renewed, and F. Marion Crawford, the novelist, established by what he declares to be "irrefragable proof" that Guido Reni was in Spain at the time of the execution of Beatrice Cenci, and that he did not go to Rome until eight years later, during the pontificate of Paul V. In a little book which he has circulated privately concerning the two pictures, Dr. Boyd says:

"Comparison of Mazzolini's portrait of Beatrice with those of Guido shows that they are identical in treatment; and it is logical to assume that sometime after he went to Rome, Guido copied Mazzolini's work when he painted his now world famous portraits of Beatrice. Furthermore, if the portrait of Beatrice that I found in Southern New Mexico in 1893 was painted by Mazzolini, and competent judges have decided that it was painted by him, then it is more than probable that it is the one—the long lost original, that Guido copied."

Continuing his argument, Dr. Boyd says:

"We know that Mazzolini was about 25 years older than Guido, and that he was 55 or 58 years of age before Guido ever went to Rome. Therefore, having in mind Mazzolini's age, his high ability and his rank as an artist, it is hardly reasonable to sup

THE TEETH OF FAMINE

Further Tales of "The Camps of Chaos"

BY SAMUEL ALEXANDER WHITE

THE river steamer Voyageur, one of the Arctic Circle Line which ex-Marshal Cronin Hess, Gale Outremont and Thorpe Calgour established on the Upper Yukon what time they made their pile on Davidson Creek, broke into view above the trading-post of Selkirk at the Pelly's mouth. Her sides were white with blizzard-driven snow and sheathed in frozen spray. On her bow tossed a gargoyle figurehead of foam-pale mush ice. She drove at top speed, and her engines hammered incessantly in their feverish race with the frost. So fast she flew that the Selkirk inhabitants on the watch by the shore felt a pang of fear that she was going to ignore them and rush on down the river. And no worse calamity than that could befall, for a famine threatened on the Yukon, and, like the men of golden Dawson, those of lonely Selkirk were counting the holes in their belts and concentrating their hopes upon the relief ship Voyageur to bring them supplies enough to tide them over the freeze-up till such time as the river ice would bear freight and freighting dog trains.

Twice before, earlier in the fall, had their hopes been dashed down, once when the C. D. C. boat Canadian sank in Five Finger Rapids and again as the N. C. steamer Hannah grounded fast below Tantalus Butte. The Voyaguer was now their only salvation, and they gesticulated frantically upon the beach and bellowed lest they lose it, till they saw her suddenly slow and buckle up the shore ice like glass, as she swerved in to the post.

At the direction of Severil, the Selkirk trader, three French half-breeds and a Stick Indian in his employ ran forward to catch the Voyageur's lines, but no frozen hemp came snaking into their outstretched hands.

"No time to make fast!" yelled Cronin, grinning at Severil over the rail. "She'll hang a minute while we dump what you want. How many are you feeding?"

Severil took a swift glance about the group on the icy shore. He knew by heart their exact number, but in this emergency, when he had to assume full responsibility for their keep, he felt it necessary to make a final count. Besides himself there were his English clerk, the three French half-breeds and the Stick Indian aforementioned, two trappers and a prospector going up the Pelly to the Glenlyon Mountains and stayed by lack of supplies which they had figured on purchasing at the post, and a Government courier, coastward bound, whose canoe had been smashed to pieces by ice in an early winter gale at the Selwin's mouth.

"Ten!" he answered. "And I've always a few stray bucks in the fall for a little debt. Call it 12 for a margin. Twelve stomachs for 30 days. Can you stand it?"

Hess whistled speculatively. "Twelve stomachs for 30 days is eating some. We didn't count on more than half a dozen.

"Neither did I," confessed Severil, "but you see how the chances of the river have loaded me up with extras. I got to take care of them just the same as I would of myself. That's my need right now, and I hope you boys can stand it."

"What do you think, eh?" Hess asked of his partner, Gayle. "Can we stand it?"

"It's a large order under the present circumstances," declared Gayle. "There's Stewart City to provision yet before we even start on Dawson and Klondike cities. We better cut it some. But we can't cut the months, so we'll cut the days. Three weeks is your limit, Severil. You can get stuff through from Whitehorse in that time."

"I don't know," brooded Severil, "but I'll try."

He was glad of even three weeks' grace, and he knew there was no use in arguing with the partners. Lords of the moment were they, and at their spoken word men ate or starved. Swiftly they, with the assistance of Thorpe and one of the crew, detached Selkirk's portion of the provisions from a mountainous pile, the overflow of the hold, lashed under a tarpaulin on deck. The boxes, bundles and bags were tossed overside in a heap upon the river bank, and the steamer veered out again into the middle of the ice-thickened current.

A cry of farewell went up from those on shore. She was the last boat they would see that year, and their first hour of eight months' wintry isolation was upon them. Forlorn they looked, standing on the desolate shore, the rude buildings behind them and behind the post buildings the outer fringe of a thousand miles of wilderness. They cheered with a gloom in their eyes, but suddenly as those eyes, gazing past the Voyageur's stern, encountered a canoe in midriver, the gloom was usurped by a flash of joy, the joy of a farewell unexpectedly delayed. Severil darted forward, running a few paces along the bank, waving his hands excitedly and yelling for the steamer to stop.

"Canoe, Hess, canoe!" he roared. "Three men! In midriver!"

Severil pointed in the direction of the craft. The ex-Marshal ran to the starboard rail, took a look across, and shouted an order to Capt. Ravigne in the wheelhouse. The wheel went over. The Voyageur slowed again and drifted along with the pour of mush ice.

In the canoe in midriver the bowsman, who had stood up wildly waving his paddle blade to signal the steamer, suddenly sat down and added the impetus of his stroke to the strokes of his two companions. The Peterborough angled across the Yukon in long jumps, squelching through the mush ice with a hissing sound like that of lashing hail. At times it careened from the thrust of a floe, but skillfully wielded paddles, forcing the craft to yield at the moment of impact, saved its fragile sides.

"Good paddlers, Cronin!" commented Gayle, watching their work with an expert's eye. "No cheeckakos in that bunch!"

"Yes," admitted Hess grudgingly, "they know the art of the ashen blade, but that doesn't make me love them any better. Condemn their hasty hearts and condemn our rotten luck! They flip up at the time when we least want them. Three more stomachs to fill, for by the look of things they're traveling light and grubless!"

The canoe, shooting across the Voyageur's stern, showed an empty bottom. It rounded to on the port side and worked into the shelter of the steamer's hull. The bowsman upturned his face as he caught the rope Gayle and Cronin threw to him, and the partners recognized him as Rooney Ryan. Admidships squatted Monte Marlin, while the steersman's seat was filled by Seattle Simons.

"Now I love you less and less!" railed Cronin, as the three, knotting the rope to the canoe thwarts, came up hand over hand and dropped one after another across the rail. "Why in thunder couldn't you stay where you were, wherever that was?"

"Because we were out of grub!" panted Rooney, leaning back against the rail to get his breath the while Marlin and Simons drew up the canoe by the ropes. "We been prospecting up the Pelly. We were down to the last rind of bacon and the final bean. We simply had to hike for Dawson. All we were afraid of was that we'd miss the Voyageur here at Selkirk, but we got you just by the tips of our toenails!"

"Dawson!" exploded Hess. "A luscious lot you're wanted in Dawson, and a plagued lot of good you'll get going there. You're thinking to gorge yourselves, but you'll go on rations instead. Savvy that? There's a famine in Dawson City."

"Famine!" Ryan's body stiffened.

The ex-Marshal nodded surlily. "That's twice I intimated it. And again I say I can't see why you couldn't have stayed up the Pelly, killed a moose, and lived on straight meat for a while. You're only butting in down river and cutting the rations for each man smaller than ever. But that's our blasted luck! Capt. Ravigne," yelling at the deckhouse, "full speed ahead!"

The canoe had topped the rail, and the Voyageur, throbbing violently to her full stride, leaped on down the Yukon to another outburst of the Selkirk's inhabitants' cheers.

"Now, Ryan, you take an ax," Hess ordered, "and chop some of that ice from our bow. Marlin and Simons, you take a couple of poles out of the hold and stand at the forward port to fend off floes. We're traveling like a buck-jumping bighorn ram, and we don't want any impediments."

"But, look here," protested Ryan indignantly, "we're passengers. We boarded your boat at a regular port of call. We're paying full fare for passage from Selkirk to Dawson, and we're sure not going to kick in and work. Besides, we nigh paddled our gizzards out, and we ain't fit."

"You'll pay and you'll work," Cronin delivered the ultimatum, "or you'll be flung ashore without any grub sack. Take your choice. You'll do as the rest of us are doing or get off. We left Whitehorse mighty shorthanded just because we didn't want to take the men in to feed, and here you turn up, impose yourself on people and declare a labor strike. Consarn your nerve! If it wasn't for putting my knuckles out of commission for the rest of the trip, I'd pummel you to punk. Now it's up to you. In the present crisis every gink on this boat has to turn to, willingly or unwillingly, and lend his help to freight these provisions to Dawson in the shortest possible time. Are you going to use that ax and them poles?"

Grumblingly Ryan and his two friends accepted the instruments of labor and toiled with the Voyageur's crew. The Voyageur, straining her machinery to the limit, pounded on and on. Mile after mile she tore off the Yukon's icy breast. The enormous headland halfway to the mouth of the Selwyn River loomed in view, but just as the wheel went over for the inshore course, the racing vessel staggered to a violent shock. Like the buckjumping bighorn ram Cronin had spoken of, her whole forepart reared in air. The impetus of her speed still shot her forward. Her bow cleared whatever obstruction she had hit and came down with a swoosh upon the mush ice. The plunge of the bow drew the rest of the vessel after it. As a big horn clears a ledge of rock, the Voyageur cleared the obstacle in her path. Her stern kicked upward. She landed floating free, but with her hull ripped for 50 feet and her propeller shaft broken clean.

The moment the Voyaguer hit the obstruction, Gayle and Cronin, along with the rest of the crew, hit the deck. They scrambled up again, gasping for the breath that had been knocked out of them, and ran across to the deckhouse. The deckhouse, torn from its foundations, was slanting weirdly. The wheelsman with two broken ribs and a gash in his temple dripped blood out of the window, while Capt. Ravigne himself heaved viciously at the jammed wheel.

"Why in blazes didn't you keep your course, Ravigne?" thundered Cronin.

"I did," snapped the captain. "I was fair on it."

"But you see what you've piled her into, rocks or something!"

'It couldn't be rocks, not in my course. It's debris brought down by the current, a sunken tree or maybe submerged floe ice. If I could only get this wheel loose!"

"You can't. And it's no use, anyway. Her propeller's gone. It did an air dance 20 feet high, and yonder are the blades, lying on that floe. She's settling fast. Can't you feel her? It's one Hades of a fix you've put the Voyageur in, Ravigne, tying her up for all winter, and it's one Hades of a fate you've pulled down on Dawson. They'll never get a whiff of bacon or a bloody bean from our bags till it's freighted in by dog teams. Savvy what that means? But there's no gain cursing about it. Gather the crew and get the stuff out of the hold and up on deck before it gets wet. It'll be safe there when she hits the gravel."

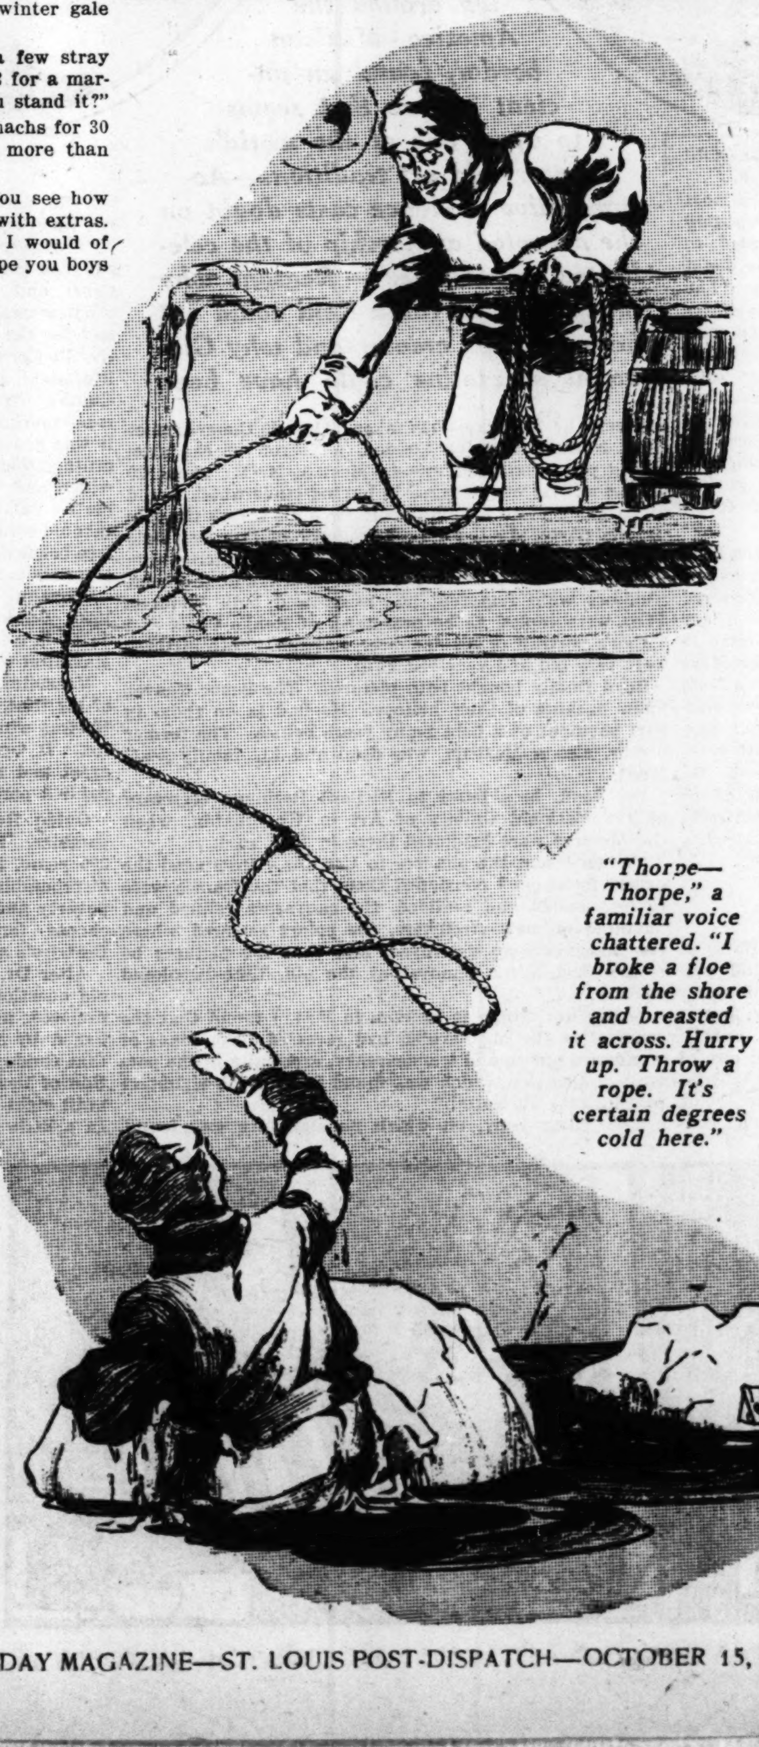
Capt. Ravigne darted out of the wheelhouse on his mission. Outremont helped the wheelsman below, while the ex-Marshal looked about for Rooney Ryan.

Rooney's ax was overboard, and Cronin found him painfully rubbing the back of his skull as he conferred with Marlin and Simons by the port rail.

"You boys going to use your canoe?" Hess asked. "I'd like to know, because it's the only craft aboard. We unshipped the steamer's boats at Whitehorse to make more room for grub."

"You bet we're going to use it," Ryan answered. "We've just put it to a vote. We're all in favor of taking a chance on beating a freeze-up to Dawson rather than stay for a month on this junk heap or even stagnate back at Selkirk. And don't try to take our canoe. You ain't got authority to do it, and we won't stand for the deal. Anyway, it's no good to you. You can't send more grub in it than'll feed ourselves."

"I don't want to send grub. I want to send Thorpe on to wire



"Thorpe—Thorpe," a familiar voice chattered. "I broke a floe from the shore and breasted it across. Hurry up. Throw a rope. It's certain degrees cold here."

Trudis, that's Gayle's wife, warning her of the situation. She's running the Arctic Circle store, and it's imperative that she should know what a fix we're in. Thorpe can get her from Stewart City. The wire's down between Selkirk and Stewart City or we could wire from the post."

"But we can wire, ourselves," protested Ryan, "without lugging Thorpe's extra weight all the way to Stewart."

"I know, but I want him to go on to Dawson then to take charge of the relieving dog trains. If Thorpe's there, I'll know that the teams'll start the minute the ice'll bear. And likewise I know they'll get here. Savvy? I don't want any trouble with you boys. I don't want to engender any hard feelings over this business. I'd rather not go so far as to commandeer your craft. So I ask you in the interests of humanity and famine-pressed Dawson to give Thorpe passage."

"Well," returned Ryan slowly, "you ain't been any too courteous to us since we climbed aboard, but if you put it that way, in the interests of humanity and famine-pressed Dawson we will give Thorpe passage. But he's got to work. We ain't going to freight any dead idle weight."

"Oh, don't you worry about that! Thorpe's no slouch. He'll paddle your arms off. Go ahead and lower your canoe."

While the three dropped the Peterborough overboard with ropes, the ex-Marshal scribbled a telegram on a scrap of paper for Thorpe to fling off for transmission at Stewart City:

The telegram read:

"Trudis Outremont, Arctic Circle Store, Dawson:

"Voyageur stove and stalled above the Selwyn River. Propeller broken, hull ripped. In Dawson in a month. Cut all sales to quarter-pound packages at one time. Try to keep some reserve, as nothing can go on. Coming fast myself with Ryan, Marlin and Simons in canoe.

"THORPE."

While Cronin wrote the telegram, Thorpe made ready for the journey, unearthed an extra paddle aboard the Voyageur and slid down the rope after the other three. Four paddles dipping and flickering in unison, the Peterborough flashed downstream.

Hess watched it round the headland, and whereas he had cursed the coming of Ryan and the others, he now blessed their going when he thought that, barring mishaps and the jaws of the freeze-up, Thorpe would make Dawson in something under 24 hours.

Gayle and Cronin immediately turned their attention to the cargo of foodstuffs, aiding Capt. Ravigne in the work of hoisting it on deck. Vigorously the short-handed crew slaved, but as fast as they emptied the hold the Voyageur continued to settle. Dark saw her on the bottom, and while Gayle and Cronin directed by lantern light the tarpaulin lashing over all deck, there came a hail from under the steamer's stern. Gayle flashed his lantern over the side, and below he saw a man in a streaming parka supporting himself with his arms upon a small-sized ice floe.

"Who are you?" Gayle yelled. "And what are you doing there?"

"Thorpe—Thorpe," a familiar voice chattered. "I broke a floe from the shore and breasted it across. Hurry up. Throw a rope. It's certain degrees cold here."

The amazed and worried men dropped him a rope with a loop on the end.

Thorpe slipped it under his arms and allowed them to pull him up, for the water and ice in his heavy clothes weighed like lead.

"What's happened, Thorpe?" asked Gayle and Cronin together. "Where's Ryan and Marlin and Simons?"

"They've gone to Dawson sure. We went ashore up by the Selwyn River to light a fire to boil some hot tea against the frost. The three of them jumped me when I wasn't looking. Knocked me silly for a minute. When I woke up they were gone. The telegram was gone, too. I don't know what they wanted it for. But they know. Else why did they take it?"

Thorpe accompanied his logic with an ice-rattling shiver, and Gayle and Cronin paused to question no more, but rushed him below to change his clothes and swallow some hot drink.

"Wouldn't that flabbergast you, Cronin?" demanded the angry Outremont. "Why'd they do it?"

"Search me," returned Cronin. "But I begin to have suspicions that that ain't the only thing they did. And do you know what we're going to do? We're going back to the spot where the Voyageur took the hurdle and see what she hit."

"But how'll we get there? Breast a floe like Thorpe?"

"No, I don't envy him his bath any. We'll rig a raft and go dry."

With a pair of hatches fastened upon the long, heavy poles used to fend off floes they engineered a raft. It was dropped overside, attached to the steamer by a long rope lest in a mishap it should be carried downstream With a couple of poles to propel the raft, an ax and a lantern the partners poled back from the Voyageur's stern for a distance of 100 feet. They knew the place of disaster by a snow-crowned rock in the middle of the river, and while Gayle propelled, Cronin began to feel with his pole for the obstruction. About 10 feet farther up his sunken pole thumped against it. Gayle got his pole over it and held the raft stationary while Hess continued his explorations under water. The gruel-like flow of mush ice masked everything below the surface, but Cronin defined the obstruction to his own satisfaction.

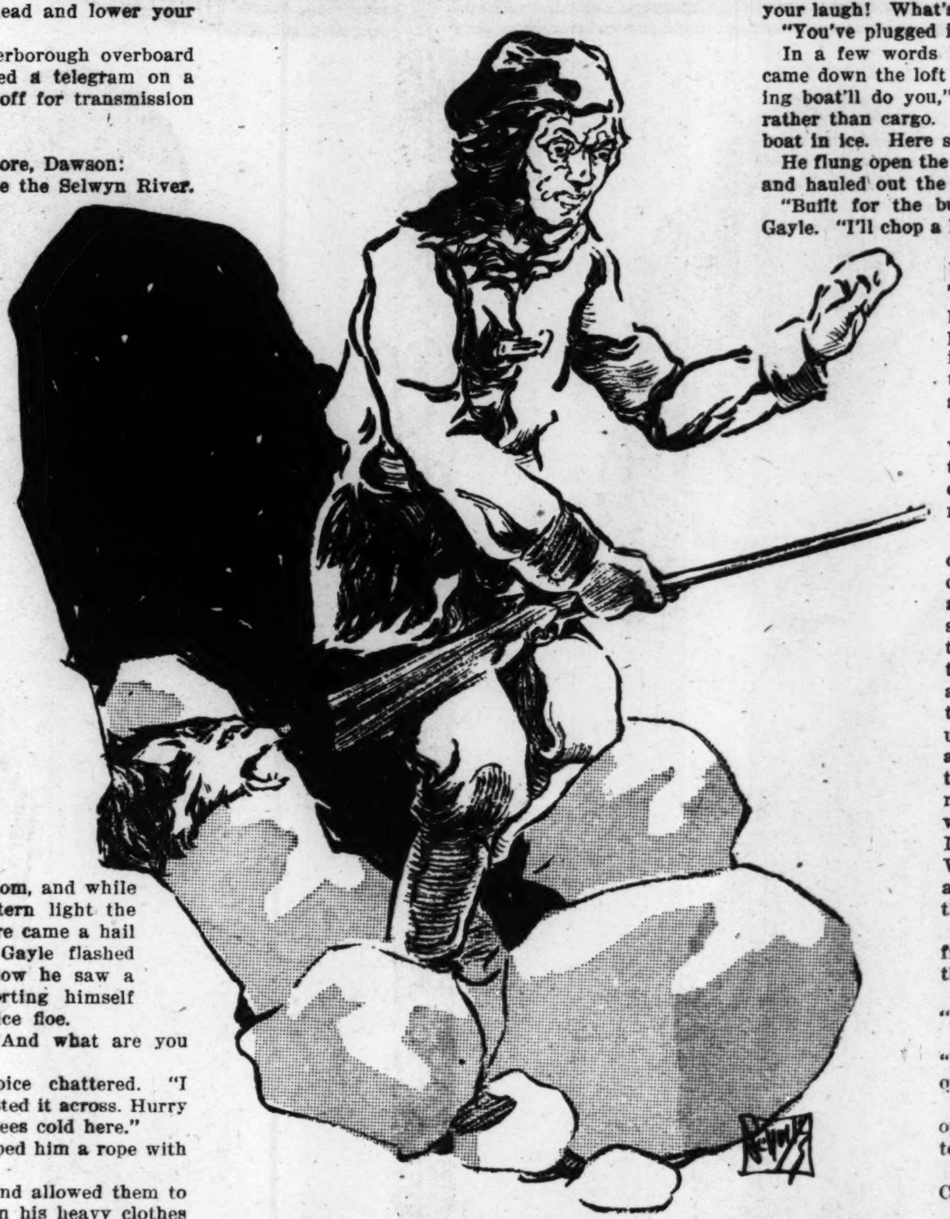
"A tree, Gayle; a sunken tree!" he exclaimed. "And rock anchored, or I'll be clammily engulfed! Wait till I use the ax. But mebbe you better push the raft up a little higher. There, I think we're clear."

Hess was tentatively feeling with the flat of his blade under water what was either a strand of rope or a long straight root. Slowly he twisted his ax helve and delivered short chops below the surface. Twice he missed. The third time he felt his blade bite. Something snapped, and right at the edge of the raft the gnarled and matted roots of a spruce tree, grotesque and slimy in the lantern light, reared up like some leviathan of the deeps. Gayle gave a violent shove to clear. The twisted mass scraped the raft poles, heaved in the air and fell again with a mighty splash, and just as the current began to whirl it round end on, Cronin, holding the light close, glimpsed the heavy hempen rope he had severed.

"Sure rock anchored as I said! The other end'll be the same. She was placed square athwart the ordinary course of navigation, and I'll bet a 10-foot quartz lead against a panful of flake gold that that pestiferous pariah of a Ryan placed her. Are you betting, Gayle?"

"No, Cronin, I'm not betting. You have a sure-enough hunch. But what I can't fathom is the reason for this stunt. Can you?"

"There I fall down, too, Gayle. I can't figure out any motive for it. There certainly ain't any motive. They've done it out of pure cussedness. Their story about prospecting up the Pelly was a lie. And they left Thorpe on the bank just because they didn't want to freight the extra weight of him to Stewart and could dispatch the telegram just as well themselves. They don't care a smatter whether the relieving dog teams ever get started or not. They got grub enough for a while—the grub we gave them. They figured we're stalled here for a month and by the time we get to Dawson they'll be out on some far creek with a laugh as long as their trail, but there they cut their cards too deep. Instead of a month from now, we start for Dawson now. If they beat the freeze-up to the golden city, we can, too."



He sprang into the air from the hole where he had been crouching. A huge, umbrella-ribbed, hunger-maddened husky bounded after him. The earth vomited other wolves crazed by the smell of blood and food.

"Cronin," protested Gayle in amazement, "not on this raft! We'll never make the White River."

"No, on a boat procured at Selkirk Post. Savvy? It's back trail for us right sharp."

The slack of the raft rope drawn up by those on deck, Cronin and Gayle worked back to the Voyageur. There they hung a little while they explained things to Capt. Ravigne, pocketed a few handfuls of grub dropped to them and called for Thorpe.

The latter came to the rail rigged out in a dry set of mackinaws.

"What are you going to do?" he asked.

"Beat it for Dawson City to catch the bloody barrators who wrecked our ship," Hess told him. "We're off to Selkirk now for a boat. You coming with us, or would you rather hug the fire a while and have us pick you up here when we come by?"

"I'll go with you," decided Thorpe. "There's no heat in hugging a fire. You scorch your face, and your back is freezing all the time. I'll go. A run'll warm me better."

He dropped down on to the makeshift raft, cut the rope, and the three poled across to the western shore of the Yukon. They retained one lantern, and by its glare they broke a channel in the shore ice and through the channel came to land. The moment they struck dry ground they were off, running with the stampeder's swift lope, Gayle to the fore with the lantern, Cronin next, and Thorpe warming his congealed blood in the rear. For a good two hours they kept it up, making a brief pause every half hour for a breathing spell. The sky was thickly overcast. There was no hint of stars or aurora to outline the contour of the rough and tortuous shore, but the joggling lantern flickering on Outremont's hip saved them from bruises and broken bones.

They struck Selkirk near midnight. The post was all in darkness, but at their pounding on the trading-room door Severil stuck his head out of the loft above. The lantern was partially hidden by Gaylee's coat. Severil could not guess at the composition of the midnight group, but he saw a sprinkling of arms and legs with here and there a shoulder or a head in the glow of the mellow light.

"Where are you from?" he demanded. "Who are you? How many of you? And how much grub have you got?"

"We're just down off the Macmillan River," boomed Cronin, disguising his voice in a hoarse croak. "Placer miners. Sixteen of us. And we haven't so much as a sour flapjack left. Hurry up and let us in. We're hungry."

Whereat Severil leaned far out of the loft with an astonishing flow of choice expletives and consigned placer mining and its 16 exponents to uttermost perdition. In the middle of his tirade the three men burst into guffaws.

"Oh, quit it, Severil!" chuckled Gayle. "Hess sure got your goat with the word grub. But we're not going to eat you out this time. All we want is a boat that floats."

"By thunder!" exclaimed the abashed Severil. "It's you boys, eh? Bit of a fooler, eh? Tarnation, you've lifted such a weight from my mind that I forgive you your laugh! What's wrong? Steamer smash?"

"You've plugged it first crack," Cronin informed.

In a few words he went on to explain, and Severil came down the loft stairs on the run. "I've a light poling boat'll do you," he proffered. "Designed for speed rather than cargo. She's a lot faster than the ordinary boat in ice. Here she is in the shed."

He flung open the shed door at the back of the building and hauled out the trim, strong craft.

"Built for the business, oarlocks and all!" rejoiced Gayle. "I'll chop a hole, and you men launch her."

Into the hole that Gayle broke the boat was launched till it floated free. The three stepped in and, one chopping the ice in front as the craft progressed and the other two working the sweeps which served better than poles, they forged out to midstream.

"Thanks, Severil," yelled Hess, waving the lantern in good-bye as they swung with the current. "And don't forget to give them 16 placer men a good breakfast."

Down from Selkirk past the place of disaster the light poling boat drove. The Voyageur lay as quiet as a derelict, only with rail lights suspended to warn chance prospectors journeying off the creeks. The three partners dropped her behind and sped on, the glare of the lantern in their bow shining weirdly upon the ceaseless pour of mush ice and upon the white, grinning, saw-toothed floes darting at them in the rapids and eddies. All night they voyaged through the increasing cold. Dawn found them halfway to the White River; evening at the Stewart River and here Hess ran up to the telegraph office at Stewart City.

"Did Rooney Ryan wire Dawson from here yesterday?" he yelled over the operator's desk.

"No," answered the operator. "Ryan hasn't been here in a month."

"Thunderation!" snarled Hess. "Here, give me a message slip, quick."

"You can't get anything over," the operator told him. "The wire's down to the north somewhere."

"When'd it go down?" bellowed Cronin.

"About noon. We haven't located the"——

But Cronin Hess was racing for the river. "Ryan's cut communications," he shouted to the others, as he jumped into the poling boat. "Hit her up, boys. We can't get to Dawson too quick."

The boat dashed off down river, and eating and snatching an hour's sleep by turns, they came in the gray of another dawn to Dawson City. In on the breast of the freeze-up they drove, with their boat riding a floe to escape being crushed by the jams. They abandoned the craft in midriver, walked over a jumble of upended cakes to the bank and ran upstreet to the Arctic Circle store.

Trudis had just come down from her cabin on the hill and opened the store. She was in the act of putting fresh fuel on the coals of the all-night fire when the door opened, and she sprang up with a cry of joy at the three men's entrance. "In at last!" she greeted, throwing her arms about and kissing, first Gayle and then Thorpe.

"Here, where do I come in?" demanded Cronin, with an injured air.

"You too and also," laughed Trudis, burying her nose in his frosted mustache. "I'm so glad you've brought my husband back, Cronin. But Dawson's asleep yet and doesn't know its good fortune. What was holding you so long?"

But the ex-Marshal, not answering her query, was staring at the empty shelves behind Tru, shelves swept bare as polished glass of even stray beans or coffee grains.

"Why in thunder did you sell, Tru?" he blurted in despair.

"Because I got your message to sell," returned Tru spiritedly, reaching over to a pile of bills, receipts and other documents, and spreading a scrap of paper on the counter under Cronin's eyes. "There it is in black and white and dirt smudges."

The ex-Marshal scanned the paper, and a snarl ripped out of his throat. He rubbed his eyes and passed a hand over the writing as if there was some mesmerism in force, but the writing remained the same.

In pencil scrawl it read:

"Voyageur momentarily delayed above Indian River. Piston heated. In Dawson in four hours. Give as large purchases as wanted at one time. No need to keep reserve, as plenty coming in. Sending this ahead with Ryan, Marlin and Simons in canoe. THORPE."

Portions of the message were as Cronin had written,

It is said that his lovely ladies in colors and blacks and whites plaster the walls of half the huts and "dug-outs" of the English army in France.

Unlike Helleu, who specializes on portraits of society beauties, Kirchner takes his types where he finds them. The chorus girl in all her infinite variety especially engages his facile brush, and he has depicted her in poses innumerable. Chic, graceful, slim and gay, his gallery of theatrical belles constitute an unrivalled beauty show.

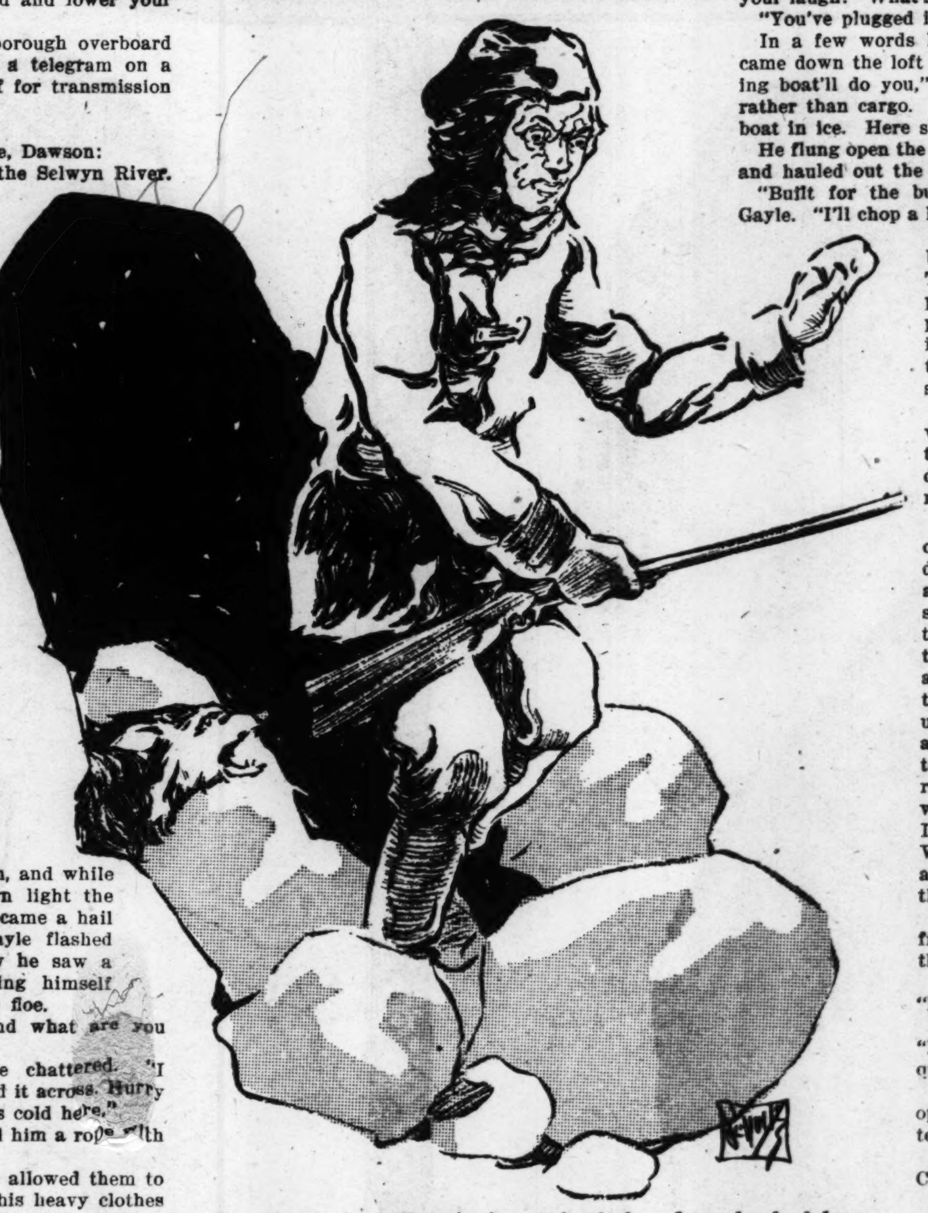
Hess was tentatively feeling with the flat of his blade under water what was either a strand of rope or a long straight root. Slowly he twisted his ax helve and delivered short chops below the surface. Twice he missed. The third time he felt his blade bite. Something snapped, and right at the edge of the raft the gnarled and matted roots of a spruce tree, grotesque and slimy in the lantern light, reared up like some leviathan of the deeps. Gayle gave a violent shove to clear. The twisted mass scraped the raft poles, heaved in the air and fell again with a mighty splash, and just as the current began to whirl it round end on, Cronin, holding the light close, glimpsed the heavy hempen rope he had severed.

"Sure rock anchored as I said! The other end'll be the same. She was placed square athwart the ordinary course of navigation, and I'll bet a 10-foot quartz lead against a panful of flake gold that that pestiferous pariah of a Ryan placed her. Are you betting, Gayle?"

"No, Cronin, I'm not betting. You have a sure-enough hunch. But what I can't fathom is the reason for this stunt. Can you?"

"There I fall down, too, Gayle. I can't figure out any motive for it. There certainly ain't any motive. They've done it out of pure cussedness. Their story about prospecting up the Pelly was a lie. And they left Thorpe on the bank just because they didn't want to freight the extra weight of him to Stewart and could dispatch the telegram just as well themselves. They don't care a smatter whether the relieving dog teams ever get started or not. They got grub enough for a while—the grub we gave them. They figured we're stalled here for a month and by the time we get to Dawson they'll be out on some far creek with a laugh as long as their trail, but there they cut their cards too deep. Instead of a month from now, we start for Dawson now. If they beat the freeze-up to the golden city, we can, too."



He sprang into the air from the hole where he had been crouching. A huge, umbrella-ribbed, hunger-maddened husky bounded after him. The earth vomited other wolves crazed by the smell of blood and food.

"Cronin," protested Gayle in amazement, "not on this raft! We'll never make the White River."

"No, on a boat procured at Selkirk Post. Savvy? It's back trail for us right sharp."

The slack of the raft rope drawn up by those on deck, Cronin and Gayle worked back to the Voyageur. There they hung a little while they explained things to Capt. Ravigne, pocketed a few handfuls of grub dropped to them and called for Thorpe.

The latter came to the rail rigged out in a dry set of mackinaws.

"What are you going to do?" he asked.

"Beat it for Dawson City to catch the bloody barrators who wrecked our ship," Hess told him. "We're off to Selkirk now for a boat. You coming with us, or would you rather hug the fire a while and have us pick you up here when we come by?"

"I'll go with you," decided Thorpe. "There's no heat in hugging a fire. You scorch your face, and your back is freezing all the time. I'll go. A run'll warm me better."

He dropped down on to the makeshift raft, cut the rope, and the three poled across to the western shore of the Yukon. They retained one lantern, and by its glare they broke a channel in the shore ice and through the channel came to land. The moment they struck dry ground they were off, running with the stampeder's swift lope, Gayle to the fore with the lantern, Cronin next, and Thorpe warming his congealed blood in the rear. For a good two hours they kept it up, making a brief pause every half hour for a breathing spell. The sky was thickly overcast. There was no hint of stars or aurora to outline the contour of the rough and tortuous shore, but the joggling lantern flickering on Outremont's hip saved them from bruises and broken bones.

They struck Selkirk near midnight. The post was all in darkness, but at their pounding on the trading-room door Severil stuck his head out of the loft above. The lantern was partially hidden by Gaylee's coat. Severil could not guess at the composition of the midnight group, but he saw a sprinkling of arms and legs with here and there a shoulder or a head in the glow of the mellow light.

"Where are you from?" he demanded. "Who are you? How many of you? And how much grub have you got?"

"We're just down off the Macmillan River," boomed Cronin, disguising his voice in a hoarse croak. "Placer miners. Sixteen of us. And we haven't so much as a sour flapjack left. Hurry up and let us in. We're hungry."

Whereat Severil leaned far out of the loft with an astonishing flow of choice expletives and consigned placer mining and its 16 exponents to uttermost perdition. In the middle of his tirade the three men burst into guffaws.

"Oh, quit it, Severil!" chuckled Gayle. "Hess sure got your goat with the word grub. But we're not going to eat you out this time. All we want is a boat that floats."

"By thunder!" exclaimed the abashed Severil. "It's you boys, eh? Bit of a fooler, eh? Tarnation, you've lifted such a weight from my mind that I forgive you your laugh! What's wrong? Steamer smash?"

"You've plugged it first crack," Cronin informed.

In a few words he went on to explain, and Severil came down the loft stairs on the run. "I've a light poling boat'll do you," he proffered. "Designed for speed rather than cargo. She's a lot faster than the ordinary boat in ice. Here she is in the shed."

He flung open the shed door at the back of the building and hauled out the trim, strong craft.

"Built for the business, oarlocks and all!" rejoiced Gayle. "I'll chop a hole, and you men launch her."

Into the hole that Gayle broke the boat was launched till it floated free. The three stepped in and, one chopping the ice in front as the craft progressed and the other two working the sweeps which served better than poles, they forged out to midstream.

"Thanks, Severil," yelled Hess, waving the lantern in good-bye as they swung with the current. "And don't forget to give them 16 placer men a good breakfast."

Down from Selkirk past the place of disaster the light poling boat drove. The Voyageur lay as quiet as a derelict, only with rail lights suspended to warn chance prospectors journeying off the creeks. The three partners dropped her behind and sped on, the glare of the lantern in their bow shining weirdly upon the ceaseless pour of mush ice and upon the white, grinning, sawtoothed floes darting at them in the rapids and eddies. All night they voyaged through the increasing cold. Dawn found them halfway to the White River; evening at the Stewart River and here Hess ran up to the telegraph office at Stewart City.

"Did Rooney Ryan wire Dawson from here yesterday?" he yelled over the operator's desk.

"No," answered the operator. "Ryan hasn't been here in a month."

"Thunderation!" snarled Hess. "Here, give me a message slip, quick."

"You can't get anything over," the operator told him. "The wire's down to the north somewhere."

"When'd it go down?" bellowed Cronin.

"About noon. We haven't located the"——

But Cronin Hess was racing for the river. "Ryan's cut communications," he shouted to the others, as he jumped into the poling boat. "Hit her up, boys. We can't get to Dawson too quick."

The boat dashed off down river, and eating and snatching an hour's sleep by turns, they came in the gray of another dawn to Dawson City. In on the breast of the freeze-up they drove, with their boat riding a floe to escape being crushed by the jams. They abandoned the craft in midriver, walked over a jumble of upended cakes to the bank and ran upstreet to the Arctic Circle store.

Trudis had just come down from her cabin on the hill and opened the store. She was in the act of putting fresh fuel on the coals of the all-night fire when the door opened, and she sprang up with a cry of joy at the three men's entrance. "In at last!" she greeted, throwing her arms about and kissing, first Gayle and then Thorpe.

"Here, where do I come in?" demanded Cronin, with an injured air.

"You too and also," laughed Trudis, burying her nose in his frosted mustache. "I'm so glad you've brought my husband back, Cronin. But Dawson's asleep yet and doesn't know its good fortune. What was holding you so long?"

But the ex-Marshal, not answering her query, was staring at the empty shelves behind Tru, shelves swept bare as polished glass of even stray beans or coffee grains.

"Why in thunder did you sell, Tru?" he blurted in despair.

"Because I got your message to sell," returned Tru spiritedly, reaching over to a pile of bills, receipts and other documents, and spreading a scrap of paper on the counter under Cronin's eyes. "There it is in black and white and dirt smudges."

The ex-Marshal scanned the paper, and a snarl ripped out of his throat. He rubbed his eyes and passed a hand over the writing as if there was some mesmerism in force, but the writing remained the same.

In pencil scrawl it read:

"Voyageur momentarily delayed above Indian River. Piston heated. In Dawson in four hours. Give as large purchases as wanted at one time. No need to keep reserve, as plenty coming in. Sending this ahead with Ryan, Marlin and Simons in canoe. THORPE."

Portions of the message were as Cronin had written, the hot muzzle. The rifle fell away from the shoulder. The black speck running toward the ranchhouse stumbled, as if stricken by an ax, and sprawled headlong on the trail. Throwing the lever again like lightning, De Spain held the rifle back to his cheek.

He did not fire. Second after second he waited, Nan, lying very still, watching, mute, the dull-red mark above the wet rifle butt. No one had need to tell her what had happened. Too well she read the story in De Spain's face and in what she saw, as he knelt, perfectly still, only waiting, to be sure there was no ruse. She watched the rifle come slowly down, unfired, and saw his drawn face slowly relax. Without taking his eyes off the sprawling speck, he rose stiffly to his feet. As if in a dream she saw his head stretched toward her and heard, as he looked across the far gulf, one word: "Come!"

They reached the end of the trail. De Spain, rifle in hand, looked back. The sun, bursting in splendor across the great desert, splashed the valley and the low-lying ridge with ribboned gold. Farther up the Gap, horsemen, stirred by the firing, were riding rapidly down toward Sassoon's ranchhouse. But the black thing in the sunshine lay quite still.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Lefever to the Rescue.

LEFEVER, chafing in the aspen grove under the restraint of waiting in the storm, was ready long before daylight to break orders and ride in to find De Spain.

With the first peep of dawn, and with his men facing him in their saddles, Lefever made a short explanation.

"I don't want any man to go into the Gap with me this morning under any misunderstanding or any false pretense," he began cheerfully. "Bob Scott and Bull will stay right here. If, by any chance, De Spain makes his way out while the rest of us are hunting for him, you'll be here to signal us—three shots, Bob—or to ride in with De Spain to help carry the rest of us out. Now, it's like this," he added, addressing the others. "You, all of you know, or ought to know—everybody 'twixt here and the railroad towns—that De Spain and Nan Morgan have fastened up to each other for the long ride down the dusty trail together. That, I take it, is their business. But her uncle, old Duke, and Gale, and the whole bunch, I hear, turned dead sore on it, and have fixed it up to beat them. You all know the Morgans. They're some bunch—and they stick for one another like hornets, and all hold together in a fight. So I don't want any man to ride in there with me thinking he's going to a wedding. He isn't. He may or may not be going to a funeral, but he's not going to a shivaree."

Frank Elpaso glanced sourly at his companions. "I guess everybody here is wise, John."

"I know you are, Frank," retorted Lefever testily; "that's all right. I'm only explaining. And I dont' want you to get sore on me if I don't show you a fight." Frank Elpaso grunted. "I am under orders." John waved his hand. "And I can't do anything"——

"But talk," growled Frank Elpaso, not waving his hand.

Lefever started hotly forward in his saddle. "Now, look here, Frank." He pointed his finger at the objecting ranger. "I'm here for business, not for pleasure. Any time I'm free you can talk to me"——

"Not till somebody gags you, John," interposed Elpaso moodily.

"Look here, Elpaso," demanded Lefever, spurring his horse smartly toward the Texan, "are you looking for a fight with me right here and now?"

"Yes, here and now," declared Elpaso fiercely.

"Or, there and then," interposed Kennedy, ironically, "some time, somewhere, or no time, nowhere. Having heard all of which, a hundred and fifty times from you two fellows, let us have peace. You've pulled it so often, over at Sleepy Cat, they've got it in double-faced, red-seal records. Let's get started."

"Right you are, Farrell," assented Lefever, "but"——

"Second verse, John. You're boss here. What are we going to do? That's all we want to know.'

"Henry's orders were to wait here till 10 o'clock this morning. There's been firing inside twice since 12 o'clock last night. He told me to pay no attention to that. But if the whole place hadn't been under water all night, I'd have gone in, anyway. This last time it was two high-powered guns, picking at long range and, if I'm any judge of rifles and the men probably behind them, someone must have got hurt. It's all a guess—but I'm going in there, peaceably if I can, to look for Henry de Spain; if we are fired on—we've got to fight for it. And if there's any talking to be done"——

"You can do it," grunted Elpaso.

"Thank you, Frank. And I will do it. I need not say that Kennedy will ride ahead with me, Elpaso and Wickwire with Tommie Meggeson."

Leaving Scott in the trees, the little party trotted smartly up the road, picking their way through the pools and across the brawling streams that tore over the trail toward Duke Morgan's place. The condition of the trail broke their formation continually and Lefever, in the circumstances, was not sorry. His only anxiety was to keep Elpaso from riding ahead far enough to embroil them in a quarrel before he himself should come up.

Half-way to Duke's house they found a small bridge had gone out. It cut off the direct road, and, at Elpaso's suggestion, they crossed over to follow the ridge up the valley. Swimming their horses through the backwater that covered the depression to the south, they gained the elevation and proceeded, unmolested, on their way. As they approached Sassoon's place, Elpaso, riding ahead, drew up his horse and sat a moment studying the trail and casting an occasional glance in the direction of the ranch house, which lay under the brow of a hill ahead.

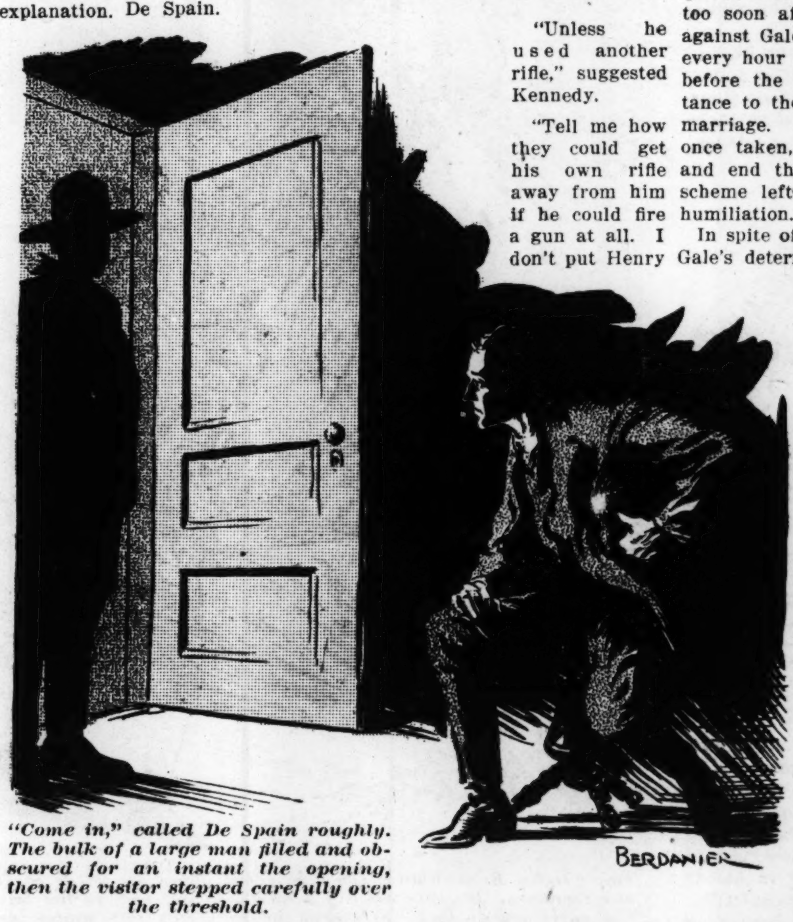
When Lefever rode up to him, he saw the story that Elpaso was reading in the roadway. It told of a man shot in his tracks as he was running toward the house—and, in the judgment of these men, fatally shot—for, while his companions spread like a fan in front of him, Lefever got off his horse and, bending intently over the sudden page to point of a man's life, recast the scene that had taken place, where he stood, half an hour earlier. Some little time Lefever spent patiently deciphering the story printed in the rutted road, and marked by a wide crimson splash in the middle of it. He rose from his study at length and followed back the trail of the running feet that had been stricken at the pool. He stopped in front of a fragment of rock jutting up beside the road, studied it a while and, looking about, picked up a number of empty cartridge shells, examined them, and tossed them away. Then he straightened up and looked searchingly across the Gap. Only the great, silent face of El Capitan confronted him. It told no tales.

"If this was Henry de Spain," muttered Elpaso, when Lefever rejoined his companions, "he won't care whether you join him now, or at 10 o'clock, or never."

"That is not Henry," asserted Lefever with his usual cheer. "Not within forty rows of apple trees. It's not Henry's gun, not Henry's heels, not Henry's hair, and thereby, not Henry's head that was hit that time. But it was to a finish—and blamed if at first it didn't scare me. I thought it might be Henry. Hang it, get down and see for yourselves, boys."

Elpaso answered his invitation with an inquiry. "Who was this fellow fighting with?"

"That, also is a question. Certainly not with Henry de Spain, because the other fellow, I think, was using soft-nosed bullets. No white man does that, much less De Spain.



"Come in," called De Spain roughly. The bulk of a large man filled and obscured for an instant the opening, then the visitor stepped carefully over the threshold.

"Unless he used another rifle," suggested Kennedy.

"Tell me how they could get his own rifle away from him if he could fire a gun at all. I don't put Henry quite as high with a rifle as with a revolver—if you want to split hairs—mind, I say, if you want to split hairs. But no man that's ever seen him handle either would want to try to take any kind of a gun from him. Whoever it was," Lefever got up into his saddle again, "threw some ounces of lead into that piece of rock back there, though I don't understand how anyone could see a man lying behind it.

"Anyway, whoever was hit here has been carried down the road. We'll try Sassoon's ranch house for news, if they don't open on us with rifles before we get there."

In the sunshine a man in shirt sleeves, and leaning against the jamb, stood in the open doorway of Sassoon's shack, watching the invaders as they rode around the hill and gingerly approached. Lefever recognized Satt Morgan. He flung a greeting to him from the saddle.

Satt answered in kind, but he eyed the horsemen with reserve when they drew up, and he seemed to Lefever altogether less responsive than usual. John sparred with him for information, and Satterlee gave back words without any.

"Can't tell us anything about De Spain, eh?" echoed Lefever at length. "All right, Satt, we'll find somebody that can. Is there a bridge over to Duke's on this trail?"

Satt's nose wrinkled into his normal smile. "There is a bridge"—— The report of three shots in the distance, seemingly from the mouth of the Gap, interrupted him. He paused in his utterance. There were no further shots, and he resumed: "There is a bridge that way, yes, but it was washed out last night. They're blockaded, Duke and Gale are over there. They're pretty sore on your man De Spain. You'd better keep away from 'em this morning unless you're looking for trouble."

Lefever, having all needed information from Scott's signal, raised his hand quickly. "Not at all," he exclaimed, leaning forward to emphasize his words and adding the full orbit of his eye to his sincerity of manner. "Not at all, Satt. This is all friendly, all friendly. But," he coughed slightly, as if in apology, "if Henry shouldn't turn up all right, we'll—ahem—be back."

None of his companions needed to be told how to get prudently away. At a nod from Lefever, Tommie Meggeson, Elpaso and Wickwire wheeled their horses, rode rapidly back to the turn near the hill and, facing about, halted, with their rifles across their arms. Lefever and Kennedy followed leisurely, and the party withdrew, leaving Satterlee, unmoved, in the sunny doorway. Once out of sight, Lefever led the way rapidly down the Gap to the rendezvous.

Of all the confused impressions that crowded Nan's memory after the wild night on Music Mountain, the most vivid was that of a noticeably light-stepping and not ungraceful fat man advancing, hat in hand, to greet her as she stood with De Spain, weary and bedraggled, in the aspen grove.

A smile flamed from her eyes when, turning at once, he rebuked De Spain with dignity for not introducing him to Nan, and while De Spain made apologies Lefever introduced himself.

"And is this," murmured Nan, looking at him quizzically, "really Mr. John Lefever whom I've heard so many stories about?

She was conscious of his pleasing eyes and even teeth as he smiled again. "If they have come from Mr. de Spain—I warn you," said John, "take them with all reserve."

"But they haven't all come from Mr. de Spain."

"If they come from any of my friends, discredit them in advance. You could believe what my enemies say," he ran on; then added ingenuously, "if I had any enemies!" To De Spain he talked very little. It seemed to take but few words to exchange the news. Lefever asked gingerly about the fight. He made no mention whatever of the crimson pool in the road near Sassoon's hut.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Puppets of Fate.

THE house in the Gap that had sheltered Nan for many years seemed never so empty as the night she left it with De Spain. In spite of his vacillation, her uncle was deeply attached to her. She made his home for him. He had never quite understood it before, but the realization came only too soon after he had lost her. And his resentment against Gale as the cause of her leaving deepened with every hour that he sat next day with his stubborn pipe before the fire. Duke had acceded with much reluctance to the undertaking that was to force her into a marriage. Gale had only partly convinced him that once taken, the step would save her from De Spain and end their domestic troubles. The failure of the scheme left Duke sullen, and his nephew sore with humiliation.

In spite of the alarms and excitement of the night, of Gale's determination that De Spain should never leave the Gap with Nan, and of the rousing of every man within it to cut off their escape, Duke stubbornly refused to pursue the man he so hated or even to leave the house in any effort to balk his escape. But Gale, and Sassoon, who had even keener reason for hating De Spain, left Duke to sulk as he would, and set about getting the enemy without any help from the head of the house. In spite of the caution with which De Spain had covered his movements, and the flood and darkness of the night, Sassoon by a mere chance had got wind through one of his men of De Spain's appearance at Duke Morgan's, and had begun to plan, before Nan and De Spain had got out of the house, how to trap him.

Duke heard from Pardaloe, during the night and the early morning, every report with indifference. He only sat and smoked, hour after hour, in silence. But after it became known that De Spain had, beyond doubt, made good his escape, and had Nan with him, the old man's sullenness turned into rage, and when Gale, rankling with defeat, stormed in to see him in the morning, he caught the full force of Duke's wrath. The younger man was taken aback by the outbreak and in drink himself, returned his abuse without hesitation or restraint. Pardaloe came between them before harm was done, but the two men parted with the anger of their quarrel deepened.

When Nan rode with De Spain into Sleepy Cat that morning, Lefever had already told their story to Jeffries over the telephone from Calabasas, and Mrs. Jeffries had thrown open her house to receive Nan. Weary from exposure, confusion and hunger, Nan was only too grateful for a refuge.

On the evening of the second day De Spain was invited to join the family at supper. In the evening the Jeffries went downtown.

De Spain was talking with Nan in the library room when the telephone bell rang in the library.

De Spain took the call, and a man's voice answered his salutation. The speaker asked for Mr. De Spain and seemed particular to make sure of his identity.

"This," repeated De Spain more than once, and somewhat testily, "is Henry de Spain speaking."

"I'd like to have a little talk with you, Mr. de Spain."

"Go ahead."

"I don't mean over the telephone. Could you make it convenient to come downtown somewhere, say to Tenison's, any time this evening?"

The thought of a possible ambuscade deterred the listener less than the thought of leaving Nan, from whom he was unwilling to separate himself for a moment. Likewise, the possibility of an attempt to kidnap her in his absence was not overlooked. On the other hand, if the message came from Duke and bore some suggestion of a compromise in the situation, De Spain was unwilling to lose it. With these considerations turning in his mind, he answered the man brusquely: "Who are you?"

The vein of sharpness in the question met with no deviation from the slow, even tone of the voice at the other end of the wire. "I am not in position to give you my name," came the answer, "at least, not over the wire."

A vague impression suddenly crossed De Spain's mind that somewhere he had heard the voice before. "I can't come downtown tonight," returned De Spain abruptly. "If you'll come to my office tomorrow morning at nine, I'll talk with you."

A pause preceded the answer. "It wouldn't hardly do for me to come to your office in daylight. But if it would I couldn't do it tomorrow, because I shan't be in town in the morning."

"Where are you talking from now?"

"I'm at Tenison's place."

"Hang you," said De Spain instantly, "I know you now." But he said the words to himself, not aloud.

"Do you suppose I could come up to where you are to-

"Kitchener's Mob"

by the smoke, now silhouetted for an instant against a glare of blinding light.

An hour passed and there was no change in the situation.

"Fritzie's a tough old bird," said Tommy. "'E's a-go'n' to die game, you got to give it to 'im."

The excitement was intense. Urgent calls for "More lemons! More cricket balls!" were sent back constantly. Box after box, each containing a dozen grenades, were passed up the line from hand to hand, and still the call for "More bombs!" We couldn't send them up fast enough.

The wounded were coming back in twos and threes. One lad, his eyes covered with a bloody bandage, was led by another with a shattered hand.

"Poor old Tich! She went off right in 'is face! But you did yer bit, Tich! You ought to 'a' seen 'im, you blokes! Wasn't 'e a-lettin' 'em 'ave it!"

Another man hobbled past on one foot, supporting himself against the side of the trench.

"Got a Blightey one," he said gleefully. "So long, you lads! I'll be with you again arter the 'olidays."

Those who do not know the horrors of modern warfare cannot readily understand the joy of the soldier at receiving a wound which is not likely to prove serious. A bullet in the arm or the shoulder, even though it shatters the bone, or a piece of shrapnel or shell casing in the leg, was always a matter for congratulation. These were "Blightey wounds." When Tommy received one of this kind, he was a candidate for hospital in "Blightey," as England is affectionately called. For several months he would be far away from the awful turmoil. His body would be clean; he would be rid of the vermin and sleep comfortably in a bed at night. The strain would be relaxed, and, who knows, the war might be over before he was again fit for active service. And so the less seriously wounded made their way painfully but cheerfully along the trench, on their way to the field dressing station, the motor ambulance, the hospital ship, and—home! while their unwounded comrades gave them words of encouragement and good cheer.

"Good luck to you, Sammy boy! If you sees my missus, tell 'er I'm as right as rain!"

"Sammy, you lucky blighter! W'en yer convalescin', 'ave a pint of ale at the W'ite Lion fer me."

"An' a good feed o' fish an' chips fer me, Sammy. Mind yer foot! There's a 'ole just 'ere!"

"'Ere comes old Sid! W'ere you caught it, mate?"

"In me bloomin' shoulder. It ain't 'arf givin' it to me!"

"Never you mind, Sid! Blightey fer you, boy!"

"Hi, Sid! Tell me old lady I'm still up an' comin', will you? You know w'ere she lives, 46 Bromley road."

One lad, his nerve gone, pushed his way frantically down the trench. He had "funked it." He was hysterical with fright and crying in a dry, shaking voice:

"It's too 'orrible! I can't stand it! Blow you to 'ell they do! Look at me! I'm slathered in blood! I can't stand it! They ain't no man can stand it!"

He met with scant courtesy. A trench during an attack is no place for the faint-hearted. An unsympathetic Tommy kicked him savagely.

"Go 'ide yerself, you bloody little coward!"

"More lemons! More cricket balls!" and at last, Victory! Fritizie had "chucked it," and men of the Royal Engineers, that wonderfully efficient corps, were on the spot with picks and shovels and sandbags, clearing out of the wreckage, and building a new barricade at the farther end of the communication trench.

It was only a minor affair, one of many which take place nightly in the firing line. Two score yards of trench were captured. The cost was, perhaps, one man per yard; but as Tommy said:

"It ain't the trench wot counts. It's the more-ale. Bucks the blokes up to win, an' that's worth a 'ole bloomin' army corps."

Rumors of all degrees of absurdity reached us. The enemy was massing on our right, on our left, on our immediate front. The division was to attack at dawn under cover of a hundred bomb-dropping battleplanes. Units of the new armies to the number of 500,000 were concentrating behind the line from La Bassee to Arras, and another tremendous drive was to be made in conjunction with the French. (As a matter of fact, we knew less of what was actually happening than did people in England and America.) Most of these reports sprang, full grown, from the fertile brains of officers' servants. Scraps of information which they gathered while in attendance at the officers' mess dugout were pieced together, and much new material of their own invention added. The striving was for piquancy rather than plausibility. A wild tale was always better than a dull one; furthermore the "batmen" were our only sources of official information, and could always command a hearing. When one of them came down the trench with that mysterious "I-could-a-tale-unfold" air, he was certain to be halted by willingly gullible comrades.

"Wot's up, Jerry? Anything new?"

"Nor 'arf! Now, keep this under yer 'ats, you blokes! My gov'nor was a-talkin' to Maj. Bradley this mornin' w'ile I was a-mykin' 'is tea, an' 'e says"——

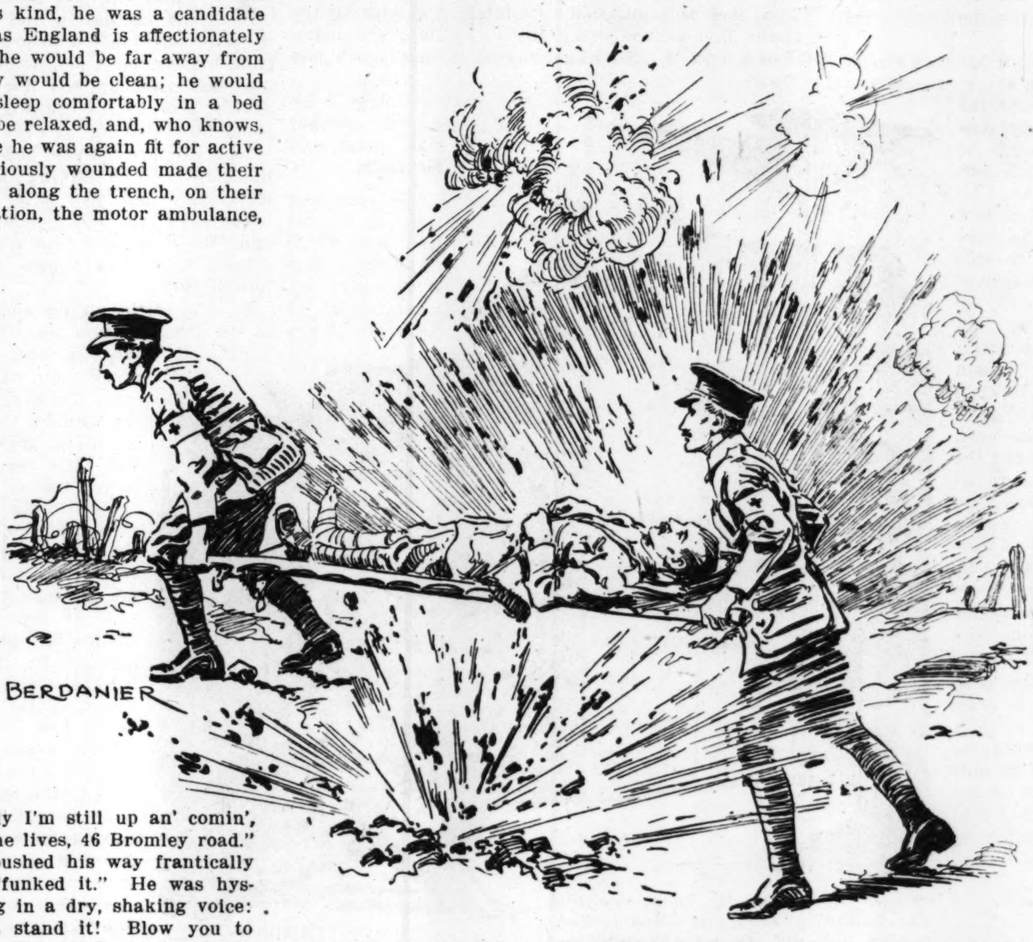
Then followed the thrilling narrative, a disclosure of official secrets while groups of war-worn Tommies listened with eager interest. "Spreading the News" was a tragi-comedy enacted daily in the trenches.

But we were not entirely in the dark. The signs which preceded an engagement were unmistakable, and toward the middle of October there was general agreement that an important action was about to take place. British aircraft had been patrolling our front ceaselessly for hours. Several battalions (including our own, which had just gone into reserve at Vermelles) were placed on bomb-carrying fatigue. As we went up to the firing line with our first load, we found all of the support trenches filled to overflowing with troops in fighting order.

We reached the first line as the preliminary bombardment started. Scores of batteries were concentrating their fire on the enemy's trenches directly opposite us. It is useless to attempt to depict what lay before us as we looked over the parapet. The trenches were hidden from view in a cloud of flame and dirt. The earth was like a muddy sea dashed high in spray against hidden rocks.

The men who were to lead the attack were standing rifle in hand, waiting for the sudden cessation of fire, which would be the signal for them to mount the parapet. Bombers and bayonet men alternated in series of two. The bombers wore their medieval-looking shrapnel-proof helmets and heavy canvas grenade coats with 12 pockets sagging with bombs. Their rifles were slung on their backs to give them free use of their hands.

Everyone was smoking—some calmly, some with short, nervous puffs. It was interesting to watch the faces of the men. One could read, almost as a certainty, what was going on in their minds. Some of them were thinking of the terrible events so near at hand. They were imagining the horrors of the attack in detail. Others were unconcernedly intent upon adjusting straps of their equipment, or in rubbing their clips of ammunition with an oily rag. Several men were singing to a mouth-organ accompaniment. I saw their lips moving, but not a sound reached me above the din of the guns, although I was standing only a few yards distant. It was like an absurd pantomime.



One plucky Englishman was discovered about 50 yards in front of our trenches. He was waving a handkerchief tied to the handle of his entrenching tool. Stretcher bearers ran out under fire and brought him in.

As I watched them, the sense of the unreality of the whole thing swept over me more strongly than ever before. "This can't be true," I thought. "I have never been a soldier. There isn't any European war." I had the curious feeling that my body and brain were functioning quite apart from me. I was only a slow-witted, incredulous spectator looking on with a stupid animal wonder. I have learned that this feeling is quite common among men in the trenches. A part of the mind works normally, and another part, which seems to be one's essential self, refuses to assimilate and classify experiences so unusual, so different from anything in the catalogue of memory.

For two hours and a half the roar of guns continued. Then it stopped as suddenly as it had begun. An officer near me shouted, "Now, men! Follow me!" and clambered over the parapet. There was no hesitation. In a moment the trench was empty save for the bomb-carrying parties and an artillery observation officer, who was jumping up and down on the firing bench, shouting:

"Go it, the Norfolks! Go it, the Norfolks! My God! Isn't it fine! Isn't it splendid!"

There you have the British officer true to type. He is a sportsman; next to taking part in a fight he loves to see one—and he says "isn't" not "ain't," even under stress of the greatest excitement.

The German artillery, which had been reserving fire, now poured forth a deluge of shrapnel. The sound of rifle fire was scattered and ragged at first, but it increased steadily in volume. Then came the "boiler-factory chorus," the sharp rattle of dozens of machine guns. The bullets were flying over our heads like swarms of angry wasps. A ration-box board which I held above the parapet was struck almost immediately. Fortunately for the artillery officer, a disrespectful N. C. O. pulled him down into the trench.

"It's no use throwin' yer life aw'y, sir. You won't 'elp 'em by barkin' at 'em."

He was up again almost at once, coolly watching the progress of the troops from behind a small barricade of sandbags, and reporting upon it to batteries several miles in rear. The temptation to look over the parapet was not to be resisted. The artillery lengthened their ranges. I saw the curtain of flame-shot smoke leap at a bound to the next line of German trenches.

Within a few moments several lines of reserves filed into the front trench and went over the parapet in support of the first line, advancing with heads down like men bucking into the fury of a gale. We saw them only for an instant as they jumped to their feet outside the trench and rushed forward. Many were hit before they had passed through the gaps in our barbed wire. Those who were able crept back and were helped into the trench by comrades. One man was killed as he was about to reach a place of safety. He lay on the parapet with his arms hanging down inside the trench. His face was that of a boy of 21 or 22. I carry the memory of it with me today as vividly as when I left the trenches in November.

Following the attacking infantry were those other soldiers whose work, though less spectacular than that of the riflemen, was just as essential and quite as dangerous. Royal Engineers, with picks and shovels and sandbags, rushed forward to reverse the parapets of the captured trenches, and to clear out the wreckage, while the riflemen waited for the launching of the first counter attack. They were preceded by men of the Signaling Corps, who advanced swiftly and skillfully, unwinding spools of insulated telephone wire as they went. Bomb carriers, stretcher bearers, intent upon their widely divergent duties, followed. The work of salvage and destruction went hand in hand.

The battle continued until evening, when we received orders to move up to the firing line. We started at 5 o'clock, and although we had less than three miles to go, we did not reach the end of our journey until 4 the next morning, owing to the fatigue parties and the long stream of wounded which blocked the communication trenches. For more than an hour we lay just outside of the trench looking down on a seemingly endless procession of casualties. Some of the men were crying like children, some groaning pitifully, some laughing despite their wounds. I heard dialects peculiar to every part of England, and fragmentary accounts of hair-breadth escapes and desperate fighting.

"They was a big Dutchman comin' at me from the other side. Lucky fer me that I 'ad a round in me breach. He'd 'a' got me if it 'adn't 'a' been fer that ca'tridge. I let 'im 'ave it an' 'e crumpled up like a wet blanket."

"Seven of them, an' that dazed like, they wasna good for anything. Mon, it would ha' been fair murder to kill 'em! They wasna wantin' to fight."

Boys scarcely out of their 'teens talked with the air of veterans. Many of them had been given their first taste of real fighting, and they were experiencing a very common and natural reaction. Their courage had been put to the most severe test and had not given way. It was not difficult to understand their elation, and one could forgive their boastful talk of bloody deeds. One highly strung lad was dangerously near to nervous breakdown. He had bayoneted his first German and could not forget the experience. He told of it over and over as the line moved slowly along.

"I couldn't get me bayonet out," he said. "W'en e' fell 'e pulled me over on top of 'im. I 'ad to put me foot against 'im an' pull, and then it came out with a jerk."

We met small groups of prisoners under escort of proud and happy Tommies who gave us conflicting reports of the success of the attack. Some of them said that two more lines of German trenches had been taken; others declared that we had broken completely through and that the enemy was in full retreat. Upon arriving at our position, we were convinced that at least one trench had been captured; but when we mounted our guns and peered cautiously over the parapet, the lights which we saw in the distance were the flashes of German rifles, not the street lamps of Berlin.

Meanwhile, the inhumanity of a war without truces was being revealed to us on every hand. Hundreds of bodies were lying between the opposing lines of trenches and there was no chance to bury them. Fatigue parties were sent out at night to dispose of those lying close to the parapets, but the work was constantly delayed and interrupted by persistent sniping and heavy shell fire. Others farther out lay where they had fallen day after day and week after week. Many an anxious mother in England was seeking news of a son whose body had become a part of the Flemish landscape.

During the week following the commencement of the offensive, the wounded were brought back in twos and threes from the contested area over which attacks and counter attacks were taking place. One plucky Englishman was discovered about 50 yards in front of our trenches. He was waving a handkerchief tied to the handle of his intrenching tool. Stretcher bearers ran out under fire and brought him in. He had been wounded in the foot when his company was advancing up the slope 1500 yards away. When it was found necessary to retire he had been left with many dead and wounded comrades, far from the possibility of help by friends. He had bandaged his wound with his first-aid field dressing and started crawling back, a few yards at a time. He secured food from the haversacks of dead comrades, and at length, after a week of painful creeping, reached our lines.

Another of our comrades was discovered by a listening patrol, six days after he had been wounded. He, too, had been struck down close to the enemy's second line. Two kindhearted German sentries, to whom he had signaled, crept out at night and gave him hot coffee to drink. He begged them to carry him in, but they told him they were forbidden to take any wounded prisoners. As he was unable to crawl, he must have died had it not been for the keen ears of the men of the listening patrol. A third victim whom I saw was brought in at daybreak by a working party. He had been shot in the jaw and lay unattended through at least five wet October days and nights. His eyes were swollen shut. Blood-poisoning had set in from a wound but by looking closely he could see where the former words had been erased in places and the distorted version substituted.

"It's not our message, Tru," he declared. "Our message was:

"Voyageur stove and stalled above the Selwyn River. Propeller broken, hull ripped. In Dawson in a month. Cut all sales to quarter-pound packages at one time. Try to keep some reserve as nothing can go on. Coming fast myself with Ryan, Marlin and Simons in canoe.

"THORPE."

"Thorpe went on with them to wire that message from Stewart, but they got the jump on Thorpe before they'd gone far and swiped the paper. Also they cut the wire this side of Stewart so we couldn't possibly get you."

"The brazen rascals!" exclaimed Trudis. "And they gave it to me as a message from you on the steamer at Indian River. But are you blaming me for selling?"

"No, Tru, he's not," Outremont cut in, passing an arm about her waist. "The paper said sell, and you sold. Now, how much did you sell?"

"All I had reserved," she confessed. "We were down to the reserve. The C. D. C., N. A. T. & T., A. C. C. and N. C. stores were sold out over a week ago Since that the run's been on the Arctic Circle I staved it off and staved it off, cut the purchases 50 and 75 per cent, skimped and hoarded, but it was no good When 12,000 people besiege one store, stuff can't last. All I had left when your word came to me was the reserve which you cautioned me beforehand to hold till the Voyageur was heard from. When I took off the embargo, it went in an hour."

"How much?" asked Thorpe. "How many pounds?"

"Roughly speaking, 12 tons! About two pounds a person, spread over all Dawson! It sold at noon yesterday. The city's been on short rations for a fortnight, and they ate it in one meal. Understand? They imagined the Voyageur was at Indian River, 18 miles away, and due before supper. I might as well confess that I ate two pounds for dinner myself. You can eat a pretty good meal after being on diet for two weeks. But I didn't eat any supper last night, and I haven't eaten any breakfast this morning."

"Neither have we eaten any breakfast," informed Gayle. "And we've bolted only a few handfuls of food in 30 hours. We made a race to reach you before Ryan and the rest, but they had the faster craft."

"Yes, and Dawsonites were just ready to jump for grub as fish jump for flies," enlightened Tru. "I feel pretty bad, Gayle, over the mistake I made. I certainly should have exercised some caution till I saw the smoke of your boat. But the hungry crowd carried me off my feet. I believe I'll cry over it yet."

"No, don't you dare cry," admonished Gayle, hugging her close. "Nobody's reprimanding you. But with the knowledge of Ryan's guile that's burst on my conception I'll show you with all the kindness of a worshiping husband where you might have been a little more wide-awake. Where's our daybook, Tru?"

Trudis took down a thick, moose-skin-covered, yellow-eaved volume from the order desk, and Gayle ran over the pages till he found what he sought.

"Tru," he requested, "would you mind using your pencil for a minute? You're quicker with it than I am. Just make a total of the stuff bought by Ryan and his friends this fall. Never mind the dates. The purchases run through the months of August and September. Just the amount of grub and the price."

Quickly Trudis ferreted through the daybook entries, tabulating the dealings of Ryan and his two friends. The farther she ferreted, the more formidable grew the tabulations. Many articles purchased over and over in small quantities by the three men at different periods without exciting comment at the time now grew into amazing bulk when added together. When Trudis finished, she held a paper list several sheets long, but the stark total worked out thus:

5,000 dozen eggs at 50 cents a dozen	$ 2,500
6,000 pounds of butter at 50 cents a pound	3,000
4,000 pounds sugar at 10 cents a pound	400
100 pounds of tea at $1 a pound	100
400 50-lb. sacks of flour at $4 a sack	1,600
100,000 pounds potatoes at 10 cents a pound	10,000
150,000 pounds bacon at 30 cents a pound	45,000
Total	$62,600

"For the land's sake!" ejaculated Trudis, staring half-unbelieving at the figures. "Who would have imagined it? Sometimes the purchase of those three did seem to me pretty frequent throughout the summer, but I knew they had men working creek claims for them, and in the rush of business the thought never occurred to me again."

"Yes, and that's where you might have been more wide-awake, Tru," smiled Gayle. "If you'd ever stopped to figure when the thought struck you, you'd have scented the conspiracy. He's bought that stuff at summer prices, trickled it off unnoticed and cached it somewhere. Now Dawson's gripped in the fangs of famine and he has a corner in grub. We'll hear from him on the jump!"

They heard far sooner than they expected. Thorpe, who was exploring the remote corners of the Arctic Circle store building in the hope of discovering some overlooked provisions, opened for better light the door of the storeroom at the back.

"Look here!" he cried excitedly. "Look here!"

Thinking he had unearthed a bag of something, they ran out, but Thorpe was pointing to a placard tacked on the outside of the storeroom door. It had been placed there by night, and in the dim morning light neither Trudis nor Gayle nor Cronin had noticed it.

The partners and Trudis stared at it. Cronin had Trudis' total of the daybook entries in his hand. He spread the paper on the door alongside the placard and compared them. The items were not in the same order, but the amounts tallied exactly. In bold scrawl the placard ran:

SELLING ON SOURDOUGH STEEPLE.

150,000 pounds bacon at $2 a pound.
400 50-lb. sacks flour at $40 a sack.
100 pounds tea at $5 a pound.
6000 pounds butter at $8 a pound.
4000 pounds sugar at $1 a pound.
100,000 pounds potatoes at $1 a pound.
5000 dozen eggs at $10 a dozen.

ROONEY RYAN,
MONTE MARLIN,
SEATTLE SIMONS.

The partners had expected this tabulation of the goods, but the prices staggered them. Flour that Ryan had bought for $4 a sack he was offering at $40; bacon bought at 30 cents a pound, at $2; eggs bought for 50 cents a dozen, at $10 a dozen, and so forth throughout the list of foodstuffs. Cronin took Trudis' pencil, penciled in on the edge of the placard what the sellers would realize on each article and added up the whole.

"Five hundred and eighteen thousand, five hundred dollars!" he gasped. "He paid $62,600, and he aims to clear $455,900. Nearly half a million dollars to be coined out of the hunger pangs of famished Dawson! But by the shade of Schwatka the hound ain't going to do it!"

With a swish of his fingers Cronin ripped the placard from top to bottom, threw the remnants in the snow and shook a wrathful fist at Sourdough Steeple sticking up like a needle among the rock cliffs across the mile-wide Yukon.

"He's waiting there for Dawson to come to him, eh?" Cronin ranted. "Well, it's coming all right, and it's coming on the rampage. Tru, you slip round to the other stores and spread the news. And just tell the C. D. C., A. C. C., N. A. T. & T. and N. C. people what the Voyageur hit. Then they can guess what sunk the Canadian and the Hannah. And Thorpe," turning to the youth, "you shuffle yourself, too. Marshal your dogs as you would for the frozen-in Voyageur. In the name of the Arctic Circle Co. solicit or buy up every handy team you can and take them and enough drivers to handle them across the ice to the foot of them cliffs. Also, take a big cask with you—one of them big ones there in the back yard."

"What's the cask for, Cronin?" asked Gayle, as Thorpe and Tru sped out of the store on their respective missions.

"You know Sourdough Steeple, sticking up in an unscalable bowl of cliff with a gap hundreds of feet deep broken off in front and a stringer of rock bridging the gap?"

"Sure, and Ryan, Marlin and Simons'll be intrenched with the range of the rock bridge down to a hair. I wouldn't want to be the man to cross it, and it's the only gateway to the Steeple."

"No, it ain't, either. Don't you remember the hole in the bottom of the bowl, what must have been an underground stream or something at one time?"

"Oh, yes! But a person could hardly worm through it, and besides, its entrance or its outlet maybe, is under the Yukon's surface."

"That's what the cask is for. Thorpe'll cut a hole in the side of the cask to fit that underwater entrance, sink the cask tight against the rock, plaster it about with muck and bail the water out. There we'll have a dry and secret entrance to Ryan's citadel."

"But it'll be worse storming the citadel that way than by the causeway, and I tell you right now I plumb refuse to plug that underground passage with my dead body. I choose starving for my demise."

"Wait till you're asked, partner; wait till you're asked. No man'll be forced into the controversy against his will. Rather than have that, I'll call for volunteers. I don't think numbers'll be lacking. Look at the horde coming up the street already!"

Gayle looked out of the door on a main street packed from wall to wall with befurred humanity marching thousands strong. There had been little need for Trudis to enlarge in spreading the news. The snow avenues of the golden city were already full of men looking for the Voyageur's coming. All Trudis had had to do was to explain the plight of the steamer at that moment. The rest they surmised when they read Ryan's proclamation. For not only had the door of the Arctic Circle store been placarded, but the doors of all the public buildings in the place and also the walls of private cabins. The wrath of the crowd was mighty. They had been on short rations for a fortnight, with but one square meal in that time, the midday feast before the famine. Not a man of them had had a scrap of supper or a bite of breakfast. The gripe of their healthy stomachs was keen, and it would momentarily grow keener unless they could bring themselves to barter for food the food's weight in gold.

This they vowed they would never do, and they howled for the blood of Ryan and appealed to Hess and Outremont in front of the Arctic Circle store to lead them to swift action.

"Come on," they chanted in a chorus of appalling volume. "Come on, you Cronin and Gayle, and smoke out this skunk-souled renegade of a grub cornerer. Let our feet fertilize the earth with his trampled remains."

"Sure," grinned Cronin from the doorway. "Gayle and me was just figuring on enlisting your aid and going across to citadeled Rooney to blow the trumpet of Jericho before his walls. But we need dog teams to freight the stuff back. I've sent Thorpe to get them. I s'pose you fellows have no objections if he appropriates your outfits."

"No, no, none at all!" they answered. "But whoever handles them'll have to be mighty careful. Our dogs is so clean famished that we've had to keep them stick tied. We've been staying our hunger with scraps for a whale of a while and they haven't had a smell at all. They'll sure eat the hands and feet off careless drivers and swallow their heads for dessert."

"Oh, trust Thorpe to manage them! He's handled dogs that hadn't eaten but two meals in three weeks. And all the drivers he gathers together'll be old-timers like himself? Savvy? Don't you worry about the huskies. All you got to worry about is the grub. Gayle, you lead the bunch down to the river bank and pick the soundest crossing—that path we used coming to shore. I forgot to give Thorpe explicit instructions about sinking yon cask. I'll have to sprint after him and tell him. I'll meet you down there in a minute."

At the river bank the horde of Dawson men picked the spot where several ice jams had piled one on top of the other, forming a ridge of considerable height. Here was where the three partners had walked ashore from their boat. The ridge was quite solid when they disembarged, and it was momentarily freezing faster, cemented by the chill river water and the viscid mush ice. At once the men began to cross. Many of them were armed with rifles, and these they held crosswise in their hands to save themselves should they plunge through. Those who carried no rifles broke themselves poles from the scrub timber along the shore, and all worked over safely in single file. Cronin Hess heeled them across, and when he reached the other side he saw a mile behind, the first of the dog teams in charge of Thorpe loping in their trail off to the farther shore.

"Thorpe's no slouch," he told the crowd. "And I tell you we don't want to be slouches, either. Climb up thundering fast."

Up the river wall of rock they swarmed to the flat plateau that crowned it. From its top they could mark Thorpe's string of dog teams, 100 in all, bolting across the ice and disappearing at the base of the shore cliffs.

Beyond the plateau the men stood on, a curving ridge of rock rose 100 feet in the air. It formed a natural and gigantic amphitheater from whose pitted center sheered the thousand-foot spire of granite called the Sourdough Steeple. In ancient time the place had been an immense grotto pierced by a subterranean stream, but volcanic upheavals had crumbled the cavern roof, sealed the source of the stream and split an immense chasm 500 feet deep in the floor of the plateau, a chasm bridged from Sourdough Steeple by a girder of granite.

This entrance to the amphitheater the crowd expected Ryan to be guarding, but as they surged over the face of the plateau, they saw that he had gone one better than guarding. The girder, blown up by dynamite or other heavy explosive, reposed, a pulverized mass, at the bottom of the chasm. Ryan himself, a rifle across his arm, sat smoking on the precipice edge. Marlin, with a rifle on his knees, perched upon the stone grub cache at the foot of Sourdough Steeple; while, although the guarding of the opening of the subterranean passage seemed almost a superfluity since its other end was in the Yukon River, Simons sat sentinel-like with his legs in the hole.

"Day, men!" greeted Ryan laconically. "What's your order?"

A roar like that of a rising tempest rumbled from the throng. A dozen rifles were outflung, and but for the ex-Marshal's sanity Ryan would have been riddled carrion in the depths of the abyss. Cronin cast himself in front of the weapons.

"Hold on, boys," he commanded. "You pull trigger and you knot your own noose. Remember Inspector Strickland and his mounted men over in the barracks yonder. Put the guns down. That play won't fill your stomachs, anyway. Look at Marlin intrenched behind the stone cache and Simons like a badger in his hole. You plug Ryan and you have to reckon with them still. You'll reckon a long while. You'll reckon till your caved-in stomachs hit your spines, and they'll sit tight and gorge and gaze on your emaciated remains. Let your hammers down gently—so! You leave eruptions to me. The tongue is mightier than the Winchester if you know its wiles, and I've sure practiced some. Stand back from the precipice while I hold oration with this low-caste Eskimo."

•Hess shoved back reckless ones in the front whose rashness seemed liable to lead to calamity, and faced Ryan across the gulf.

"Now, you Shylock-hearted heathen, you coiner of women's and children's hunger cries and good men's stomach agonies into miserly gold, I'll give you our order: One hundred and fifty thousands pounds of bacon, 400 sacks of flour, 100 pounds of tea, 6000 pounds of butter, 4000 pounds of sugar, 100,000 pounds of potatoes and 5000 dozen of eggs for nothing! Get me? You fill it or we'll fill it ourselves."

"Like blazes I will," scoffed Ryan. "What do you take me for?"

"For something 50 degrees worse than a cannibal ghoul gnawing on dead men's bones! Are you filling that order?"

"Not by a disastrous sight!"

"Think again. We're going to bridge."

"Go on and bridge. We'll perforate the first man as drops a stick."

"Gayle," requested Cronin, turning to Outremont, "yonder's storm-felled spruce on the edge of the plateau. The chasm's 50 feet wide. Two 60-foot trunks'll do it. Take the men and get them."

A clamor of approbation from the crowd backed Hess' ultimatum. Hundreds with Outremont at their head rushed off to the storm-felled timber and bore back like staffs in their hands two long, straight trees. They laid them down side by side, the butts within a few feet of the precipice edge, and, walking under them from tips to butts, upended them and poised them there, awaiting Cronin's signal for the fall.

As they poised thus, Ryan raised his rifle.

"Don't think it bluff," he warned. "You drop and I'll shoot. I'm dead within my rights. Inspector Strickland and his barracksful of mounted men ain't got any Indian sign on me. This ground I'm cached on is staked in my own name. I 'tended to that in the beginning. I've warned you not to trespass, and the minute you do I'll start pumping self-defense. You may get me, but you'll not get the grub. Monte and Seattle's behind ramparts, and they'll pick you off as fast as you walk them trees."

Tensely the crowd waited, eyes upon Hess' upraised hand for the signal to bridge, rifles sneaking surreptitiously to the level of their hips. For three full minutes Cronin waited, gazing not at Ryan but past Ryan at Seattle Simons, and in another second there happened what he waited for. Seattle suddenly uttered a violent shriek. Legs fang-torn and dripping blood, he sprang into the air from the hole wherein he had been crouching. After him like a missile from the hole bounded a huge, umbrella-ribbed, hunger-maddened husky, and after the first husky bounded another and another and another. Swiftly the earth vomited huskies in a perpetual gush, huskies crazy with the smell of Seattle's blood and the scent of the tons of food cached in the rocky amphitheater.

"There's a living chain of huskies all the way down that passage clean to the Yukon's bank," grinned Hess. "Bringing the dogs across in harness was only a ruse to fool Ryan."

At Seattle's shriek Rooney had whirled round. In a rage he whirled back again. He fired once, wildly, across the chasm, the bullet whacking into the upstanding spruce trees, before springing away in a futile attempt to help Seattle dam the stream of savage beasts. Monte Marlin rushed from the cache to their aid at the same time, but the three might as well have attempted to check the Yukon's ice run in spring. In an overpowering geyser the wolf dogs spouted forth, eyes on fire, fangs agleam and slaver driveling from their famished mouths, and the half dozen that wilted in their air springs from the rifle volley were torn to pieces and bolted almost before they touched the snow. The rest were upon Ryan, Marlin and Simons, slashing their Mackinaw trousers and German socks and splintering with their strong jaws the rifle butts that clubbed them.

Backward yard by yard the trio retreated, now stemming no offensive onrush, but battling desperately in withdrawal to the safety of Sourdough Steeple. Within 10 feet of the base of the rock they flung their weapons in the face of the wolf-dog horde and flung themselves upon the rock needle, clutching, clambering, clawing a way up with their hands while kicking off the animals that clung to their feet. Ten hundred feet up they went

The Autobiography of Pancho Villa—a Horse

He was getting regular meals and cutting out yearlings on a Mexican ranch when the bandits got him and their leader chose him for his own mount — Then, being abandoned, he strayed across the Rio Grande, was picked up and sold to a St. Louisan. -:- -:- -:- -:-

After more than two years of ownership, George C. Wright, St. Louis horseman and owner of a ranch near El Paso, Tex., has discovered that a horse he had brought to St. Louis in a carload of animals, had been commandeered at the San Domingo Ranch in Chihuahua, Northern Mexico, by Gen. Pancho Villa, ridden by that Mexican chieftain, and abandoned as worthless after a season of hard military service. It wandered across the Rio Grande and was taken up by one of the United States Revenue Department river riders. Wright saw the animal in a Government corral and bought it at auction.

Months after the animal was sold, Barney Wayland, foreman of the San Domingo, got track of it from the sale records at the Government corral and wrote to Mr. Wright offering a large price for it. Several horsemen in Northern Mexico made inquiry by letter, but Wright, who keeps the horse at his home at 3869 Magnolia avenue, replied always that it was not for sale. It is a gray roan, 15 hands high and weighs 900 pounds.

"YES, they call me Pancho Villa now, but I never had a name until I came to St. Louis—we don't get or need names where I came from—the San Domingo Ranch, in Chihuahua. I was born and raised right there on that ranch, and, if I do say it myself, both my parents stood well for good blood there. And as long as they kept me there I was all right and did as much as or more than was expected of me. But here in this place—this St. Louis—I haven't done a tap of work since I came here. In fact, I have done nothing only carry Mr. Wright around a little and take Mrs. Webb and her two little girls out in the parks for an hour or two at a time.

"Yes, my feet may look funny to you, but they would be all right in Mexico. We horses don't wear shoes down there and it's only in the sand or desert country where a horse's hoofs will spread so that the edges turn up and have to be trimmed or pinched off. I'm 7 years old and I've never had a shoe on my foot and I've done some traveling in my short life, as my last Mexican owner could tell you if he was here.

"You know—or rather maybe you don't know—all Mexicans are good to their horses. They are hard riders, but they take as good care of us as the country affords. I never did eat grain. They don't ever feed horses grain in Mexico and Mr. Wright knew that, so he never gave me any grain here—only pasture; green in season and dried in the form of hay in winter. You see I've been here three years now and I am beginning to know you have summer and winter weather. Most of the time weather is all the same in Mexico and corrals are about the only things in which a horse ever gets shut up. Nothing doing in the way of barns or stables—in Chihuahua.

"So, you want to know something about my boyhood or colt days on old San Domingo? Well, there isn't much to tell. All Mexican horses are broke by the time they are two years old—most of 'em before that. And they don't put a jaw-breaking curb bit in your mouth and tie a sack over your head when they go to break you. In fact, they calculate to break you in easy and not run the chance of scaring you to death or ruining your nerve or disposition when they train you in Mexico—if you are a horse. They teach you to carry a sack or a youngster on your back before you are a year old and before a bit is ever placed in your mouth you are taught to be familiar with and unafraid of a nose halter or stall made of plain rope. They don't throw a horse down or trip him. They teach him not to be afraid of people while he is young.

"You know my work at home was herding cows—I was brought up to it and they all said I was the best cuttin' horse at the ranch, or maybe in Northern Mexico. A cuttin' horse is one trained to be ridden into a bunch of cattle after animals of a certain size or color. If a buyer comes along and takes 2000 two-year-olds out of a 10,000 herd of all ages and colors and sizes, the work of the herders is to ride into the bunch and cut out the animals sold—separate 'em from the others. Well, you just start in and in a minute you tell by the rein that your rider is after a certain animal—some horses can tell by what their rider says. Most any horse knows enough to go after a calf or a two-year-old, or just a cow when his rider hollers it out to him in so many words.

"Yes, you can learn it in Mexican and then in the Texas language—or in Injun. But you can always understand your rein, if you aren't posted on the lingo. My boss never had to tell me more than once and I could twist around through a crazy wild herd and cut out a two-year-old that was hiding in the middle of a bunch of mixed steers. It's a whole lot easier work drivin' cattle on the range than stickin' around the ranch doin' the cut-out work when they start to sell or ship. But cuttin' out is expert work and generally your owner won't sell you if you got that business down fine.

"I want everybody to know around here that my boss didn't sell me into the army of Villa. The soldiers just came along and took me and a lot of others. They took about a hundred of us—the best ridin' horses on the ranch. They wanted horses that could travel long and hard. I was just gettin' on four years old then, and didn't know what it was to get tired or get winded.

The next day after I was drafted into the army I got to know Villa. I could tell he was the head man of the army because he picked me out for himself before any of the rest of the leaders got a chance to make a choice. But I could understand his Mexican or Spanish lingo all right, and he knew how to treat a horse.

"No monkey business in the army; it was good hard work and I had a chance several times to go 100 miles between sunrise and sunset. Villa could speak picturesque language, but he never spoke it direct at me—at least not many times.

"I lasted longer than the others from our ranch, but I want to tell you that no horse livin' could last a year goin' the gait we went. Of course, I got poor and lean and weak—and just then they got a lot of fresh horses and we were left on the range with nobody to look after us. I wandered about a few days and finally come to the biggest river I had ever seen. It looked better on the other side of it than on our side and a lot of us walked into the water, and when it got too deep to walk we just started to swim and soon we were out on the other bank.

It didn't take long for one of the riding revenue agents of the United States to find us, and in less than a week we were in the corral just outside El Paso advertised for sale, because we didn't have any papers and couldn't show that we had any right in this country. From the looks of us I guess they didn't think we were worth very much, but really, all we needed was regular feed and water for a while. Army life in Mexico is killin' on a horse.

"Well, yes; it was all right leadin' the procession and being right up at the head of things, but while I was good for 100 miles a day for a spell, a horse can't keep that up without regular grass and water and 6 or 7 hours' sleep or rest out of every 24."

Did Guido Reni Fake His Famous Portrait of Beatrice Cenci?

pose that the older man copied the younger man's work. As their portraits of Beatrice are identical in form and treatment, it is far more reasonable to believe that it was the young spendthrift, Guido, who was commissioned to make copies of Mazzolini's portrait of Beatrice.

"Of course, as even the most competent experts are anything but infallible in their judgments respecting old paintings, it is possible that the portrait of Beatrice Cenci that I found in the old Mexican town of Mesilla was not painted by Giovanni Mazzolini, but that it is a very old and exceedingly perfect imitation of Mazzolini's style, technique and coloring, and that the signature is a forgery. Microscopic examination of the underpainting, pigments and old varnish, the threads of the canvas, proves that the picture is very old, but this does not establish anything. The application of latter-day scientific tests, however, such as photographic analysis of technique, leaves but little, if any, room for doubting that the picture in question is a Mazzolini. How it happened to be taken to Mexico must, I fancy, ever remain a matter of pure conjecture."

Viewing the picture as an artist, Dr. Boyd says:

"However much we may doubt that Giovanni Mazzolini painted this portrait of Beatrice Cenci, there can be no doubt as to its surpassing excellence and beauty. That it was painted by a master's hand is conclusively evidenced by the marvelous inward glow and delicate purity of the flesh-tones, the wonderful transparency of the shadows, the exquisite loveliness and childlike innocence of the face, and above all, by the haunting expression of the hopeless sorrow, of the questioning, world-weary soul that seems so appealingly to look out from the tear-stained eyes. None other than a great artist could have expressed such infinite sadness and despair without definitely delineating grief."

The Teeth of Famine

till they found vantage in the niches near the top of the granite spire, and there they clung, sobbing for breath and gazing down with white faces upon the horde of semi-wolves hurling themselves at the rock slope in an essay of climbing and tearing furiously at the stones of the food cache at the base.

"Corner grub, will you?" Hess roared at them. "Now you know what the ancient baronial geezer who cornered corn and was eaten by rats felt like when the rat swarm jumped him."

He dropped the hand he had held upraised throughout the wolf dogs' charge. "Hustle, boys," he exorted. "Bridge her sudden or the brutes'll rip that cache stone from stone."

The spruce trees crashed down. The army of men poured across them, thousands strong, and savagely the wolf dogs turned at their coming. But now the fortunes of war were reversed. The dogs outnumbered 10 to one, were pressed, kicked and beaten away from the food cache. A double wall of human bodies was made from the cache to the bridge and through this neutral zone the remainder of the men carried forth the grub bags as through a picketed lane and piled them on the farther side of the chasm.

Then, leaving the dogs still besieging the rock needle and howling about the emptied cache, the men recrossed the chasm, tumbling the bridging spruce trees to the bottom, and went back to feast in Dawson City.

For two full days they feasted, and those two full days, ere the chasm was rebridged and the huskies lured away with strips of succulent bacon, Ryan, Marlin and Simons remained on Sourdough Steeple.

Perched a thousand feet in air, by day gray bumps against the slaty Arctic sky, by night black blots against the phosphorescent aurora and the glinting stars, with nothing but grim-clutched hand and foot holds between them and the fangs of famine below, they expiated their notorious crime.

How to Remove WRINKLES
A Simple, Safe and Reliable Way

Those who have become prematurely wrinkled, whether from trouble, worry or ill health, know full well the priceless treasure they have lost. There is no need, however, of any woman injuring her chances of social and financial success by carrying around these marks of time. Neither is it necessary to be treated by an expensive beauty specialist. Right in your own home and without tiresome massage or face steaming you can remove your wrinkles and bring back to your cheeks the rosy bloom of girlhood.

Simply get a little am-o-nized cocoa from your druggist and, after washing your face with warm water, apply this as you would an ordinary cold cream; leave on for a few minutes and then wipe off with a soft, dry cloth. You will be delighted to see how it brightens up the skin, clears the complexion and erases the wrinkles, lines and crows' feet. It seems to contain just the nourishment the skin requires to keep it pink and healthy. Besides, it gives to the complexion that fresh and charming appearance which always makes a woman look young and attractive.

It is said that many women have made themselves look from 10 to 20 years younger by its use.

Actresses and society ladies, who live under a more or less social strain, have found am-o-nized cocoa indispensable in keeping their skin free from wrinkles and pink and girlish in appearance.—ADV.

Rheumatism
A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It
In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.
I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked for means of curing your rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. To End Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness and head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can be successfully treated at home by an internal remedy that in many instances has affected a complete cure after all else had failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear a watch tick have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear.

Therefore, if you know someone who is troubled with head noises or catarrh, or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand it to them, and you will have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home, and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength), about 75c worth. Take this home and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and 4 ozs. of granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

The first dose should begin to relieve the distressing head noises, headache, dullness, cloudy thinking, etc., while the hearing rapidly returns as the system is invigorated by the tonic action of the treatment. Loss of smell and mucous dropping in the back of the throat are other symptoms that show the presence of catarrhal poison, and which are often entirely overcome by this efficacious treatment. Nearly ninety per cent of all ear troubles are said to be directly caused by catarrh; therefore, there must be many people whose hearing can be restored by this simple home treatment.

Every person who is troubled with head noises, catarrhal deafness or catarrh in any form should give this prescription a trial.—ADV.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 190C Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

Nan of Music Mountain

night for a few minutes' talk?" continued the man coolly.

"Not unless you have something very important."

"What I have is more important to you than to me."

De Spain took an instant to decide. "All right," he said impatiently; "come along. Only"—— he paused to let the word sink in, ——"if this is a game you're springing"——

"I'm springing no game," returned the man evenly.

"You're liable to be one of the men hurt."

"That's fair enough."

"Come along, then."

"Mr. Jeffries' place is west of the courthouse?"

"Directly west. Now, I'll tell you just how to get here. Do you hear?"

"I'm listening."

"Leave Main street at Rancherio street. Follow Rancherio north four blocks, turn west into Grant avenue. Mr. Jeffries' house is on the corner."

"I'll find it."

"Don't come any other way. If you do, you won't see me."

"I'm not afraid of you, Mr. de Spain, and I'll come as you say. There's only one thing I should like to ask. It would be as much as my life is worth to be seen talking to you. And there are other good reasons why I shouldn't like to have it known I had talked to you. Would you mind putting out the lights before I come up—I mean, in the front of the house and in the room where we talk?"

"Not in the least. I mean—I am always willing to take a chance against any other man's. But I warn you, come prepared to take care of yourself."

"If you will do as I ask, no harm will come to anyone."

De Spain heard the receiver hung up at the other end of the wire. He signaled the operator hastily, called for his office, asked for Lefever, and, failing to get him, got hold of Bob Scott. To him he explained rapidly what had occurred, and what he wanted. "Get up to Grant and Rancherio, Bob, as quick as the Lord will let you. Come by the back streets. There's a high mulberry hedge at the southwest corner you can get behind. This chap may have been talking for somebody else. Anyway, look the man over when he passes under the arc light. If it is Sassoon or Gale Morgan, come into Jeffries' by the rear door. Wait in the kitchen for my call from the living room, or a shot. I'll arrange for your getting in."

Leaving the telephone, De Spain rejoined Nan in the living room. He told her briefly of the expected visit and explained, laughingly, that his caller had asked to have the lights out and to see him alone.

Nan, standing close to him, her own hand on his shoulder and her curling hair against his scarred cheek, asked questions about the incident because he seemed to be holding something back. She professed to be satisfied when he requested her to go up to her room and explained it was probably one of the men coming to tell about some petty thieving on the line or of a strike brewing among the drivers. He made so little of the incident that Nan walked up the stairs on De Spain's arm reassured. When he kissed her at her room door and turned down the stairs again, she leaned in the half-light over the banister, waving one hand at him and murmuring the last caution: "Be careful, Henry, won't you?"

"Dearie, I'm always careful."

"'Cause you're all I've got now," she whispered.

"You're all I've got, Nan, girl."

"I haven't got any home—or anything—just you. Don't go to the door yourself. Leave the front door open. Stand behind the end of the piano till you are awfully sure who it is."

"What a head, Nan!"

De Spain cut off the lights, threw open the front door, and in the darkness sat down on the piano stool. A heavy step on the porch, a little while later, was followed by a knock on the open door.

"Come in!" called De Spain roughly. The bulk of a large man filled and obscured for an instant the opening, then the visitor stepped carefully over the threshold. "What do you want?" asked De Spain without changing his tone. He awaited with keenness the sound of the answer.

"Is Henry de Spain here?"

The voice was not familiar to De Spain's ear. He told himself the man was unknown to him. "I am Henry de Spain," he returned without hesitation. "What do you want?"

The visitor's deliberation was reflected in his murmured speaking. "I am from Thief River," he began, and his reverberating voice was low and distinct. "I left there some time ago to do some work in Morgan's Gap. I guess you know, full as well as I do, that the general office at Medicine Bend has its own investigators, aside from the division men. I was sent in to Morgan's Gap some time ago to find out who burned the Calabasas barn."

"Railroad man, eh?"

"For about six years."

"And you report to?"——

"Kennedy."

De Spain paused in spite of his resolve to push the questions. While he listened a fresh conviction had flashed across his mind. "You called me up on the telephone one night last week," he said suddenly.

The answer came without evasion. "I did."

"I chased you across the river?"

"You did."

"You gave me a message from Nan Morgan that she never gave you."

"I did. I thought she needed you right off. She didn't know me as I rightly am. I knew what was going on. I rode into town that evening and rode out again. It was not my business, and I couldn't let it interfere with the business I'm paid to look after. That's the reason I dodged you."

"There is a chair at the left of the door; sit down. What's your name?"

The man feeling around slowly, deposited his angular bulk with care upon the little chair. "My name"—the tenseness of the dark the words seemed to carry added mystery—" is Pardaloe."

"Where from?"

"My home is southwest of the Superstition Mountains."

"You've got a brother—Joe Pardaloe?" suggested De Spain to trap him.

"No, I've got no brother. I am just plain Jim Pardaloe."

"Say what you have got to say, Jim."

"The only job I could get in the Gap was with old Duke Morgan—I've been working for him off and on, and spending the rest of my time with Gale and Dave Sassoon. There were three men in the barn-burning. Dave Sassoon put up the job."

"Where is Dave Sassoon now?"

"Dead."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean what I say."

Both men were silent for a moment.

"Yesterday morning's fight?" asked De Spain reluctantly.

"Yes, sir."

"How did he happen to catch us on El Capitan?"

"He saw a fire on Music Mountain and watched the lower end of the Gap all night. Sassoon was a wide-awake man."

"Well, I'm sorry, Pardaloe," continued De Spain, after a moment. "Nobody could call it my fault. It was either he or I—or the life of a woman who never harmed a hair of his head, and a woman I'm bound to protect. He was running when he was hit. If he had got to cover again there was nothing to stop him from picking both of us off. I shot low—most of the lead must have gone into the ground."

"He was hit in the head."

De Spain was silent.

"It was a soft-nose bullet," continued Pardaloe.

Again there was a pause. "I'll tell you about that, too, Pardaloe," De Spain went on collectedly. "I lost my rifle before that man opened fire on us. Nan happened to have her rifle with her—if she hadn't, he'd 've dropped one or both of us off El Capitan. We were pinned against the wall like a couple of targets. If there were soft-nose bullets in her rifle it's because she uses them on game—bobcats and mountain lions. I never thought of it till this minute. That is it."

"What I came up to tell you has to do with Dave Sassoon. From what happened today in the Gap I thought you ought to know it now. Gale and Duke quarreled yesterday over the way things turned out; they were pretty bitter. This afternoon Gale took it up again with his uncle, and it ended in Duke's driving him clean out of the Gap."

"Where has he gone?"

"Nobody knows yet. Ed Wickwire told me once that your father was shot from ambush a good many years ago. It was north of Medicine Bend, on a ranch near the Peace River; that you never found out who killed him, and that one reason why you came up into this country was to keep an eye out for a clew."

"What about it," asked De Spain, his tone hardening.

"I was riding home one night about a month ago from Calabasas with Sassoon. He'd been drinking. I let him do the talking. He began cussing you out, and talked pretty hard about what you'd done, and what he'd done, and what he was going to do"——. Nothing, it seemed, would hurry the story. "Finally Sassoon says: 'That hound don't know yet who got his dad. It was Duke Morgan; that's who got him. I was with Duke when he turned the trick. We rode down to De Spain's ranch one night to look up a rustler.' That," concluded Pardaloe, "was all Sassoon would say."

He stopped. He seemed to wait. There was no word of answer, none of comment from the man sitting near him. But, for one, at least, who heard the passionless, monotonous recital of a murder of the long ago, there followed a silence as relentless as fate, a silence shrouded in the mystery of the darkness and striking despair into two hearts—a silence more fearful than any word.

Pardaloe shuffled his feet. He coughed, but he evoked no response. "I thought you was entitled to know," he said finally, "now that Sassoon will never talk any more."

De Spain moistened his lips. When he spoke his voice was cracked and harsh, as if with what he had heard he had suddenly grown old.

"You are right, Pardaloe. I thank you. I—when I—in the morning. Pardaloe, for the present, go back to the Gap. I will talk with Wickwire—tomorrow."

"Good night, Mr. de Spain."

"Good night, Pardaloe."

Bending forward, limp, in his chair, supporting his head vacantly on his hands, trying to think and fearing to think, De Spain heard Pardaloe's measured tread on the descending steps, and listened mechanically to the retreating echoes of his footsteps down the shaded street. Minute after minute passed. De Spain made no move. A step so light that it could only have been the step of a delicate girlhood, a step free as the footfall of youth, poised as the tread of womanhood and beauty, came down the stairs. Slight as she was, and silent as he was, she walked straight to him in the darkness, and, sinking between his feet, wound her hands through his two arms. "I heard everything, Henry," she murmured, looking up. An involuntary start of protest was his only response. "I was afraid of a plot against you. I stayed at the head of the stairs. Henry, I told you long ago some dreadful thing would come between us—something not our fault. And now it comes to dash our cup of happiness when it is filling. Something told me, Henry, it would come tonight—some bad news, some horror laid up against us out of a past that neither you nor I are to blame for. In all my sorrow I am sorriest, Henry, for you. Why did I ever cross your path to make you unhappy when blood lay between your people and mine? My wretched uncle! I never dreamed he had murder on his soul—and of all others, that murder! I knew he did wrong—I knew some of his associates were criminals. But he has been a father and mother to me since I could creep—I never knew any father or mother."

She stopped, hoping perhaps he would say some little word, that he would even pat her head, or press her hand, but he sat like one stunned. "If it could have been anything but this!" she pleaded, low and sorrowfully. "Oh, why did you not listen to me before we were engulfed! My dear Henry! You who've given me all the happiness I have ever had—that the blood of my own should come against you and yours!" The emotion she struggled with, and fought back with all the strength of her nature, rose in a resistless tide that swept her on, in the face of his ominous silence, to despair. She clasped her hands in silent misery, losing hope with every moment of his stoniness that she could move him to restraint or pity toward her wretched foster-father. She recalled the merciless words he had spoken on the mountain when he told her of his father's death. Her tortured imagination pictured the horror of the sequel, in which the son of the murdered man should meet him who had taken his father's life. The fate of it, the hopelessness of escape from its awful consequence, overcame her. Her breath, no longer controlled, came brokenly, and her voice trembled.

"You have been very kind to me, Henry—you've been the only man I've ever known that always, everywhere, thought of me first. I told you I didn't deserve it, I wasn't worthy of it"——

His hands slipped silently over her hands. He gathered her close into his arms, and his tears fell on her upturned face.

Kitchener's Mob

which would certainly not have been fatal could it have received early attention.

We knew that there must be many wounded still alive in the tall grass between our lines. We knew that many were dying who might be saved. The Red Cross Corps made nightly searches for them, but the difficulties to be overcome were great. The volume of fire increased tremendously at night. Furthermore, there was a wide area to be searched, and in the darkness men lying unconscious, or too weak from loss of blood to groan or shout, were discovered only by accident.

Tommy Atkins isn't an advocate of "peace at any price," but the sight of awful and needless suffering invariably moved him to declare himself emphatically against the inhuman practices in war of so-called Christian nations.

"Christian nations!" he would say scornfully. "If this 'ere is a sample o' Christianity, I'll tyke me chances down below w'en I gets knocked out." His comrades greeted such outbursts with hearty approval.

"I'm with you there, mate! 'Ell won't be such a dusty old place if all the Christians go upstairs."

"They ain't no God 'avin' anything to do with this war, I'm telling you! All the religious blokes in England an' France an' Germany ain't a-go'n' to pray 'Im into it!"

I am not in a position to speak for Hans and Fritz, who faced us from the other side of No-Man's-Land; but as for Tommy, it seemed to me that he had a higher opinion of the Deity than many of his better-educated countrymen at home.

By the end of the month we had seen more of suffering and death than it is good for men to see in a lifetime. There were attacks and counter attacks, hand-to-hand fights in communication trenches with bombs and bayonets, heavy bombardments, nightly burial parties. Tommy Atkins looked like a beast. His clothing was a hardened-mud casing; his body was the color of the sticky Flanders clay in which he lived; but his soul was clean and fine. I saw him rescuing wounded comrades, tending them in the trenches, encouraging them and heartening them when he himself was discouraged and sick at heart.

"You're a-go'n' 'ome, 'Arry! Blimy! think o' that! Back to old Blightey w'ile the rest of us 'as got to stick it out 'ere! Don't I wish I was you! Not 'arf!"

"You ain't bad 'urt! Strike me pink! You'll be as keen as a w'istle in a couple o' months. An' 'ere! Christmas in Blightey, son! S'y! I'll tyke yer busted shoulder if you'll give me the chanct!"

"They ain't nothin' they can't do fer you back at the base 'ospital. 'Member 'ow they fixed old Ginger up? You ain't caught it 'arf as bad!"

In England, before I knew him for the man he is, I said, "How am I to endure living with him?" And now I am thinking, how am I to endure living without him; without the visible example of his unselfish devotion to his fellows? There were a few cowards and shirkers who failed to live up to the standard set by their comrades. I remember the man of 35 or 40 who lay whimpering in the trench when there was unpleasant work to be done, while boys half his age kicked him in a vain attempt to waken him to a sense of duty; but instances of this kind were rare. There were not enough of them to serve as a foil to the shining deeds which were of daily and hourly occurrence.

Tommy is sick of the war—dead sick of it. He is weary of the interminable procession of comfortless nights and days. He is weary of the sight of maimed and bleeding men—of the awful suspense of waiting for death. In the words of his pathetic little song, he does "want to go 'ome." But there is that within him which says, "Hold on!" He is a compound of cheery optimism and grim tenacity which makes him an incomparable fighting man.

The intimate picture of him which lingers most willingly in my mind is that which I carried with me from the trenches on the dreary November evening shortly before I bade him good-by. It had been raining and sleeting for a week. The trenches were knee-deep in water, in some places waist-deep, for the ground was as level as a floor and there was no possibility of drainage. We were wet through and our legs were numb with the cold. Near our gun position there was a hole in the floor of the trench where the water had collected in a deep pool. A bridge of boards had been built around one side of this, but in the darkness a passer-by slipped and fell into the icy water nearly up to his arm-pits.

"Now, then, matey!" said an exasperating voice, "bathin' in our private pool without a permit?"

And another. "'Ere son! This ain't a swimmin' bawth! That's our tea water yer a-standin' in!"

The Tommy in the pool must have been nearly frozen, but for a moment he made no attempt to get out.

"One o' you fetch me a bit o' soap, will you?" he said coaxingly. "You ain't a-go'n' to talk about tea water to a bloke wot ain't 'ad a bawth in seven weeks?"

It is men of this stamp who have the fortunes of England in their keeping. And they are called, "The Boys of the Bulldog Breed."

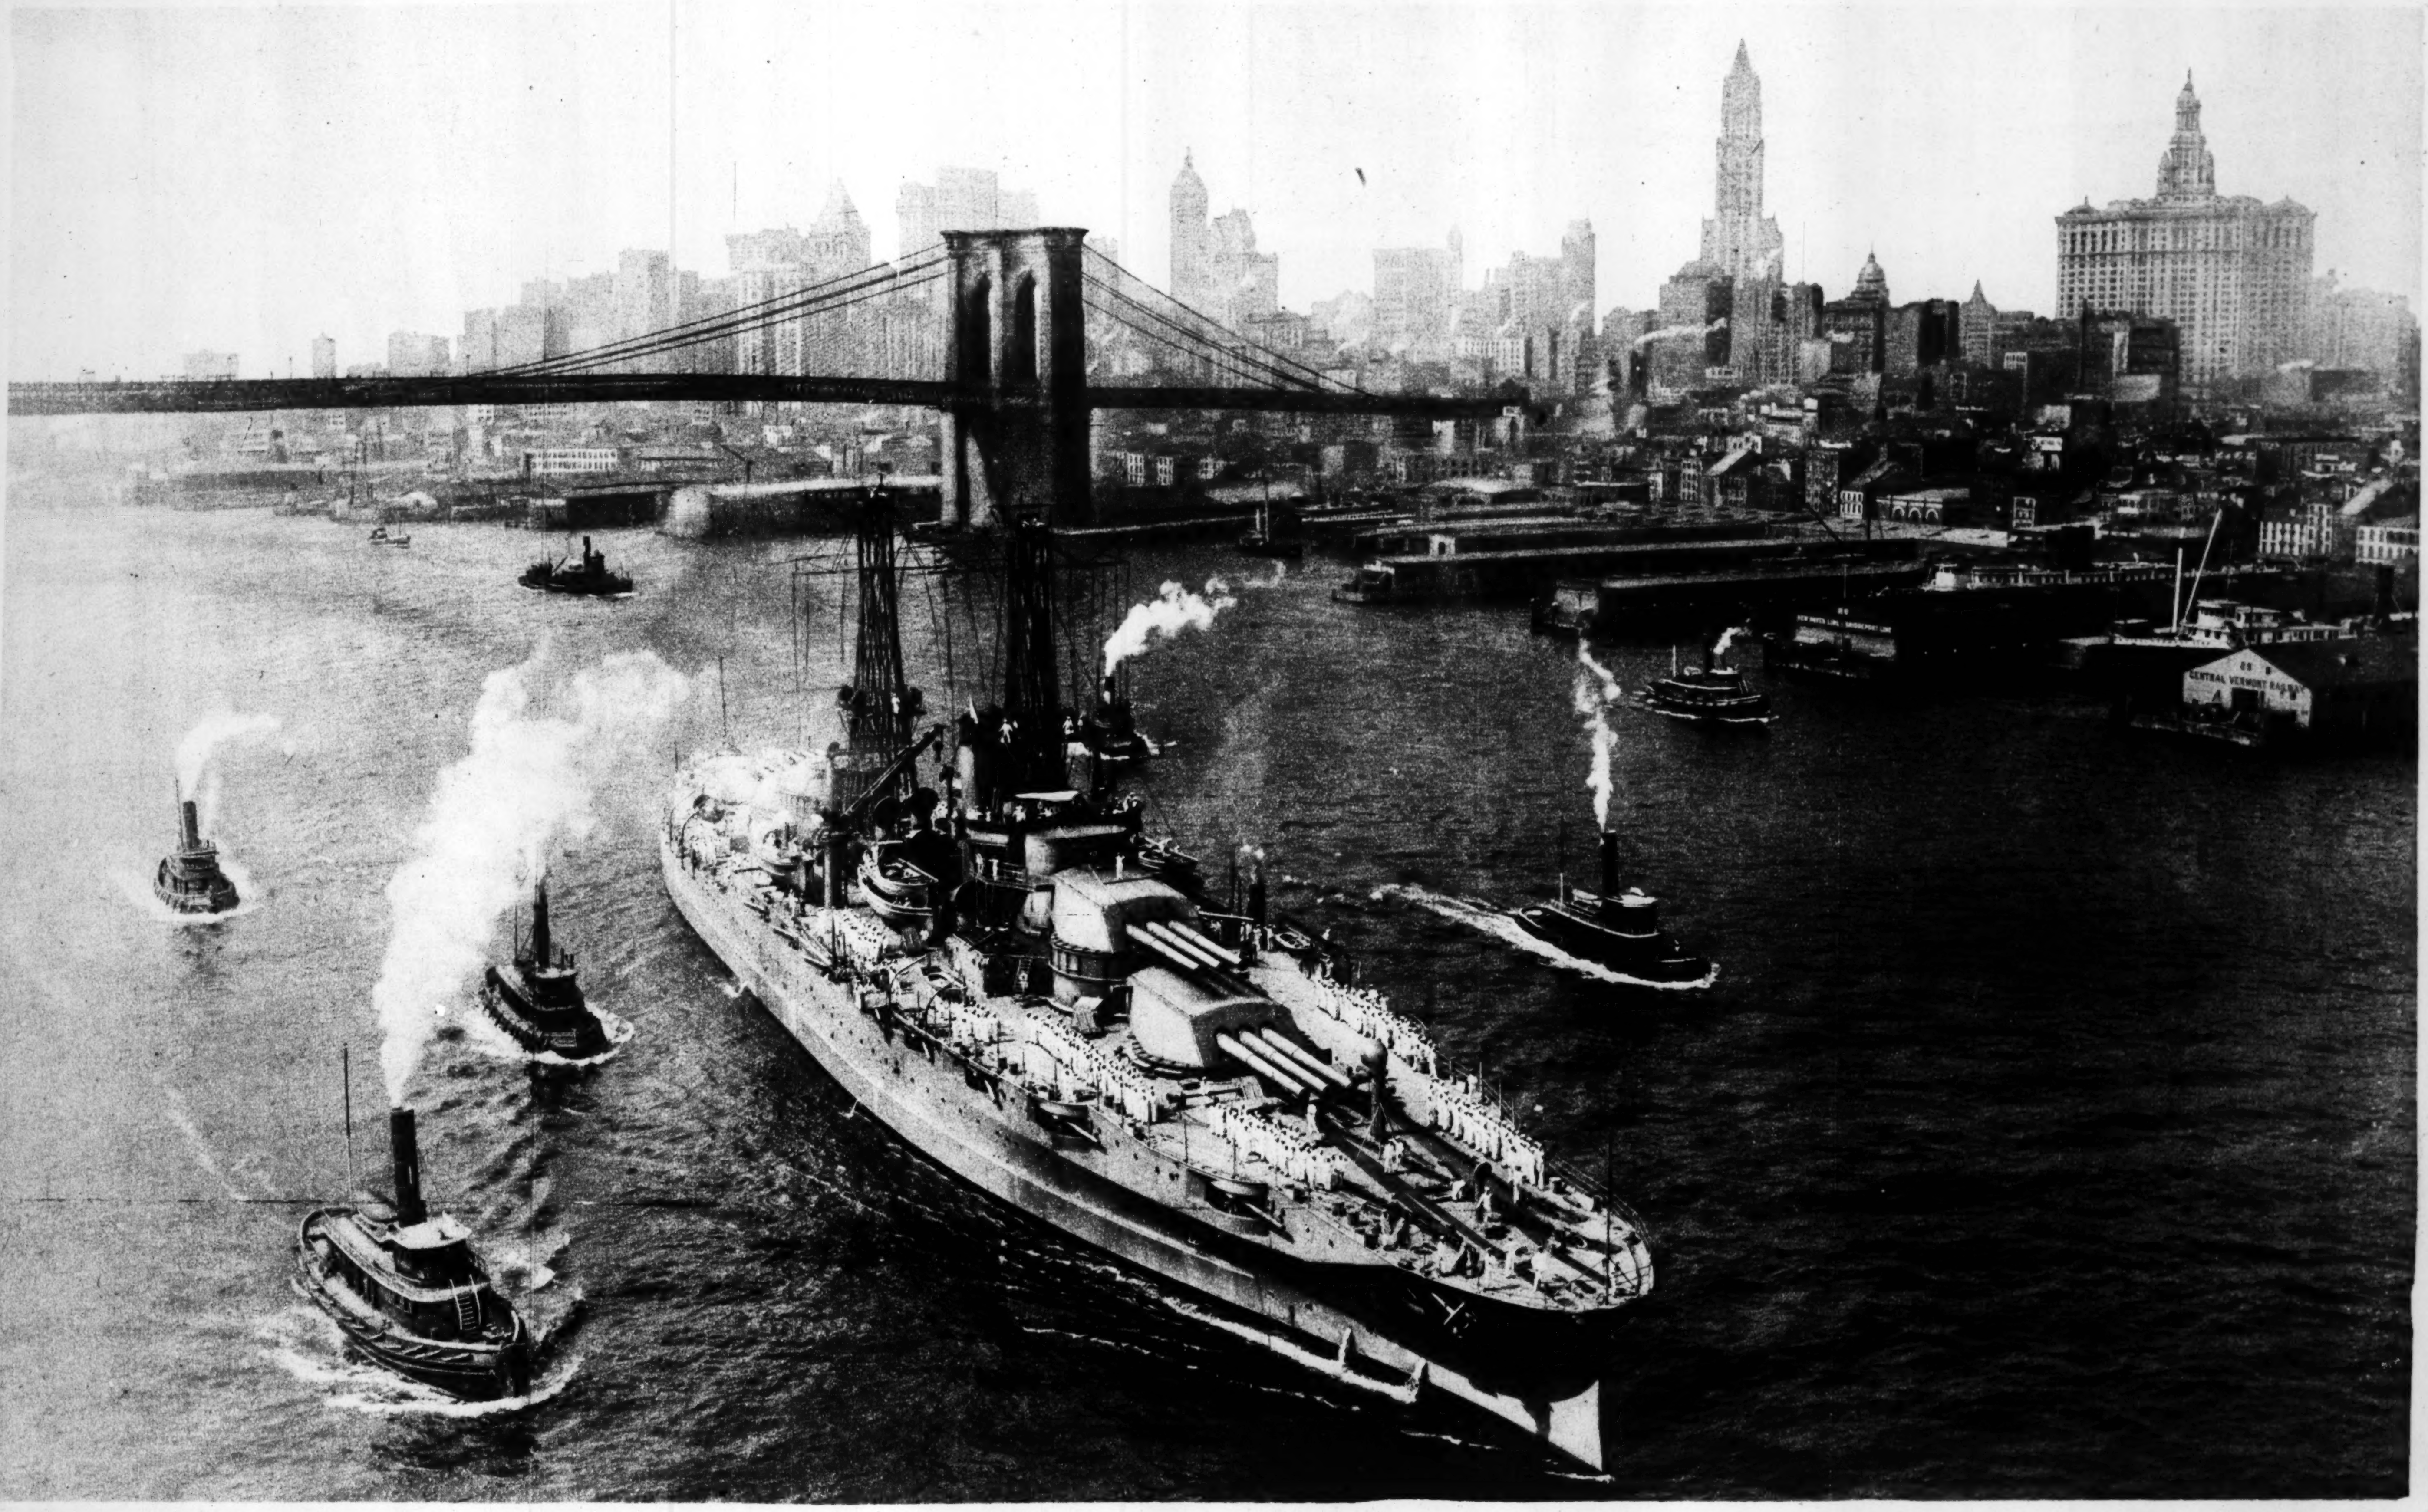
ROTOGRAVURE
PICTURE SECTION

SAFETY and PERIL UPON THE SEA; TWO REMARKABLE PHOTOGRAPHS.



This shows the newest United States super-dreadnaught Pennsylvania. It was taken after she passed under Brooklyn Bridge on her way down the East River. Naval experts have declared that she is the greatest fighting ship afloat, having a displacement of 31,400 tons, 3,900 tons more than that of the famous British super-dreadnaught Queen Elizabeth. Her main battery consists of twelve 14-inch guns, each having a range of 14 miles; her speed is 21 knots an hour, she carries a complement of 865 men and cost $15,000,000. © E. MULLER.

Snapshot showing the burning of the Pacific liner Congress, one of the most palatial steamers of the Pacific trade, off Coos Bay, Oregon, Sept. 14. The rescue of the 428 persons on board forms a thrilling chapter in the history of ocean travel. Many had narrow escapes but no one was lost or even injured.
